UNLICENSED DRIVERS SUBJECT TO ARREST

Every person who operates a motor vehicle upon the state highways after March 1 without having in his possession a drivers license, will be guilty of a misdemeanor, and subject to fine or imprisonment, under Minnesota's new drivers license law.

The only persons exempted are aperators of road machinery, farm tractors temporarily upon the state highways, members of the Army, Navy or Marine corps operating an official vehicle, or licensed chauffeurs.

Applications for licenses are received by the clerks of the district court, and immediate application should be made to insure every driver of a license hy March 1.

FARM BUREAU GATE SIGNS ARE BEING DISTRIBUTED

Thousands of membership cards and gate signs are being distributed throughout the state this week by tbs Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation. Each member of the state and national organization is given a pocket membership card and 6x14 inch gate sign, tbe latter to be posted at ths roadside.

Farmers displaying the current year's gate sign are entitled to tbe Farm Bureau's Protective Service, which was established years ago to curb farm thievery. A considerable number of thieves have been sent to prison in the past six months as a result of the activities of Farm Bureau detectives working in conjuntion with local peace officers.

Members who do not post the signs are not entitled to the protective service, because the sign serves as a warning to thieves that a state-wide detective service has been engaged to protect members and the danger of theft is thus lessend, Farm Bureau officials explain.

During the past year, five perpetrators of stock frauds have been brought to justice by the Securties Commission. In each instance the commission had gathered such irrefutable evidence that the "Wildcatters" pleaded guilty. The latest offender was returned from California last week and pleaded guilty in Hennepin district court.

Most automobile accidents occur between 3 and 6 p. m., the annual report of the State Highway Patrol to Commissioner N. W. Elsberg reveals. Of 905 accidents in 1933, of which 59 were fatal, 217 occured between the hours mentioned. Second on the list were 178 accidents between 6 and 9 p.m. and third was 125 accidents between noon and 3 p.m. The safest time of the day is between 6 and 9 a. m., only 49 accidents occured between these hours in 1933. Contrary to general belief, most accidents do not occur at intersections, only 204 being listed at intersections last year as compared to 670 elsewhere on highways, 14 on bridges, eight at railroad crossings and nine at places not listed by patrol men.

Governor Olson's plan of speading CWA work by replacement rather than by staggering fill give an even break to those who so far have failed to get work. They will get full time just as their predecessors did. It is an equitable arrangement and justifies the faith of the Bronson "Budget" which recently said editorially to its readers "If you are in real need and have not been given help, don't carry a grouch because your neighbor has received help. Your turn may be next, and there's nothing gained by condemnation."

* * * *

Contrary to widespread belief, Governor Olson has no jurisdiction whatsoever in the hiring or retaining of C. W.A. workers in Minnesota. This is wholly in the hands of the Federal Re-employment Service, the state head of which has been appointed by Washington. The Minnesota Civil Works Administration, of the Governor is the head, is confined to approving projects for civil works. Complaints have been flooding the Governor's office to the effect that family, personal and political factors have played an important part in the dispensing of CWA jobs. "I'll drum any Farmer-Laborite playing politics with the CWA out the party," Governor Olson said. Similar action has been promised by Democratic leaders at Washington. There must be no preference shown members of any party in relief matters, according to mandates by the President and Governor.

More than 35,000 men and women ar now enrolled in adult education classes throughout Minnesota under the emergency education program, Dr. Harod Benjamin, Director of Unemployed, announces. In addition, approximately 1,000 college students have been enolled in 22 colleges and universities throughout the state as part of the relief plan. These students who are working their way through schools, receive $25 a month and in return do odd jobs about the schools, including library, laboratory, stenographic and clerical work.

Women are coming the fore in the affairs of state of Minnesota under the present regime. Three recent appointments by Governor Olson have placed women in high office. Mrs. A. LeSueur, Minneapolis, and Miss Florence Rood, St. Paul, were appointed to the State Board of Education, while Dr. Helen Hughes Hielscher, Mankato, has been named to the State Board of Health. This is the first time two women have ever served simultaneously on the Board of Education, and likewise it is the first time a woman has been a member of the Board of Health.

In a recent address, Commissioner of Banks, Elmer Benson said: "It has never been possible to entrust money to banks with such absolute confidence as it has been since January 1, 1934. This is because of the operation of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the importance of which cannot be overestimated. Banking has cleaned house and has readjusted itself. Confidence in the aafty of banks must be restored and the Federal Deposit Insirance plan will bring this about."

In appealing to the banks to forego charging of exchange on CWA checks, Governor Olson said: "CWA work is in the nature of relief work and is an important part of the national recovery program. Inasmuch as that is so, we feel that the charge, even though it may amount to quite a sum in the aggregate, should be abolished. Bankers should consider that their share in the program will ultimately be of great benefit to them."

'PROWLERS' DRUB E. GRAND FORKS FRIDAY EVENING

Take on a strong Bemidji Quint At Auditorium Next Fri. Feb. 23, 8 P. M.

The locals added two more victims to their growing list since the last issue. One of these East Grand Forks whom the "Prowlers" defeated last Friday evening by a score of 28 to 18; the other was Plummer whom the locals swamped 50 to 12. "Buzz' Battleson was high score man for the locals against Crookston. Because of a cold 'Snort" Langseth was kopt out of the games.

A very exciting battle looms up Friday February 23, when the Prowlers tangle with the strong Bemidji aggregation. As it is probably too well remembered that it was the Bemidji quint that blasted the title hopes of the Prowlers last year. Bemidji has an enviable record already this year and the Prowlers are nothing to be scoffed at either it is almost certain to be an epic when these two Regional Title contenders of last year meet on the "New Battlefield," the new auditorium this Friday. The Prowlers lead in this district in all three classes A, B, and C with five wins and one lost for a percentage of 833. Bemidji leads in its district with no losses and it has beaten the strong Brainard team which had title aspirations until it was so badly beaten by the team that the locals meet Friday.

Jr. Hockey Play-Off Feb. 22, 24 and 25

The Junior Hockey League play-off will be held this week with the Lambert Pills on top of the heap. The Times sextet will play the DeCremers team Thursday, February 22 at 7:30 p. m.; Saturday evening at 7:30 the winner of the DeCreamer-Times will play the Kelly Shamrocks. The final game will be played Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in which the winner of Saturday's fracas will play the Lambert Pills. These games have proved to be very exciting and full of thrills in the past and no one will be sorry if they turn out to boost for these fast, hardskating youngsters.

14 CAR MODELS TO EXHIBIT AT THE AUTO SHOW

Florence Reinmuths Road Show "Rythm Revue", 15 Girls To be Presented

Arrangements are nearly completed for the biggest and best Auto Show ever to be presented in Thief River Falls, according to an announcement by Mr. Paulson. This will be the Seventh Annual Auto Show to be presented in this city by the American Legion. George Hardy's "Purple Aces." the orchestra which proved so popular at the auto show here four years ago, is scheduled to appear here again this year The Purple Aces are an eight piece orchestra from Minneapolis. This year's show will have n greater variety than any preceeing event of this kind and the sponsors are doing everything in their power to make it the biggest attraction in the northwest, and according to reports, that is just what they are doing..

It is further announced that the "Rythm Revue," the major show of Florence E. Reinmuth, with a cast of fifteen members which features Genivive Naegele, Star of "Blossom Time" as the Prima Donna. This show has a chorus of eight girls who sing and dance and are able to do forty different specialty numbers. They carry eleven different changes of costumes.

Barker and Lyons, vaudeville artists, reputed to be one of the best teams in the northwest. will also be here to entertain the patrons. The "Skating McGowlans," of which team Mr. McGowlan, one time World Roller Skating champion, has also been booked. Another featured number is Gail Brencel and her trained dogs.

The program for Thursday, March 22, will consist of a vaudeville and dance. On Friday the 23. the Style Show and a vaudeville. H. M. Olson, who is in charge of the Style Show, has just returned from Chicago with some new ideas on this class of exposition which will be used. On the final night of the show there will be two hours and fifteen minutes of vaudeville following which there will be a dance. After the dance a new Plymouth car will be given away.

Mr. Paulson states that at the present time he believes all the local auto dealers will exhibit at the show which means that approximately 14 different makes of cars will be on display. He also stotes that 14 different firms have announced their intensions of displaying electrical equipment and appliances of all kinds.

The Main floor of the Auditorium will be used for the displaying of the cars and the accessories; all the other exhibits will be on display in the Commercial Club rooms.

The American Legion Audiliary will have charge of the refreshment stands and also the check-room.

New Pharmacy Opening Brings Over 5,000 People

The Thief River Pharmacy enjoyed a land office business on their opening day, last Saturday. It is estimated almost 5,000 people were in the store at one time or another during the day. Eggs were holding the high honora at this gala opening, as they were accepted as a medium of exchange instead of the customary silver and paper units. One egg bought one ice-cream cone, two eggs a chocolate Sunday and three eggs bought a malted milk.

The 'kids' took full advantage of the situation and 342 dozen eggs were taken in, Mr. Ekeren said.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hoyle of MacIntosh were callers in this city aturday.

Berve; the present city attorney, Theodore Quale; the contractor, B. Norby; the architect, Ray Gauger and the city clerk, P. G. Pederson. These men will occupy seats of honor on the stage during the program. The Thief River Municipal Band will lead the procession and will furnish the music, for the program with the cooperation of the high school mixed chorus.

First on the program will be "America" played by the band and sung by the audience. Invocation will be given by Father A. I. Merth.

Rev. E. L. Tungseth will give the presentation address which will be followed by two songs by the high school mixed chorus, "Life of Life," by Hall, end "Cherubim Song" (No. 7), Bortnyansky, directed by Miss Erma Smungen. The dedication address will follow and will be given by the assistant county attorney of Hennepin county, Mr. Arthur Markve. The Thief River Falls municipal band will then play a selection, "The Stars and Stripes Forever," by Sousa. The band and the audience will unite in the national anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner," followed by benediction by Rev. A. E. Cooke.

The auxiliary drum corps will appear Monday night at 10:30 p.m.. and also on Thursday at 7:30 p.m., at band concert.

On Tuesday, the Amphion Chorus will appear in concert at the auditorium. On Friday, March 2, the high school basket ball team will play Grand Forks Central basket ball team which will be the final occurrence on the program of dedication week.

Members of Oratorio Attend Rehearsals

The tentative date for the rendition of Hayden's Oratorio "Creation" is March 18 at the auditorium. The orchestra is complete and from now on will do active work. according to Dr. Vistaunet, director. All the singers must attend every rehearsal, general as well as private, without fail in order that the oratorio may receive the proper finish. Dr. Viataunet says as all soloists will be local people it is necessary that they attend as often as possible in order to finish off with the orchestra.

Rev. Lorenz of Mavic was a caller between trains in this city, Wednesday.

DEBT ADJUSTING COMMITTEE HELD MEET SATURDAY

Anton Named Chairman of the Committee Appointed By Gov. Olsou

Gov. Floyd B. Olson has recently appointed a debt adjusting committee for Pennington county. The committee held its organization meeting last Saturday in this city.

The officers elected were: Hans Anton, chairman; Harry Woolson, vice-chairman; George Werstlein, secretary; and the directors named were Reinold Johnson and Alfred Longren.

The committee will attempt to orbitrate between debtors and creditors and to adjust the debt according to the ability of the debtor to pay. Chairman Anton states that this work will be carried on in conjunction with the federal government.

Land O' Lakes Installing New 52,000 Egg, Electric Heated Smith Incubator

The Land O' Lakes creamery of this city has installed a 52,600 egg Smith electric incubator at the local plant, being the only incubator of its kind in the northern part of the United States.

The electrically heated, electrically controlled incubator has, as its most noteworthy features, the necessary mechanical features to permit hatching of eggs and the aetting of new batches at the same time. This is made possible by a series of racks or trays in the machine which are movable so the eggs can be moved about easily to keep them at the best possible temperature for the particular period of incubation that they are in.

Another of its features is that it permits a man to enter and walk about freely thus making it possible for the eggs to receive the best of care during the various stoges of hatching.

A feature which does away with all chances of guess work while the egga are being incubated is a very sensitive thermostat known as a "thermometer controller." The controller operates an electric rheostat which controls the heat. Cooling coils and water sprays are provided for use on hot days or to coanteract the heat given off during the hatching of the chicks. A very accurata thermometer inside the machine gives correct temperature reading, and a clock-operated recording thermometer keeps a continuoua record af the temperature at all times.

In order to operato this incubatar at full capacity it is necessary to have 5,000 hens to supply the eggs, according to C. C. Brahs, who has been retained to manage the hatching here. Mr. Brahs has been field man for the Smith incubator people for several years, and comes here recommended as a hatchery expert.

During incubation there are two perioda when the death rate of the chicks in the ahell is greatly increased, Mr. Brahs says. Under normal conditions twelve per cent of the deaths will occur on the fourth day, and aixty per cent will occur on the eighteenth and nineteenth days. The other twenty-eight per cent will be distributed over the remaining days. The method of handling the eggs raises or lowers the mortality rate appreciably. The reason for the high death rate on the 18 and 19th days is that the units af heat developed by the embryonic chick is sharply decreaaed these days. By a careful regulation of temperature, which is possible with the Smith incubator, this death rate is greatly decreased, Mr. Brahs stated.

The machine wil be put to work on its first hatch shortly after March 1st.

Only Short Time Left to Get Names of Cripples

Miss Lucie Patnode again urgently requests that all cripples who have not yet gotten in touch either with her or with the Pennington County Superintendent of Schools, do so at once. Six weeks was given to the work of organizing these groups and as there is only about two weeks of this time left it is advisable to get immediate action. Miss Patnode will be in Thief River Falls sometime in the near future to register those who come under this classification.

Marshall Co. Farmer Laborites Hold Meet

At the Marshall County Famer-Labro convention held at Warren February 15, the felowing delegates were chosen to the state convention, G. A. Sustod of Viking, Richard Rice of Alvarado, Carl Olson of Argyle, Ignatz Zakezwski of Strandquist. and P. B. Malberg of Steiner.

Richard Rice was endorsed for state senator while E. M. Evans of Middle River was indorsed for representative to run against Mr. Greene, incumbent. Senator George Lommen of Eveleth gave the main address which was followed by a talk by Senator Buckler of Crookston.

The next regular meeting will be held in Middle River March 9, at two o'clock in the afternoon, according to Richard Rice Secretary of the Farmer-Labor association of Marshall county.

MUD LAKE TO BE MADE A NESTING PLACE FOR DUCKS

$180,000 to be Spent Restoring 30,000 Acre Area

Mud Lake is one of twenty areas that have been recommended by the state game and fish division of the conservation department for waterfowl nesting grounds under President Roosevelt's national agricultural land retirement program. This fact was made public by Erling Swenson, state conservation commissioner in a speech before the Moorbead Rod and gun club recently.

While declaring that probably only a half dozen sites will be approved and purchased with the $750,000 allotted to Minnesota, Swenson said the department considers most important the proposed Mud lake area of 30,000 acres in Marshall county, which may cost approximatly $180,000, and expressed belief it will head the list of areas selected.

The lists of projects, listing first the lake or stream and following that, the county, follows:

Roseau, Marvin and Twin in Roseau and Kittson; Mud Lake in Marshall; Red Lake river marsbes in Pennington and Red Lake; Beltrami marshes in Polk; Egg lakes in Becker upper and lower Rice in Clearwater; Poposki lake in Beltrami; Craigville marshes in Itasca; Big Rice and Mud lakes, Boy river in Cass; Boot lake in Aitkin; Portage, Perch, Kettle and Dead Fish in Carlton; Ogechie and Shakopee in Mille Lacs; Rice and Skunk in Morrison; Traverse lake in Traverse; Spellman, Gullickson in Yellow Medicine; Talcot, Berry lakes, Des Moines river in Cottonwood; Wallnut, Rice gronp in Faribault; Bear lake in Freeborn; Sand Prairie in Wabasha; Prairie Island in Dakota and Wabasra; Praire Island in Dakota-Goodhue.

Neset Heads Drive For Boy Scout Funds

A drive is being made to raise funds for Boy Scont activities in this city, according to Olaf Neset in charge of finance for the local troups.

These funds are very necessary at this time as they are needed to keep the local troaps as members of the regional group. Money is also needed to build a proposed Boy Scout cabin. Mr. Neset asserts that all cooperation will be appreciated very much by both himself and membera of the local scout committee.

Don Snyder Sneeds Arnie Solem as District Manager

Don Snyder, formerly assistant to Arnie Salam, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Salem as district manager of district number one according to an announcement from Dreng Bjornaraa, state director of the NRS. Mr. Solem has been transferred to St. Paul, and will be assistant to Dreng Bjornaraa who in turn succeeds Mr. Hollenbeck as state head of the NRS.

The National Reemployment Service for Pennington county now has a total registration of approximately 1900 persons taken from every occupational classification. There are plasterers, carpenters, steel workers, plumbers, electricians, blacksmiths, teachers, cooks, skilled office help, tree surgeons, chimney aweeps, and surveyora. All in all it aeems that we have quite a cosmopolitan gronp of workers here and should have to hire very little if any outside help.

F-L TOWNSHIP CAUCUSES TO BE HELD MARCH 13

All Precincts Must Select Two Delegates to Attend County Meet

The official call for precinct caucuses was issued by the executive committee of the Pennington County Farmer-Labor association this week. The caucuses are to be held on March 13th, the date of the township elections. According to the call all Farmer-Laborites are requested ta hold their caucusses right after the town meetings are completed. Every regular dues paying member in a Farmer-Labor club are automatically accredited to the county convention. All townships which have no regular Farmer-Labor club are entitled to two delegates to the convention chosen at the caucus. Only dues paying members can attend the state convention as delegates according to the rules laid down by the state central committee this year.

The county committee has sent blanks to all township chairmen upon which the names of the delegates selected in caucus must be entered and returned to the county secretary, H. O. Berve.

The county convention will be held in this city on Tuesday March 27. Delegates to represent this county at the state convention, the 65th legislative district conveation and the ninth congressional district convention will be selected at this meeting. A chairman, a secretary-treasurer and members of the county committee to serve for the next two years will also be selected at this convention.

Indications are that the campaign this year will be the most hotly contested in several decades, Mr. Berve said, and he urges all Farmer-Laborites to get busy now, by jaining the organization and atteading the meetings. that they can be informed on the trend of events politically.

Ole O. Sageng Files For Congress Ninth District

Ole O. Sageng of Dalton, announced himself as a candidate for tha Republican nomination for Congressman from the Ninth district, last week.

Mr. Sageng was independent candidate for this office in 1908 running against Halvor Steenerson. His campaign slogan. "The man behind the plow," is probably still remembered by some of the older voters. He served as chairman of the Rural Credit board from 1925 to 1931, being appointed to that office by Governor Christianson.

In his statement to the voters ha lays much of our farm distress to tha Underwood tariff act passed in 1913. He pledges himself to work for measures to improve the earning power of our people, and believes that American products should be protected with higher tariffs to protect the American market for American products. He concludes his statement by saying, "I shall give to tha administration, whenever in good conscience I can do so, that full measure of support which in critical times is due to the chief executive of the nation.

SKILLED BRIDGE WORKERS SHOULD RE-REGISTER NOW

Work to Start Soon After the Contract For Bridge Is Awarded

Bids will be received for the construction of the bridge to be built at an early date. Mr. Davidson asks that all akilled bridge workers register at the office soon if they are interested in getting work on this job. Those that are already registered should come to the office and check their registration. Complete information from bridge workers is deairable as it will increase their chances of getting work through this office. Mr. Davidson further announces that all regiatrations must be renewed each month. If registration cards are not renewed it is assumed that the applicant is privately employed and is not interested in a placement from the National Reemployment service. Cards that are not renewed are placed in an inactive file which is not consulted in the selection of men for placement.

From time to time the National Reemployment Service has received requests for farm hands. All thosa interested in being placed on farms for the summer come in and ask that a notation to that effect be placed on their cards, Mr. Davidson says.

Olaf and Melvin Tayland of Mavie were here for a short visit, returning again to International Falls where they are hauling pulpwood.

Capitol News Review

by A. I. Harris

Governor Olson's program to combat kidnapping and banditry will have two immediate and beneficial results. First of all it will effect co-operstion of sll enforcement agencies in the state and co-ordination of all law enforcement activities. This fills a long time need, as no campaign to apprehend criminals can be successful if the chase ends at municipal or county boundry lines. The other result will be the immediate erection, through CWA funds, of a central radio broadcasting station. This will make is possible to flash information of crimes committed and other necessary data to all parts of the state, bringing all enforcement agencies into immediate action.

Because of the ruling of Ramsey County District court holding the state income tax unconstitutional, the Minnesota Tax Commission has extended the payment period for one month. The case bas been appealed to the Minnesota Supreme court, and an early decision is expected. The principle of an income tax hss been held to be constitutional by the United States Supreme court. Tax experts throughout the world hold that the income tax, properly graduated is the most equable and scientific tox known, as it puts the burden of government costs upon those who can best afford to pay. The Minnesota tax, passed by the last Legislature, is a replacement tax, to relieve the burden from the farmer and small home owner.

Time has justified the position of the Minnesota Conservation Department with reference to Lake Traverse on the South Dakota boundry. A recent survey has disclosed that all fish life remaining in the lake has become extinct either through freezing or smothering out. Minnesota removed nearly a half millioa pounds of fish to feed needy people or were sold in eastern markets. Sonth Dakota resorted to promiscuous fishing with small success.

Cities, towns and villages have an opportunity to clean up the general appearance of their communities with the financial assistance of the CWA, according to a Washington ruling which says: "demolition of useless property is a proper activity for C. W. A. projects." Both public and private buildings can be so razed. In the case of private property all that is necessary is that the owner, by exchange of letter, give title to building and salvaged materials to the CWA. This little practical CWA idea docs more than just clear away evesores and fire-traps: it provides materials for the improvement of other property and prepares the way for future building.

The Survey being conducted undar the direction of tha State Board of Control to determine the extent of the old age pension problem in Minnesota will undoubtedly lead to a uniform handling of this type of relief. Now that old aga pensions have been made mandatory in every county in the state a coherent system for the whole state must inevitably follow if inequalities are to be ironed out. Old age pensions are properly the concern of the state as a whole.

Terming Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace an "editorial room philosopher," Governor Olson in a recent St. Paul speech said: "Forces of the federal government should have worked with the cooperative leaders but, instead, they have not only ignored them but have maligned them." Minnesota with more than 6,000 cooperative units is the greatest cooperative state in the union both in number and business transacted.

TWIN CITY JOBBERS REPORT MORE EXTENSIVE BUYING

The greatest Twin City market week since the boom days of 1929, in dollar and unit volume of sales, as well as in renewed optimism over the future, was reported today by Minneapolis and St. Paul wholesalers, and manufacturers.

Sales were double and treble those of a year ago, it was reported, and purchases during market week, ran into millions of dollars.

More than that, the out-of-town merchants were besieging the customer service departments of the wholesale houses with requests for suggestions in promoting aggressive selling and advertising campaigns.

"Merchants are looking forward to doing a real volume of business in 1934," E. U. Berdahl, secretary of the wholesalers' section of the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce association, said today. "They told wholesalers they are planning extensive newspaper campaigns, to secure their share of this increased business.

"The optimism of the out-of-town dealers was both encouraging and contagious. Wholesalers reported there was not one of their customers who wasn't preparing for a spring increase in business well above normal. And the loyalty of the northwest merchants to this market was most heartening."

While registration for market week approximated 1,700, actual attendance was estimated at between 3,500 and 5,000, as hundreds of merchants did not register.

Typical of the comments received by Mr. Berdahl from the market week sponsors are the following: "Best msrket week in 10 years;" "Business far ahead of the past few sales;" "Largest number of merchsales;" "Largets number of merchants we ever had in our store at one time;" "Far exceeded expectations."

JANUARY 3 TIMES BETTER THAN IN JANUARY YEAR AGO

Sale of 8,716 acres of farm lands in the dead of winter, the record of the federal land bank for January, has storted a year's contest among laad bank salesmen with a 3 to 1 better showing than they had at the beginning of 1933, says George S. Gordhamer, vice president in charge of real estotes.

The January sales comprised 63 farms sold against only 18 in January a year ago. This tripple improvement following on the fact that December sales were more than double the December sales of 1932, has caused Land Bank officials to detect a growing interest in farm lands.

Checking up on average prices it is found that the average price for the January sales was $28.42 per acre, whlch ia the highest averaga since 1929. In 1930 the average was $27 per acre, then it dropped down to $25, in 1932 it had gone down to $23, and in 1933 it had again begun to rise, with the year's averaga $26 for the four states in the 7th district, North Dakota, Minaesota, Wisconsin and Michigan.

The increasing sales, increased inquiry, and the rising average price is held to indicate a genuina interest in land. Most of tbese farms were sold to farmers, very few to specalators, altho the bank reports that there has been a strong specalative interest evident for the past 2 or 3 months.

All 4 states have salesmen among the leading 10, with Minnesota, Michigan and North Dakota tied at five farms eacb for first place. The sales coatest will run thruout the year.

WORKER-FARMER WASHINGTON CONFERENCE MARCH 4TH TO WEIGH YEAR OF NEW DEAL

A nation-wide gathering of leaders and spokesmen of farmer aad worker organizations will meet in Washington on March 3rd and 4th to weigh the results, good and evil of the new deal to the farmers and workers.

The gathering will take the form of a public hearing in tbe Old Friends Meeting House in the Capital city over the two days. The National Committee of Correspondence aad Action of the Continental Congress of Workers and Farmers, a permanent farmer-labor alliance established by a convention of over 4,000 delegates in May of 1933, is calling the conferenoe.

The National committee of twenty-six members will sit as a jury during the two day conference to hear a variety of speakers from trade union, farmer, unemployed, cooperative and labor fraternal organizations. The committee will be flanked by a commissioa of economic experts inclnding among others, Harry W. Laidler of the National Bureau of Economic Research, F, J. Schlink and Stuart Chase of Consumers' Research, Inc., Maynard C. Krueger of the University of Chicago and Professor John H. Gray of Washington university.

Speakers will present the viewpoint of their respective labor or farm groups after one year of New Deal policies marked by the first anniversary of inanguration of the Roosevelt Administration on March 4th of 1933. The problem of the worker unemployed aad employed as affeoted by New Deal agencies, the farmer, the negro as a special group affected by the agricultural policy of the national administration particularly in cotton growing, general public utilities, railroads and banking, navy and army program in relation to international peace will be taken np in turn.

The discontent of organized labor elements with the hours, wages and organization provisions of the various N. R. A. codes is expected to find clear expression when speakers such as A. F. Whitney of the railroad brotherhoods, John M. Long of the Wierton (West Virginia) steel workers' union, and Leo Krzycki of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers are heard.

Schednled speakers for the farmers include Robert Miller of the Farmers Union and John Bosch of the Farm Holiday asociation and others to be sammoned at a later date. What apokesmen of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People term one of the most tragic episodes in the history of the negro race in America will be outlined before the Coatinental Congress committee of correspondence by representatives of tbe N. A. A. C. P. in treating the results of the Roosevelt Administration's policy of enforced limitation of cotton acreage.

Special invitation to attend the conference bas been sent to all heads of national and international unions of the A. F. of L., heada of state federations of labor, and state and national farm leaders, rail union officials, officials.

Following the pnblic hearing which will be open to the press and tbc invited officials, tbe National Committee of the Continental Congress of Farmers and Workers will hold an executive session to formulate the terms of the call for the second national conveation of the farmer-labor congress which will be held in St. Louis or aome nearby mid-west city aroand July 4th.

MANY THRILLS FEATURE BRIDGE CLUB SESSIONS

At the Culbertson Contract Bridge club on last Saturday evening, at which there were 24 present, the really big thrill of the evening was tbe biddiag and fulfilling of the contract of a Grand Slam at seven Hearts, vulnerable. As tbose playing the hands are quite modest, we give merely tha two hands witb the bidding.

The Declarer opeaed a bid of one Hearts on tha minimum opeaing of Spades: Q-J-4; hearts: K-J-10-9-7-6; Diamonds: K-2; Clubs: Q-3.

The partner could scarcely beliave her eyes when she looked at this hand: Spades: A-K; Hearts: A-Q-3-2; Diamonds: A-5; Clubs: A-K-7-6-5.

Her eyes fairly snapped. What conld sbe do to inform her partner of this marvelous hand. Sha finally made a forcing bid of three Clubs, after which the bidding continaed as follows: 3 No Trump; 4 Clnbs; 4 Hearts; 4 N. T.; 5 Hearts; 5 N. T; 6 Hearts; 7 Hearts.

As the contract was fulfilled, a total of 2,460 points were made. Eaough to say that the Declarer of this contract received first award for the evening.

The club meets at eight o'clock on Saturday evenings at the Hinman home, 503 Bridge street. A lesson-lecture precedes the play.

Canalized Mississippi Needed For Industrial Development

This is the Sixth of a seriea of eight articles dealing with the construction of the nine-foot channel in the Mississippi river.

If Minnesota and the northwest continue to lose population, by producing a wealth of raw materials and shipping them east for manufacture and distribution, this "breadbasket" region must continue subservient to eastern capitol.

The northwest's problem is to recover its prosperity by making its own reasonable profit out of ita surplus food and foodstuffs, mineral resources, and manpower. It needs industry jobs and payrolls. Local industry means independance for producers and workers. It means a balanced population, a balanced market, and more orderly and profitable transportation. We could use 10,000,000 more population in the Mississippi valley states, not in a few congested centers, but in hundreds of sizeable communities.

As industry and population drift eastward, our representation in Washington diminishes. After we had counted noses in 1930, there came a congressional reapportionment, which allowed Minnesota nine congressmen instead of 10. The valley states, in all, lost 17 seats in Congress, while states along our various coasts gained 26.

Even opponents of river use admit that the nine-foot channel will encourage industrial development. Out here in the northwest, we do not need to duplicate the evils of industrial congestion and the social aad civil liabilities that have grown up in the east. We have room to expand, room to build and maintain decent, clean and democratically managed industries, which will provide congenial work at saving wages for young men and women. These poung people now are forced to take their chances in over populated cities.

Natural industrial development in the northwest and midwest has been suppressed because of a misguided economic trend, due largely to the Panama canal. River cities actually have been penalized, to prevent their natural expansion through use of the river. The people of Burlington, Iowa can cite one such instance.

Most farmers and townspeople are familiar with the plight of Ireland, long exploited by England. The Irish farmers were permitted to raise flax, a crop which robs the land quickly of its natural richness. But most of the maaufacturing was done in England except for the most arduous of manual labor, the making of fine lace. Somewhat tbe same thing has been happening in Minnesota. The farmer does the hard work; someone else makes the profit.

The Scandinavians are familiar with the use of waterways. The map of the Scandinavian peninsula is a network of rivers, canals, lakes and channels which are in constant use as cargo carriers. The whole backgound of Scandinavian history and tradition built upon the water as a bearer of budens.

The Germans also know what tbeir native land bas done with waterways. Germany allows none of its navigable streams to run to riot and waste, as this conntry has. The Rhine was a mach more difficult stream to canalize than the Upper Mississippi but it carries millions of tons of freight. Even the idea for our roller type dams came fom Germany.

Frankfort-am-Maia once was a little town 25 miles from the Rhine. The Maia river was canalized. Instead of harming the railroads, this development built industries which have made Frankfort one of the most important railroad heads in Europe. The aame thing has happened elsewhere.

Objection has been raised that the railroad service of Europe has not been permitted to develop on the scale that it has in this country. Wholesale rail development, however, wasn't aecessary, either here or in Europe. Even railway executives admit we have too much trackage. If some of this unbridled, promotional rail development was curbed, and better use made of waterways, we would not now be paying transportation charges big enough to allow interest and dividends on 24½ billion dollars' in railway securities, issued against a plant which has a market value of less than half that, and which could be reproduced aow for 16 billions. These are interstate commerce commission figures. In the last 20 years alone, the public has paid in interest and transportation costs $165,339,000,000, considerably more than enough to rebuild every railway line and all its equipment.

As an actuality, the public has paid much more than this, if the amoant of fictitious eapitodl stock is considered. Bnt even with this watered stock divideads of Class 1 roads reached a maximum of 7.83 per cent in 1930, and in the 12 years eading with 1931. a total of nearly $5,500,000,000, in dividends were declared. It is tbis sort of coaditions yhich propoaents of water transportation aeek to remedy.

Fear for the railroads' fnture is largely misplaced, for instead of redncing rail traffic, water transportation, thongh iadustrial developmeat, will make traffic for them. Pittsburgb oa the Ohio, has become the best railroad station in the conntry, and similar improvement has beea made at Memphis, oa tha Lower Mississippi, Houston, Texas, on its new ship canal; Maachester, on the Sovea and Frankfort, oa the Maln

WOOL VALUE NEARLY TRIPLE THAT OF YEAR AGO, SAYS BAYNE

"Wool bas more than doubled, and in extreme instances, tripled in value during the past year," states Art Bayae, head of the sheep department of tha Central Co-operative Association, farmer-owned livestock selling agency of South St. Paul.

Mr. Bayne has recently returned from an extensive western trip where he attended the annual meeting of the Washingtoa Wool Growers at Yakima, Washington, and the Montana Wool Growers Meeting at Billings, Mont.

"A spirit of optimism prevails among sbeepmen of the West because of the advanced prices being offered by wool buyers for the 1934 clip, reported Bayne. "A year ago one of the largest clips in the West, amounting to one-half million pounds, sold at 12 cents. Holders of similar clips today have refused offers of 30 cents and are demanding 35 cents per pound for them. Tbree sizable clips amounting to approximately 50,000 fleeces sold to an Eastern buyer during the Montana convention at 30 cents per pound.

Wool production has been on the downward cycle for some time and Hayne points out that wool is the only agricultural product today that is selling at or above pre-war parity. He warns wool growers not to be too eager to dispose of their 1934 clip since bright woola chould command higber prices than tbose being offered by some Eastern buyers. Extreme shortage of wool stocks at mills has been a factor reviving buying activity and tha anticipation of broader demand for woolen goods is a stimulant to the sheep trade.

AMERICAN AND FOREIGN WHEAT PROBLEMS MAPPED IN BOOK BY A. A. DOWELL

The international wheat pact has made its sponsor countries realize that a joint attack on their agricultural problems is advisable. say Proffessors, A. A. Dowell and O. B. Jesness in "The American Farmer and the Export Market," which is to be published early next week by the University of Minnesota Press.

In this book the authors, both consultants of the AAA, discuss the problems of American agriculture in relationship to world affairs. Declaring that "national self-sufficiency is not practicable," they assert at the same time that a considerable price must be paid by this country to keep foreign markets open. Among the subjects dealt with in the book are crop and livestock production ia relation to consamption, surplusses, removal of submarginal land. the possibility of sbifting from export to import crops, the practicability of national self-sufficieacy, the place of tha American farmer in world competition, protective tariffs on farm products, the part played by international debts in the export problem, and the outlook for American agricultura in the near future.

The present national recovery program including the AAA, the authors say, are esentionally domestic and their period of application is limited. These temporary expedients must be followed by plans of wider acope, they believe, adding that the future of American agriculture exports depends on the policies followed in iaternational relations.

RE-ELECT CRANDALL HEAD OF CENTRAL CO-OP

C. B. Crandall, Randolph, Minnesota, who came up for re-election at the annual stockholders meeting of the Central Co-Operative Association last week was re-elected as president of that organization by a large majority.

S. S. Beach, of Hutchinson, Minnesota, and H. L. Halvorsen of Litehfield also were re-elected to the Board of Directors.

Fourteen resolutions were presented and adopted unanimously duriag the business session of the annual meeting, February 14. These resolutions pertained largely to direst buying of bogs and to suitable legislation curbing this evil. One resolution was to place an embargo on all agricultural products imported into this country which come competition with our own agricultural products. President Roosevelt was commended highly for his courageus efforts to assist agriculture.

Amphion Chorus of Fargo-Moorhead Which Will Sing a Concert in the New Auditorium Tuesday, February 27th

The Amphion Chorus of Fargo and Moorhead, which will appear in Thief River Falls at the auditorium as part of the dedication ceremony February 27, is a Nationally known chorus which gives the people of this Northwest country something to boast about. They are acclaimed by critics all over the country as being one of the best of its kind in the United States.

Four years ago this chorus was first organized and under the able leadership of Daniel L. Peterson it has grown in size and become one of the best American exponents of male chorus singing.

Songs by this chorus are wide in range, from folk songs of the motherland to stirring marching songs of the Scottish frontier. Running from simple song such as "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" to thundering songs such as "The Lost Chord."

The accomplishments of this chorus are best told in the words of Mr. William MacPhail, of the MacPhail School of Music, Minneapolis, who said, "There was a precision and poise and ease on the part of the chorus which was most delightful. Its tonal quality was strickingly bueatiful. The attacks, release, and phrasing left nothing to be desired. The chorus, the director, Fargo Moorhead, and the entire Northwest should feel proud of its accomplishments."

A BIRD IN THE HAND IS WORTH TWO IN THE BUSH

It is said that it is human to err. It is equally true that the person who never makes mistakes can seldom point to any record of accomplishments. The best of us err and we all need some measure of charitable consideration from our fellows. It is therefore more in sorrow than with any desire to condemn or censure that we record the fact that the PWA grant of $15,000 alloted this city by the federal government for the purpose of defraying a part of the cost of installing another diesel unit in the local power plant has been withdrawn by the Public Works Board, and that all pending applications hove been cancelled.

This, at one stroke deprived our city of any and all federal ail towards extensions or improvements to our power plant, and brings home forcibly to our citizens the truth of the old adage that "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush." It is so much easier to criticize than to perform; a fact which the present city council is probably finding out at this time. They were among the severest critics of the former council, not from any personal nor political dislike perhaps, as much as from a lack of information; which may have been excuscable; for a complete understanding is hard enough to arrive at for those actually engaged in wrestling with offairs of civil administration, and doubly hard for those who can only watch events from the sidelines.

There will be a great deal of malignant abuse of the present council in the next year or so for the part some of its members played in blocking and losing the city this federal aid. By far the largest share of this criticism will be from some of those who worked for their election and voted for them. This is the unthinking element—the typical American stampede crowd who are always ready to go at the drop of the hat and never question where. They are the crowd, that led by smug, cigar-smoking ward-heelers make the progress of democratic government so erratic, and apparently lend credence to the claim of those who prate about dictatorship; that democracy is a failure. But they should not be too harshly criticised either, they don't know better. The blame lays on those who are supposed to be informed, and are not; those who should consider things on their merits, and do not; those who penny-wise, spend fortunes chasing wild geese.

CRUCIFYING A WHOLE CITY TO GAIN POLITCAL CONTROL

We wonder if the people of America have ever been treated to a more disgusting spectacle than thot being put on at the present time by Twin City Dailies. In an effort to discredit the Farmer-Labor administration in St. Paul, to the end that public opinion be turned against Mayor Mahoney and incidentally, whot is probably of most importance to these speciol interest controlled organs of hysteria, Mayor Mohoney's program of a municipal light and power plant, they would now lay all the gangsterism and racketeering in the United States at the door of St. Paul. The Toughy gang is no longer u Chicago gang in the eyes of these dailies, they are a St. Paul gang. The Dillinger gang? Sure, they are a St. Paul gang now. They are being fostered and nurtured by the St. Paul police department if we are to believe the St. Paul Daily News, leading "crime ferrets" of St. Paul.

Of course there is crime and a lot of it in St. Paul Just as there is in every large city in the country. Just as there is bound to be where concentrated wealth and abject poverty must rub elbows. Just as there always will be when men are forced to desperote measures to continue to exist. Just as there always will be while men are penalized for honesty.

When, and if, Mahoney is defeoted in the forthcoming election in St. Paul, we may be sure that the Twin City dailies will promptly find the 'crime wave' abating. When political expediency passes they will put on the binder again and hold St. Paul up as a model city. But crime will exist then as now, and in no lesser degree for under present conditions no police department can cope with criminals.

It is interesting to note that the St. Paul Daily News features alongside of its articles on crime, propaganda articles designed to discredit municipal ownership of light and power plants. We wonder just how much the Northern States Power company influenced the News' awakening to the crime situation in St. Paul.

ARE WE GOING TO ANSWER A REPUBLICAN PRAYER?

We had a letter from a friend in Minneapolis today, asking our opinion of the "draft Olson for Senator" movement that seems to have struck some of our Farmer-Laborites. While we are far from satisfied with Shipstead as a party member, we must nevertheless acknowledge the fact that he has voted quite consistently progressive during his entire tenure in office. We have no fault to find with his record, however much we may deplore his lack of sense of party duty.

Our friend asks us if we do not see the fine hand of Tom Davis in this movement to draft Olson to oppose Shipstead, and the thought may merit some consideration. Certain it is that Davis would no doubt rather see Olson run now against Shipstad than two years from now against his friend and protege Tom Schall.

Thera is another angle that the Farmer-Laborites may well bear in mind and that is the fact that the Republicans would like nothing better than to see a fight between Shipstead and Olson. In such a primary fight we could be sure that the republicans would vote the Farmer-Labor ticket to help put Shipstead over as the lesser of two evils and at the same time get rid of Olson for two years at least. And those two years the most vital in the history of the Farmer-Labor party.

No, we would be decidedly against drafting Olson for Senator; we need him another two years as governor. Furthermore Shipstead has been good enough Farmer- Laborita and Senator to merit our continued support, Shoemaker to the contrary. Any other course would be an answer to a Republican prayer.

There seems to be a great deal of speculation among the Farmer-Labor papers in the Ninth district over the congressional candidate aituation. While we ahall abide by the choice of the Ninth District endorsing convention, we feel that oua of the best suggstions as yet made appeared in the Farmers Independent of Bagley last week. The Independent meutioned Leonard Hauske of Halstad as a likely and acceptable candidate, providing ha could be prevailed upon to make the race.

Each week Mr. Stephens will answer such questions as may be submitted by those interested, pertaining to any phase of Contract Bridge. Pleasa mail all questions to W. C. Stephens, care of this paper, Contraet Bridge Departmeut.

Question—from J. A. C., St. Paul: What are playing tricks and how are they comauted?

Answer: The playing tricks are those which you have justifiable reason for believing, from the bidding of the hands, that you can take, including both high and low cards.
The Declarer, when supported by his partner, counts his tricks from three sources — Honor Tricks, Long Trump Tricks, and Long Side Suits.
Partner of declarer counts his playing tricks from four sources —honor tricks, long trump tricks, long side suits, and one short suit.
The defensive hands count their playing tricks from one source only—the combined honor tricks which the bidding shows them to have.
An eight-aage folder entitled, "How to bid Culbertson," explains how to count these tricks, and includes also a complete outline of all bidding problems. A self-addressed stamped envelope with ten cents, will bing you this most valuable folder.

Question: From A. M. C., Kansas City: What is meant by tba two-three count.

Answer: When opening the bidding your bid tells your partner that you are depending on him to take two tricks if you are vulnerable, or three tricks if you are not vulnerable, beuca the two-three count. This two-thirds count should be kept thoroughly in mind throughout the entire bidding.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

A series of schools for the intensive study of the liquor question has been planned by tha National W. C. T. U. for every state in the Uuion, and all temperance workers, leaders, and thosa interested are invited to participate. The study considers (1) What alcohol is; (2) What alcohol does.

Two basic effects of alcohol upon the human system are phrased in the new educational approach: (1) Alcohol affecta the nervous system in direct relation to the amount of alcohol taken; (2) Alcohol affects the faculties in inverse order to their development in the individual, and the race. i. e., scientific study and investigation show that the highest powers of the human being, reason, judgment, self control. etc., are the first to suffer from alcohol.

Minute Sermons

By Dr. Crawford Graya

o

Because we have not responded to Jesus Christ in devotion and loyalty as we should, we need Lent.

We needed this sacred season to confess our shortcomings, our lukewarmness, our all too often un-Christian attitudes and to seek mercy and forgiveness.

We have omitted our devotions, We have failed to pray.

We have openly shown carelessness in church attendance.

We have done what we ought not to have done and neglected to do what we should have done

Wa need to confess.

We need to pray.

We need Lent.

The Liberal Digest

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP GAINS THRUOUT THE NATION

Reprinted From New York Timea

Chicago.—How municipalities thruout the country are cutting taxes in the face of the rising cost of government, at the same time making needy public improvements and adding to surplus accounts, was told at the 8th biennial public ownership conference held here. Three hundred delegates brought reports of low rates for light and power, yet with earnings sufficent to help cities and towns withstand the strain of the depression and even to give employment to the needy.

Federal Governmeat Aiding Public Planta

The movement toward municipal ownership of utilities was also to have been greatly quickened in recent months by the crash of the Insull utilities and by the Federal government's offer to provide financial aid to municipalities in building or aquiring electric, water and gas plants. The Public League of America, under whose auspices the conference was held, stated that at least 1,000 cities and towns are ready to take advantage of Federal aid.

Springfield Savea Two Million

Springfield, Ill., third largest city in the state, reported through Willie J. Spaulding, manager of its muncipally owned electric plant, that, though its rates are 25 to 50 per cent lower than other cities of Illinois privately served, it saved its citizens $2,000,000 last year in comparison to what they would have paid a private utility at average costs. That was $300,000 more than the total tax burden of the city for municipal purposes. Los Angeles msde a net profit of $3,900,000 for the year, according to E. F. Scattergood, chief electrical engineer, although its charges are lower than private company charges in the same region. Washington, Ind., reported through its municipal light and power plant it is debt free, taxes are reduced, rates are law and several induatries have been kept running through the depression by the municipally-owned light plant, one of tha factories aided employing 600 people.

From Jacksonville, Fla., came the statement thot maximum electric costs have been reduced from 28 cents per kilowatt hour to 7 cents, yet last year turned into the city'a general funds $1,000,000. Ernest E. Anders, Commissioner of Public Utilitiea of Jacksonville, stated that in five years Jacksonville will be municipally tax free.

Winnetka, Ill., a suburh of Chicago, has out of its surplus fuuds built a City Hall aud made many public improvement. During the last year the electric plant provided $87,000 for improvements and put $94,000 into "city aavings," giving the town a bank balauce of $436,000.

Tacoma, Wash.; Kanaas City

Tacoma. Wash., was reported to have the lowest rates in the country, a maximum of 4 cents a kilowatt hour scaled down to 2 cents, and for domestic purposes one-half a cent per kilowatt hour after a certain basic charge has been met Many homes are being built without furnaces, electric heating being found reasonable. Cleveland haa a maximum 3-cent rate whereas the average for the conutry is 7 cents.

R. F. McDonnell, consulting engineer of Kansas City, atated to the conference that the Insull debacle has checked the gobbling up of municipal plants hy private utilities and that now the aweep is the other way. He pointed out that techical encouragement is given public ownership hy the development of the Diesel engine, making it practical for villages to operate their own light plants efficiently and cheaply.

2,000 Public Plants in United States

There are 2,000 municipally-owned electric light and power planta in tha United States, accordiug to Carl D. Thompson, secretary of the Public Ownership League of America. Private plants are the larger, however, generating about 85 per cent of the power. He cited the Skagit river project of Seattle as a municipal enterprise to develop more power than Muscle Shoals. He asserted that the trend toward public ownership will gain rapid momentum under the Federal aid program.

Mr. Thompson, who was sponsor of the conference, anticipates the day when cities in control of their utilities will reduce present electric rates under privata control from 25 to 50 per cent and yet have enough surplus to make reduced taxes possible.

A PRAYER FOR A CRISTIAN SOCIAL ORDER

Written by the Rev. James Myers, Industrial secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

Almighty God, ceaseless Creator of the ever changing worlds, Energy divine, Spirit of life, clothed in mystery, yet manifest in cosmic urge in all nature toward more perfect forms; we thank Thee for Thy continued presence in the mind and heart of man, making him ever discontent with things as they are, urging him forever onward on his way. We thank Thee, Oh! God, for exalted visions of the eternal destiny of man, and for all the dreams of a divine society on earth foretold by seers through-out the centuries, and proclaimed by Jesus in glad tidings of the Kingdom of God. Help us in the spirit of our Lord's Prayer to build the kind of world which will tend to make men good. Lead us not into temptation. Deliver us from the evils of war and of an economic system which places profit above personality. Lead us into that cooperative commonweath of God in which all the families of the earth shall be blessed. As we press toward Thy Kingdom, grant us the boldness of the early Christians of whom it was said that they turned the world upside down. Keep us from hurt surprise at enmity and opposition in church and state. For a disciple is not above his Lord, and so persecuted they the prophets. Increase our faith in Thee, O God and in a moral universe, that we may have grace to seek these ends by moral means. In Thy fatherly goodness, wilt Thou help the disinherited workers of the world in their struggle for freedom and equality, but save them from the soul destroying bitterness and hatreds of class war. Grant to us the blessings of orderly processes in social change. Restrain from the mathod of violence both those who would appropriate for society and those who would protect for themselves the vast interest of accumulated wealth. Vouchsafe to our owning class that mind which was in Christ Jesus, who counted not privilege and power things to be grasped, but emptied himself for the service of man.

Through the spiritual compulsions of sacrificial love, by the power of the cross, may Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth. Gladden now our eyes we beseech Thee O God with a nearer vision of that perfect day when one shall hurt or destroy in all Thy holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea. In the name of Jesua Christ, our Lord, Amen.

Classification of Chinese

Under the last Chinese empire men were divided into the following classes in order of importance—the scholar, the farmer, the artisan and the merchant. The scholar still occupiea the first place

WHAT MAKES A NATION GREAT?

Not serried ranks with flags unfurled,
Not armored ships that gird the world,
Not hoarded wealth, nor busy mills,
Not cattle on a thousand hills,
Not sages wise, nor schools, nor laws,
Not boasted deeds in freedom's cause---
All these may be, and yet the State
In the eye of God be far from great.

That land is great which knows the Lord,
Where songs are guided by His Word,
Where justice rules 'twixt man and man,
Where love controls in act and plan,
Where, breathing in this native air,
Each soul finds joy in praise and prayer---
Thus may our country, good and great,
Be God's delight---man's best estate.

WHY BANKERS ARE UNPOPULAR

Uuion Advocate

Another reason why bankers are unpopular was revealed this week with the publication of a letter Governor Floyd B. Olson recently addressed to all bankers in Minnesota. Governor Olson wrote to them in an effort to persuade them to waive the usual fee charged for cashing "outside" checks. The checks in this particular instance were those paid to CWA workers.

It is almost unbelievable that any banker would be so small-minded and penurious that he would insist on taking five cents out of what undoubtedly was the first pay check thousands of workers had received in months. It is hard to believa that anyone would be so grasping and greedy that he would be unwilling to cooparate to thot extent to bring about eronomic recovery.

Further comment is unnecessary. We realize there is nothing we may add that would increase the contempt most laboring people feel toward those who chisel on human misery.

o

WELL, WHY NOT?

(New Ulm Review)

Rev. Chas. E. Coughlin advocated the issuance of 25 billion dollars in currency. He claims that according to the generally accepted rules of banking and financing, every country has a right to issue in currency 2½ times the amount of bullion that it has in its vaults. According to this basic rule he has figured out that the government could issue 25 billion dollars in currency without transgressing the established rules pertaining to the issue of currency and he claims that auch currency so issued would be absolutely sound. If his contention is correct, then there seems to be no reason why this should not be done. With this added currency the government could finance all the projects now under consideration without issuing new bonds and paying interest on them and perhaps also be able to retire some of the bonds now outstanding. There seems to be no apparent reason why the taxpayers should be called on to pay excessive taxes for interest when the interest item or a large share of it could be conveniently wiped out by issuing currency based on gold bullion. President Roosevelt has a happy faculty of not telling Congress and the people all his plans at one time. Perhaps after his present program has been adopted by Congress, he may suggest to them the advisibility of issuing currency commensnrate with the amount of gold bullion on hand.

MERCY FOR BOOTLEGGERS. MOONEY, BILLINGS STILL JAILED

Minneapolis Labor Review

Violators of the Prohibition laws are to go unpunished the probability is that those who are in jail will not finish their terms. All of which is perfectly right and just. They never should have been arrested, forced to stand trial or jailed.

People had to give Prohibition a trial, but did not find it the road to temperance, and so the change was made. Just as eventually capital is found to be the road to want instead of the grand highway to plenty for all will be changed for collectivism with its more equal distribution of blessings among all.

Bpt while prosecutions against Bootleggers are being dropped and those jailed are probably released innocent Mooney and Billings, who broke no law are held prisoners in California.

How an administration can act for the general dropping of prosecutions against liquor law violators and take no steps to free these two martyrs whose stature grows daily in the eyes of the people, as does the iniquity of the injustice that has been visited upon them is difficult to understand.

When the Democratic administration through Postmaster General Farley indorses Senator Hiram Johnson for re-election it comes in close touch with the Mooney-Billings case.

We reiterate again that any time that Hiram Johnson raises his voice in behalf of the pardoning of Mooney and Billings they will be pardoned unconditionally.

If the Democratic party to be known as a progressive party, how can it be when it supports Senators like Hiram Johnson, who are responsible for keeping Mooney jailed.

To be consistent, to be just, to be fair, President Roosevelt should immediately urge Governor Rolph, of California, to pardon Mooney and Billings, and request Hiram Johnson to join in the request. Surely President Roosevelt does not kow-tow before state rights to such an extetnt that on one hand his Postmaster-General can indorse a Republican Senator for Re-election, but he cannot urge this same Republican Senator and the Governor of California to perform the human, right and just act of granting the too long delayed pardon for Mooney and Billings.

WOULD BE SATISFIED WITH THREE

St. Louis County Independent

The G. O. P. leaders in the state are hopeful that with the congressional elections being held this year under districts there will be some chance of electing a few republicans.. However, they are not very confident, but believe that there is a possibility of getting at least three districts to turn out a majority for the G. O. P. candidates.

It was just an accident that few Republicans succeeded in getting over at the last election when there were no district lines, and everyone ran-at-large, as the Farmer-Labor congressional candidates were not so well known throughout the state as were the republicans.

With the district lines established, there is every indication that there will be a complete Farmer-Labor delegation from Minnesota after the next election. Tha Farmer-Labor party is atronger this year than two years ago. Every district is better organized and if any of tha Republicans make the grade it will be more than an accident, even though they render all their efforts to tha three possibilities.

WE NEED EACH OTHER

Duluth Labor World

When will the farmer and the laboring man awake to the truth that the prosperity of the farmer depends upon the income of the working man? These two great masses of people have never cooperated as well as might be possible, and until they do the farmer cannot dig himself out of his economic depression.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace has told tha Senate committee on agriculture that farm income rises and falls with the payrolls of the city workers and he proved this statement by statistics and charts.

Tha close relation between city payrolls and farmers' income shows that recovery in the income of farmers cannot occur until the restoration of full employment and earning power in tha cities. This is true, but it works both ways. Steady prosperity cannot come to city workers unless the farmers are able to buy a fair share of tha goods produced in cities. Only when the farmers can purchase these goods can the workers be sure of employment.

FEDERAL FEED FUND ASSURED

Hopkins Tells Shipstead Grain for Minnesota Drouth Area Will Be Supplied.

Washington — Funds to provide grain for the drouth-stricken areas of Minnesota so that farm animals may be fed through March and April will be made available. Such assurance was given by Harry L. Hopkins, administrator of the civil works administration. It was estimated that 1,500,000 bushels of grain will be required for the two months.

Mr. Hopkins told senator Shipstead that the funds will be provided through the farm credit administration out of appropriations made in the CWA appropriation bill passed by the congress.

Complaints of feed shortages and of delay in getting supplies to the areas afflicted by the drouth had become so numerous that the government is taking steps to speed up this distribution of relief.

Senator Shipstead said he will propose immediately an amendment to federal appropriation bills now pending, to provide an aditional $20,000,000 for relief. He said also he will press for prompt passage of the measure to which his amendment would be attached.

He received a communication from Mrs. Anna Dickie Olesen, head of the national emergency council for Minnesota. She wrote that relief given would amount to no more than four or five bushels to each farmer. She stated that 388 carloads had been ordered in December and only 99 were sent; that in January 405 carloads were ordered, only 175 sent.

Mr. Hopkins told Senator Shipstead that in December and January 303,000 bushels of wheat and 263,000 bushels of corn had been sent into the Minnesota drouth areas and that everything asked for had been forwarded.

200,000 C W A Workers Lose Jobs.

Washington—Demobilization of the vast army of civil works employes began with dropping of approximately 200,000 from federal projects. Orders were issued by Harry L. Hopkins, civil works and relief administrator, simultaneously with passage of the $950,000,000 civil works and direct relief appropriation by congress. Hopkins directed discontinuance of work on all federal projects not on federal or other public property and directed various departments and bureaus to reduce their civil works forces from 50 to 90 per cent. Those continued on the pay roll are to be dropped at the rate of 10 per cent a week until May 1, when the last of the 4,000,000 employes are scheduled to be let out.

Roosevelt Ready to Start Second Year

Washington—As he nears the end of his first year in office, President Roosevelt is found just as ready to take a chance, just as determined to push along new paths in the quest of a formula for better times, and just as buoyantly confident of success in that quest as he was at the start of his term. Conditions will be a little different on March 6 this year than when he stepped into office. All banks were closed and general unrest over the nation greeted his inauguration.

Corn Loan Limit Set for March 31.

Chicago—The Chicago branch of the Commodities Credit Corporation received instructions to extend the period for government corn loans until March 31. Previously February 28 had been set as deadline for the loans. Under the loan plan, farmers are advanced 45 cents a bushel on corn in the crib, the money coming from funds of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation through the Commodities Corporation, a subsidiary.

Bremer's Taped Goggles Are Found.

St. Paul—Federal authorities have found the taped goggles worn by Edward O. Bremer during the 23 days he was in the hands of kidnapers, according to word received from Rochester. The goggles were discovered in the snow near an untenanted building. They were taped on the inside to prevent the St. Paul banker from observing his captors.

Army Takes Over All Air Mail Routes

Washington—The United States Army Air corps is now handling the air mail. All contracts held by commercial aviation companies were cancelled a short time ago after an investigation disclosed graft and collusion. Bombing and pursuit planes with army pilots took over the routes.

ANY TIME FOR ANY THING IS DUNWOODY POLICY

From the start Dunwoody Institute has carried out the policy of admitting "any man any time for any thing the school has to offer." In addition to the students enrolled in the regular classes, large numbers of special students attend during the winter months. At the school they are familiarly known as "in and outers" because over a period of years they are in and out of the school and in and out of their jobs in the various parts of the state.

During the dull season in their work, wherever they may be located, many of these "in and outers" attend Dunwoody for the purpose of extending their skill and knowledge in the line of work in which they are already employed. These students begin to enroll in increasing numbers after the first of November and continue to enter for varying periods from two to five months until late in the spring.

There is also another type of "in and outer" in which the school is very much interested. Young people graduating from high school in January are at a loss to know how they can employ their time with profit during the dull months of employment between January and the spring season.

They, too, go to Dunwoody and try out in some line or lines of work in which they are interested. In this way they find out what they like to do and what they are fitted to do. As a result, when the new school year comes around in the late summer they are in a position either to return to Dunwoody or to make a more intelligent choice of any training they may want along other lines.

Experience shows that from $35 to $40 a month will enable an "in and outer" to pay the small special fees at the institution and his room and board while attending school.

U. S. WILL CONDUCT FINANCE STUDY OF MINNESOTA ROADS

Arrangements have been completed by the state highway department for a Federal financial survey of the state, county, township and municipal roads throughout Minnesota, N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner, announced today.

The study will be carried out by the United States Bureau of Public Roads. It will be directed by Professor Henry R. Trumboyer, professor of economics at the University of Wisconsin and economist for the Bureau Roads. H. R. Briggs, statistician for the Bureau of Roads will be in direct charge of the work which will start at once.

Primary aims of the survey, Mr. Elsberg said, are:

(1.) To analyze all highway expenditures and revenues of the state, of the counties and of townships and municipalities.

(2.) To show the total revenues raised for other governmental purposes by the state, the counties and other governmental units in comparison with revenues raised for high, ways, bridges and streets.

(3.) To show the effect of highway and related taxes on property of all kinds.

The survey will also show the cost per mile of maintaining and improving the various classes of roads under jusisdiction of different governmental units. Comparisons will be made with other states, for the United States Bureau of Roads has made similar studies in Wisconsin, Michigan and elsewhere.

The highway department and the Bureau of Roads, Mr. Elsberg said, also expect to conduct a traffic cencus which will show the origin and destination of traffic on the highways, as well as the volume of traffic.

"Facts developed by these studies," Mr. Elsberg said, "should be of great value to the state in solving problems of highway development and highway taxation. The results of the survey will be made available to the Citizens Interim Highway committee recently named by Governor Olson.'"

This committee is to make a study of Minnesota highway problems and report to the next legislature. ,,

MAY CONTROL, BUT CAN'T CURE BANG'S DISEASE

Bang's disease or contagious abortion, in cattle can be controlled as easily, if not more easily, than tuberculosis. But it cannot be "cured." That is what Dr. C. R. Donham, a farmers and homemakers short course visitors this week, says.

The very severe losses due to breeding troubles and abortion, that this disease causes in a cattle herd are not the only damage, Dr. Donham pointed out. The same germ that causes Bang's abortion disease in cattle may cause undulant fever in man, a very distressing disease that often incapaciates the person affected for weeks, months, or even years. Most undulant fever cases are due to direct contact with diseased animals, but some have been shown to result from drinking raw milk from diseased cows, and dairymen can no longer ignore the effect this is having on the market for dairy products.

A recent survey of Minnesota Cattle indicates that about 7.5 per cent of the animals are definitely diseased with contagious abortion. 8.5 per cent are suspicious, and 84 per cent are apparently free from the disease. The survey indicates that fewer cows are diseased than had previously been estimated and suggests that control by eradication methods is possible, says Dr. Donham. Testing the animals and either getting rid of the diseased cows or separating them from the rest of the herd is the recommended control.

Vaccination methods for Bang's disease are still in the experimental state, Dr. Donham said, and should not be generally used at present.

Accidents may result from totally unexpected causes, or they may follow inattention to known hazards, or come from sheer carelessness. Of these three fundamental reasons, two can be dealt with to eliminate, or at least minimize, the dangers. Accidents happening from totally unexpected sources are few. Those coming from lack of preventatives are often classified under this same heading. Unguarded railroad crossings, especially coming near curves, cannot be counted as causing totally unexpected accidents. Motorists fail to follow precautions in their mad speed, and accidents occur. Or engineers fail to give sufficient warning of the approach of their trains, although this is seldom the cause. The probability that accidents will occur some day is present. Tidal waves, cyclonic winds and earthquakes are among the chief unexpected causes which result in catastrophies.

But apart from these calamitous causes in the outside world, there are many within the confines of a dwelling. It is these that homemakers can guard against. Some are so trifling that they are scarcely calculated as causes, until an accident happens, and then it is laid to carelessness, but a little forethought would have been the preventative. For example, stairs and bathrooms are two places which should be studied to eliminate dangers, as they are the two main centers. A few points about these places will be discussed.

Stairways.

Entrance to stairways should be protected if they present possibilities for danger. Front stairways are generally so open that they seldom present serious hazards, but back stairways are not apt to be so fortunately situated. An opening may present itself in a most surprising place. To deviate slightly from the center of the hallway may be to put oneself in danger of falling downstairs. A door at the head of the stairs would eliminate all such danger. Or if a door was not in the builder's specifications, and would be too much expense to put in after the home was built, there are indoor gates for such purposes. Where there are children or old folk in the family, to leave a stairway open is a menace to well-being. Put some protection at the head of the stairs and feel reasonably safe.

Bathrooms should have several things taken into consideration for accident-preventives. Be sure to have a soap dish handy to the bathtub, so that there is no excuse for letting the soap fall into the tub. It will leave a slippery path if it does, and some one stepping into the tub when a bath is drawn, may have a really terrible fall. Rubber mats placed in the bottom of tubs are used as preventatives, but precautionary methods should not be eliminated. Tubs with rounded edges and not set into walls supply excellent places to hold onto when getting in and out of a bath. Grab rails are next best, but as they are in the wall they cannot be on both sides of a tub. It is awkward sometimes to get a good hold on them.

Be sure to have all electric fixtures well insulated. Serious accidents have happened when switches were not so insulated and persons ventured to turn on the light when standing in a tub.

Jimmie's Secret

By HAZEL ARNOLD

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate WNU Service

CAROL looked at Jimmie with musing eyes. He was drawing pictures to the infinite delight of her little sister. His boyish interest in his own pictures was reflected in his face—the face of a man to whom life would always be interesting and lively though others found it just the opposite.

"Jimmie, you're nothing but a big, good-natured boy. Do you realize that you want me to marry you in June, and that you haven't even a job?" she asked frankly.

He smiled his friendly smile. "Don't worry, Honey, it will all come out in the wash. I'll get going one of these days, and then everything will be fine and lovely."

She laughed a little bitterly. "But I do want a home, and I want you—and I don't want to wait too long—and perhaps be unhappy afterwards."

He sprang up, caught her in his arms, and folded her close. "You wait," he said with smiling eyes, "you'll see."

After he had gone, she went into the living room where her father was reading.

"Carol, you can do as you wish, but so far as I can see, Jimmie hasn't a job, and I can't see that he is trying to get one. You like him because he's good-natured and easy-going. You used to think a lot of Roy Thompson. He can give you a good home, he's a likable fellow," her father said.

She nodded. "I told Roy he could take me for a ride this evening. I like him, but—I don't know—"

When, later in the evening, snuggled warm and cozy in the front seat of Roy's powerful roadster, she began to wonder more and more.

They swept out to the mountain road, and slipped over the gorgeous miles to a little inn, perched far above the valley. He seemed to be a part of his surroundings, winning from the waiter attention that Jimmie would never be given in his boyish, careless ways.

Under the spell of his attention and the moonlit evening, a slow weakening of her liking for Jimmie began to appear; and she knew that if on the way home, Roy should ask her the one question she wanted him to ask and yet was fearful he would ask, she might give him the answer he wanted.

As the long wide concrete road opened before them, his right hand sought hers.

"Carol, I wish we could have many rides like this—us man and wife—" he began.

Then fate intervened. The car began to jerk and slow down. The engine choked and died.

He clambered out, muttering. He tried this and tried that. His anger mounted in his impatience. "I'll have to go back and telephone to a city garage from the farmhouse," he said shortly.

When he returned, he sat in the car in muttering, disgruntled disgust, after announcing help was coming.

The minutes passed. Roy grew impatient.

"But, Roy, it will take time—" she started to say.

"Time? I guess I know it as well as you do! But they've had time enough!" he said curtly. "I'm going back and phone again."

Silence again, and time for thought. She wondered if he would always be as impatient and curt at things that went wrong—at her.

A car came swiftly up the grade. It stopped "Here it is, fellows. In trouble all right," a cheery voice called.

Carol jumped. It was Jimmie's gay voice. A man came up to the car and questioned her. Carol watched from the depths of her furs as Jimmie went at the engine. How did he happen to be with them? A man got in beside her to work the starter at Jimmie's orders.

"Who is he?" she asked, motioning.

"An expert," the man said. "He's been at the day automobile school all the month and worked nights in our shop. He's a wonder."

The engine roared. "All O. K." Jimmie said cheerily. "All aboard. Let's beat it back."

The car swept away. So that was what he had been doing—studying during the day and working nights, and keeping it from her—planning to surprise her in his boyish way.

Roy Thompson came angrily up. "They've come and gone, Roy," she told him.

He climbed in and started the car with a rush. His irritation hung over them like a cloud the rest of the way. When he stopped at her home, he tried to detain her.

"Roy, it's useless. I know—simply know we would never be happy together," she said with finality.

In the hours she called the garage from which aid had come and asked for Jimmie. He answered her greeting:

"Why, honey, I was going to surprise you. I wanted to make good at this first, so kept it a secret. I go to the head of the mechanical department next month—means the little house, some cake with frosting on it, too. Say, don't you want me to come up and tell you all about it, now the secret's out? Want me to?"

She answered happily. "Oh, I do—please come!"

TIME TO FILE STATE INCOME TAX RETURNS EXTENDED

Owing to the litigation relative to the state income tax law the tax commission has determined to extend the time for filing of all returns, whether for corporations, or individuals, to April 15, 1934 The commission anticipates that before the date mentioned final adjudication of the pending cases will have been made.

Every single person who is not the head of a household is required to file a return if his income is in exeess of $1200.00; every person who lives with husband or wife, and every person who is the head of a household is required to file a return if his net income exceeds $2,000.00. If husband and wife living together, make seperate returns this credit may be divided between them.

The "head of a household" is an individual supporting and maintaina household of one or more individuals who are closely connected with him by blood relationship, marriage or adoption, and whose right to exercise family control and provide for these dependants is based upon some moral or legal obligation. A credit of $250.00 is allowed for each person (other than husband or wife) dependant upon and receiving his chief support from the taxpayer. This credit is allowed to only one taxpayer. Dependants need not be related to, or live with the taxpayer. This credit is based upon actual financial dependency, not mere legal dependency The test in the individual case is whether such so-cadlled dependent person receives one half more of his support from the taxpayer.

The personal exemptions and credits for dependants must be determined by the taxpayer's status on the last day of his taxable year. In cases where returns for a fractional part of a year are permitted or required, the period for which such term is made is deemed to be a taxable year. The credits in the case of a taxpayer who dies or moves from the state during th year, are determined by such person's status at the time of his death or removal, and the full credits as stated above are allowed. In the case of a person who moves into the state during the year the full credits are allowed according to the person's status on the last day of the year.

A credit of $1,000.00 is allwoed to each corporation.

The deduction for contributions or gifts made within the taxable year is limited as follows: (1) They must represent amounts contributed to the State of Minnesota or to religious, charitable, scientific, literary, artistic or educational institutions operating within this state, no part of the net earnings of which incures to the benefit of any private individual, (2) The total credit must not exceed 15% of the taxpayer's taxable net income.

Credits against income dividends received during the taxable year from income arising out of business done in this state by the corporation paying such dividends. This credit does not apply to dividends received from corporations exempt from taxation under the State Income Tax law, such as banks, mining companies insurance companies, cooperatives, building and loan associations, etc; neither does this credit apply to dividends received from income earned by the corporations prior to January 1, 1933.

If the income out of which the dividends are declared was derived from business done within and without Minnesota, it will be necessary for the taxpayer to communicate with the company to ascertain what part of the dividends would be exempt from tax in Minnesota.

Supplies of Tax Return blanks have been mailed out to all the County Auditors in the State, and are available to the taxpayers at their office.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

Tea wagons are a great convenience, not only when serving afternoon tea, but when food or dishes are removed from one place to another. Also they can take the place of curates' assistants and prove easily portable holders for foods to be served at different courses. Put the course on the tea-wagon, and stand it by the hostess' place at the table, and she can be relieved of the usual getting up and down to serve a second course when there is no maid.

To meet the many needs for different kinds of tea-wagons, there are various styles from which to make a selection. One of the latest ideas is to have deep trays fitted to the wagon. They are not removable, but stable. The trays are metal and are not hurt by hot dishes, nor do they stain. There are certain definite advantages in such practical tea-wagons. They are real serving trays, not ornamental tea trays, although they are good looking in their own way.

In Small Quarters.

For the woman who has to live in one or two rooms, alone, the tea-table tea-wagon is admirable. The food and dishes are put on the central removable tray part which is rimmed to prevent the tray slipping after it is set in its place. The under tray is generally stable. On it the extras, not held on the top tray, are put. This setting of the tray can be all arranged in the kitchenette or close to the door to the wee kitchen. Then the wagon can be trundled to a favorable position by a sunny window or before an open fire, in winter. The leaves, when raised form the table and everything is as convenient as possible. Then when the meal is finished the whole wagon and contents can be wheeled out of the room, without any other clearing away.

The tea-wagon was and continues to be an article especially needed for serving afternoon tea on lawns. In England afternoon tea is a regular affair no more to be slighted than luncheon or supper. The tea things are taken wherever the persons wish who are to be served, and as, in summertime, this is apt to be on the lawn, it is a convenient matter to be able to wheel, rather than carry, the commodious trays. With the American practical bent, the possibility of making tea-wagons serve other than the one purpose was considered feasible. Tea-wagons have become more decorative furnishings than ever before.

Arranging Furniture.

Keeping things tuned to the right scale is one of the important things in interior decoration. The young homemaker will find this easy when she buys new furnishings, if she will but remember its value. Frequently she falls heir to some cherished pieces of furniture. Here a problem may appear, but it can be solved by buying articles of corresponding size to go in the rooms with such pieces. Should the antiques or "hand-me-downs" be of comparatively small size, such as small tables, sofas of the love seat type, lowboys, etc., the pieces lend themselves well to small rooms and much of the present-day dimensions of furniture. If the pieces are large, such as Duncan Phyfe center tables, Victorian bookcases, capacious Governor Winthrop desks, etc., the rooms in which these articles go, must be large to accommodate them, together with furniture of similar proportions, or the pieces have to be quelled so that they appear to be smaller than they really are.

A Tea Wagon in a Style Adapted to Many Uses.

Peach and Brown

Peach and brown are shown in a variety of materials for interior decoration. Peach-colored curtains of ninon voile in artificial silk have wide, full ruffles. Floor-length draperies of dark brown repp, lined with tan sateen and edged with a silk cord are a pleasing contrast.

Luncheon Sets

Plaid linen toweling makes attractive luncheon sets. Squares for napkins and oblongs for doilies are used, with china and glassware matching the color of the plaid.

Titbit Trays

Titbit trays go double-decker servers one better. They have three plates, graduated in size and mounted on a central standard.

LEISURE TIME PROJECT GETS UNDER WAY

Hobby Corner Established in Basement of Municipal Auditorium

The Thief River Falls Leisure Time Project got under way last Monday with the placement of supervisors and the commencement of activities.

Earl Effinger is directing the boy's athletic activity and the hockey season is being continued beyond the tournament as long as the weather will permit. Horse-shoe, basketball, diamond ball, and track will be taken up as soon as warmer weather arrives.

Roy Langevin, in charge of the men's gymnasium and boys' group work, announces that all young boys who are interested in boxing will now have a chance to work out on week days from 4 to 6 p.m. Because of the interest shown in the gymnosium, Mr. Langevin states that the gymnasium will be open six days a week and from 6 to 10 p.m. every day in order to take care of all those who wish to worn out. The gymnasium is located under the NRS offices.

Mr. Robert Bruce of Chisholm arrived in Thief River Falls Saturdoy to begin his duties as asistant band master and to give instructions to band members, to supervise the juvenile band, and to direct the woman's drum and bugle corps.

A recreation center to be known as the "Hobby Corner" will open up in the municipal auditorium Friday, March 2, in the commercial club rooms. One section will be the Arts and Crafts groups under the supervision of Mrs. Zella Zeh. Miss Alice Larsen, director of recreational activities for girls, will share the 'Hobby Corner' for girls' social meetings and use of the tables for games. When the Dramatic group is formed they will be near the Hobby Corner in their use of the auditorium stage so the two groups can work together and produce plays of merit.

Art subjects for men will be Clay Modeling, Sketching and Metal Craft. All men interested are asked to be at the 'Hobby Corner' at seven o'clock Friday evening.

Mrs. Zeh's classes are open for women during the afternoon from two to five o'clock, and for business and school people in the evening from seven to nine o'clock. Until Friday classes will be held in the basement of the Washington school. All classes are free and all are welcome. This paper has co-operated by giving the hobby corner a special corner for weekly news bulletins. See editorial page.

McLarin 'The Champ' Cuts Log in 1 1-2 Min.

Though brush is the main woody substance in Australia it gave Peter McLarin, champion wood chopper of the world, a good foundation for his profession. The local 'Paul Bunions' found the competition pretty tough, in fact it was so tough that no one claimed the fifty dollar prize that was offered to the man who could cut through the 14 inch tamarack log in one-third more time than it took Mr. McLarin.

Three local men tried to win the prize: Albert Alby of Newfolden, Willie Ackenburger of Thief River Falls and Claude Evenson also of this city. Mr. Alby came closest to winning by cutting through the log in approximately six minutes. "Bill" managed to do fine work until he decided to stop and look at the bit of his axe before finishing. It is said by his freinds that he could have done much better had he sharpened his axe before starting. To those of you who do not know "Bill", he is the colored gentleman who at one time was employed at Benson's barber shop and according to word received from his former employer he is a cousin of the one-time world heavy weight boxing champion, "Jack" Johnson. "Bill" states that his prowess came from the experience he received while in the south, where he was employed in a watermellon patch. Mr. McLarin cut through the log in one minute and thirty-five seconds, which is about one-fifth of the time that it took his nearest competitor. Mr. Alby received two axes for being the second best chopper on the program. Both were Plumb axes, one of which was given by Mr. McLarin and the other was given by Kelly's hardware.

Thief River Oil Company Suffers Fire Loss Monday

The Thief River Oil Company was the victim of a fire Monday morning at about 9 o'clock. According to reports received, the origin of the fire was in the boiler room caused by over heating. The time the fire broke out there was a large truck undergoing repair in the shop. This truck caused a lot of worry to the local fire department as it was loaded and also up on jacks; when they tried to get the truck out of the building it became caught in some water pipes and it was necessary to hook another truck on in order to pull it out of the threatened building. The damage was estimated to be in the neighborhood of $1000 caused by water and the removing of the truck from the field of danger.

Institute Worker to Discuss School Work

Miss Fern Kennedy, an institute worker from Minneapolis, will be in Thief River Falls the week of March 12 to 17 to hold discussions with county teachers. The subjects to be discussed by Miss Kennedy will be the lower grades, curricula, state examinations and rulings. There will be round table discussions held at which the teachers will have an opportunity to ask questions and to discuss all phases of school work which will be found to be very very helpful, according to Mr. Motheson, the county superintendent of schools.

CO. TO RECEIVE FEDERAL POOR RELIEF AID

State Board of Control Will Appoint Administrator of Poor

A special meeting of the Pennington County Board on Monday, Feb. 26, at the County Auditor's office, at which time the county was organized to take advantage of federal and state poor relief.

Auditor H. L. Fowler, County Attorney Paul A. Lundgren and the chairman of the board, Mr. Kinghorn had just returned from St. Paul where they had taken up the matter of federal poor aid for this county with the State Board of Relief. They were told that if the county organized for aid as provided to qualify for state and federal aid it would be forthcoming.

Under this plan which the board immediately put into effect, there will be a poor commissioner,not a resident of this county appointed by the State Board of Control. This appoiatee will be in charge of the distribution of the aid. A committee of five; two to be appointed by the county board and three by the State Board of Control will comprise the Relief Committee. This committee will have charge of all CWA work as well as poor relief, unemployment relief etc.

The county must provide office quarters and pay one hundred dollars per month towards the maintainance of the office.

Chairman Kinghorn of the Board appointed Comnisioners Paul Roy and O. M. Mandt as the boards members of the Relief Committee. The new plan will go into effect as soon as the county set up is approved by the State Board of Control.

Strongest Wood Known

The yate, one of Australia's numerous hard woods, seems to be the strongest known timber, with an average tensile strength of 24,000 pounds to the square inch and a maximum as high as 35,000—about equal to cast and wrought iron.

One Week Left in Which to Register Cripples of District

The week of March 10 being the last week that Miss Lucie Patnode has to register the cipples of this district she urgently requests that all cripples in this county register with her at once. The federal government is trying to arrange some kind of work for those who are physically disabled and Miss Patnode has been appointed to register those unfortunates in this territory. Because of illness she was unable to be in Thief River Falls during the past week as she had promised but it is still possible to register for this kind of relief work by writing either to her at Red Lake Falls or by writing to her in care of the Pennington county superintendent of schools office in this city.

Judge Julius J. Olson is Appointed an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court

Judge Julius J. Olson of Warren, Judge of the District Court of this district was appointed an associate justice of the State Supreme Court, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Homer B. Dibell by Governor Floyd B Olson on Tuesday of this week.

The new Associate Justice will native of Nordland, Nordway and is 58 years old. He emigrated to America with his parents in 1883 and settled on a farm near Lake Park, Minnesoto where the family home has been until six years ago. Judge Olson graduated from the high school at Detroit Lakes in 1887 after which he entered the College of Law at the Minnesota University. He alternated between the school and working on railroad construction and at teaching to earn his way and graduated from the law school in 1900.

Moving to Warren he became associated in the practice of law with the late Andrew Grindeland and was appointed to the district bench by Governor Theo. Christianson.

The neew Associate Justice will be sworn in by Chief Justice Devaney at nine o'clock Monday.

Court has been adjourned here until March 19th to give the governor an opportunity to select a new judge to fill the position vacated by Judge Olson.

Two members of the Pennington County Bar are being mentioned as possible successors to Judge Olson, namely H. O. Berve and H. O. Chommie.

Bemidji Routs Locals 29 to 17 Friday Night

Last Friday the Prowlers met with a reverse in fortunes when they played a very classy Bemidji squad to the tune of 29 to 17. The locals started in the lead but that lead was short lived as once the Bemidji quint got started the Prowlers never again threatened. "Buzz" Battelson again led the locals in the number of points made.

In the preliminary game the "B" squad defeated the Newfolden high school team in a very fast and exciting game by the score of 32 to 21.

As part of the dedication week program the high school basket ball team will play the Grand Forks Central team. The game is scheduled for 8 o'clock Friday night. Grand Forks brings a strong team here Friday and, as the more enthusiastic fans can remember, Grand Forks handed the Prowlers their first set-back of the season in a game payed down in Grand Forks. Mr. Dooley, local coach, says that he is sure that his boys will object strenuously to being defeated twice in two starts by the same team.

County Play-Day Plans Held Back by Weather

The recreational program for the county schools has been held back this year because of cold weather. This work will be broadened out this year if it's possible to do to include dramatic work and oratory. Miss Verna Becker, who is in charge of the 4H work in this county will have charge of these added features to the county Play-Day, which is to be held later on in the spring.

Doris and Raymond spent the week end at their home in Rosewood.

SPRING STYLE SHOW PLANS NEARLY READY

H. M. Olson in Charge of the Arrangements For Exposition

H. M. Olson, chairman in charge of the Style Shaw to be given at the Seventh Annual Auto Show, to be held March 22, 23 and 24, announces that the following merchants are planning to exhibit at the show: Oen Mercantile Company, J. C. Penney Company, Montgomery Ward & Company and Lein's Popular Price Store. The Style Show will be given on the second night, Friday, March 23, with over fifty people participating in the event. It was agreed by the merchants that there will be no men's exhibits but only women's and children's. This will be the chance for the women of Thief River Falls and surrounding teritory to see just what will be in vogue for the coming spring and summer. According to Mr. Olson, there has never been and probably will never be agian such a show witnessed in Pennington county. Even though there will be no men exhibits there is little doubt in Mr. Olson's mind that the men will be just as much or more interested in the styles as the women.

The auto show is being sponsored by the American Legion Post of this city with Oscar Paulson and Roy Ericson in charge of the arrangements. Florence Reinmutha road show "Rythm Revue" has been hooked for this event. The orchestra to play at the dances which will be given the first and third nights of the show has been announced by Mr. Paulson as being George Hardy's Purple Aces from Minneapolis.

GOVERNOR OLSON FILES MONDAY FOR REELECTION

Puts Definite End to Talk of Drafting Him for U. S. Senate

Floyd B. Olson will be a candidate for re-election to the office of governor at the general election in November. This was definitely settled on Monday when he filed for the Farmer-Labor nomination for governor.

It is quite apparent that Governor Olson hesitated to file prior to the holding of the Farmer-Labor convention, but as he explained, he took this

Washington Correspondent Describes Hectic Washington Days in 'Railway Clerk'

By Harvey O'Connor.
In The Railway Clerk.

Rich man, poor man, beggar man, thief—they all reach Washington sooner or later.

That's why Woshington is now the national capital as in no previous peace time- period in history. Each day hundreds more stream in thru Union Station from every nook and cranny of these United States to discuss the problems and to lay their complaints before this or that board or committee.

Of course the millionaire has always done that. More or less disdainfully he came to Washington, flanked by a smart attorney, to have his income taxes "adjusted," to "see" his Senator about jacking up a tariff here, prying loose state department influence there for a concession in some distant land.

The thieves, too, have always had their innings here, whether to concoct a deal with a crooked attorney general, to evade punishment thru political pull, or in the capacity as witness before a relentless senator to reveal unwillingly the sordid details of private jobbery in public affairs.

The new thing is that plain people now compose a good proportion of that stream of humanity that comes to Washington. You can see them in the lobby of the National Labor Board—truck drivers from Springfield, air pilots from Chicago, jewelry workers from Providence, coal miners from western Pennsylvania, clothing workers from St. Louis, aluminum workers from Pittsburg. And you will see the very same men and women—mostly unionists—making the rounds of Washington, to see Frances Perkins, the secretary of labor, Gen. Johnson of NRA, or one of President Roosevelt's secretaries.

It is a profound change in the national psychology that Washington correspondents are witnessing. The center of national gravity has swung from Wall Street, the mecca of the Coolidge-Hoover days, to Washington. People went—or sent their savings—to Wall Street in search of money. Today they come to Washington—in search of justice. The Wall Street gods threw them down. People don't know whether Washington will do the same thing—but they come here hopefully just the same.

The sociological pundits have a word for it—working men and women are becoming "politicalized." There ought to be a law against such words, but there's not the slightest doubt that this fact of "politicalization" is themost profound change in the attitude of American workers since the trade-unions were born fifty

Woolen Mill Meeting Here Tues. March 6

There will be a meeting for all those interested in getting a woolen mill in this community on Tuesday, March 6, at 1:30 p.m. at the court house, according to an announcement made today by Paul Harris. Mr. Frisbie, CWA engineer, will have all the information that it is possible to get on woolen mills throughout the state which he has been gathering during the past two weeks. This information will be given at the meeting.

BEER ORDINANCE IS PASSED OVER TUNGSETH'S VETO

Allows Sale of Bear Until 1 A. M. Week Days and Sunday Sale

The city council met Tuesday evening and passed the new beer ordinance over the mayor's veto. The mayor voted the ordinance Saturday February 24th and issued a statement to the effect that he thought the present hours far sale of beer were late enough and that he opposed Sunday sale. He declared himself well satisfied with the ardinance otherwise.

The new law went into effect immediately after the official city paper was off the press at noon today. It provides for sale of beer from 6 a m until 1 a m on week days and from 4 p.m until 10 p m on Sundays.

Mpls. Bridge Company to Build New Bridge Here

Bids were received for the construction of the bridge to be built in this city across the Red Lake River. The bids were turned in Tuesday, Feb. 27, and the Minneapolis Bridge Co. received the contract according to the report which Mr. Andrew Ness received by telephone from St. Paul Wednesday. The bid of approximately $55,000 was submitted by the Minneapolis Bridge Co. and the contract was awarded to them. The Mpls. Bridge Co. is the same company that at one time had their shops on Atlantic avenue in this city. They moved their equipment and office from here in the spring of 1925 to Minneapolis where they have been located since.

CAPACITY CROWD AT DEDICATION OF AUDITORIUM

Markve, Gauger, Give Talks of Interest to People At Opening

Witnessed by a capacity crowd of people from Thief River Falls and surrounding territory, the new municipal auditorium was formally presented to the people of the city, Monday by the architect, Ray Ganger, of Minneapolis. Among the interesting things that Mr. Gauger brought out in his address were: the total cost the building including fixtures was approximately $75.000, the contract was let for $47,000, the extras cost was about $1,700. These extras were fixing the jail quarters to comply with the jailing rules set up by the State Board of Control and to use tha colored stone that are used in the archway of the stoge. This extra cost amounted to about one per cent which, according to Mr. Gauger, is a very small extra cost on a building of this kind.

Arthur Markve, assistont county attorney af Hennepin county, gave the main address in which he dedicated the auditorium "to the Building of Brotherhood." The corner stones were named by Mr. Markve as "Good Government, Cooperation. Art, and Religion," without which, Mr. Markve stated, no community could progress. These various names were elaborated upon until one could get a fairly accurate conception of just what was meant. The speaker also brought out thot he would like to see the laborers who worked on the building occupying seats of honor as well as the ones wha supplied the brains to motivate the erection of the building.

Those who occupied "seats of honor" were: Emil Griebstein, Carl Christofferson, P. O. Myhrum, Walter Jung, W. K. Knight, Nels Olson, Theodore Qualc, Bert Norby, Ray Ganger, Morris Bye, Mrs. Thora Nelson, P. G. Pederson, Arthur Markve, Mr. Orr, Father Merth, Rev. E. A. Cooke. Mayor E. L. Tungseth was unable to attend the dedication exercises because of the death of a brother.

March 5, 8 O'clock is Set For Monthly P. T. A. Meet

The March meeting of the Thief River Falls P. T. A. will be held in the Lincoln high school auditorium at eight o'clock, Monday evening, March 5.

The meeting will be opened with assembly singing led by Mrs. H. L. Sjorgen. Mr. Morris Bye, Supt. of city schools, will deliver an address on "The Child's School." Mrs. Doris Halvorson Pope will play two piano solos: "Fantaisie Impromptu," by Chopin, and "Malcguana" by Lecuona. She will also present one of her pupils, Celeste Crown, who will play "Two Larks," by Leschetihzky.

Lunch will be served at the close of the meeting. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Verdict of $4,960.66 Given to Backstrom

The case of Nels G. Backstrom vs. the New York Life Insurance Co. was decided in favor of the former by a district court jury at 3 o'clock this morning after having been out since 8:10 Wednesday evening. The verdict in favor of Mr. Backstrom was for $4,960,66.

This is the third time this case has been tried, the two previous times the verdict was returned in the favor of the insurance company. The trial was the outcome of the death of a son of Mr. Backstrom, the insurance company contended that the death was a suicide while Mr. Backstrom claimed that it was an accidental shooting.

Because Judge Julius Olson was formerly an attorney in the case Judge C. R. Magney precided.

72 ARE DEAD IN U. S. STORM AREA

Eastern Cities Fight New Traffic Tieup—Snow, Cold, Accidents Claim Lives.

Chicago—Storms sweeping the United States from the Rocky mountains eastward blanketed more than half of the country, leaving a toll of 72 dead due directly or indirectly to the weather. Street and highway traffic was made hazardous and Atlantic coast shipping was endangered. Mail and passenger planes were grounded during the storms.

Low temperatures prevailed, particularly in the central west and the mountain states, extending south to Amarillo, Texas.

Fifteen killed and more than 100 hurt in a tornado in the Mississippi area. Eight dead in the crash of an air liner near Salt Lake City. Three dead in southern Illinois accidents. Nine dead in the Theta Chi fraternity house at Dartmouth college, Hanover, N. H., of carbon monoxide from a faulty furnace. Five were dead in western Pennsylvania. Six persons were burned to death in a hotel fire in Utica, N. Y.

Two persons were killed and four others injured when the locomotive of a Pennsylvania railroad train turned over with the seven coaches as they were derailed in a collision with a truck at Deephos, Ohio. The train was running behind time because of weather.

The engineer of a train in Maine was killed when his locomotive was derailed by snow.

An unidentified man froze to death at Elizabeth, N. J.

The storm caused cancellation of all army mail schedules to and from Newark, N. J., airport, and all commercial schedules also were cancelled. Planes were grounded in other parts of the storm area. New York city battled to prevent another transportation tieup.

Transportation in the storm areas was slowed up but not tied up as completely as last week's blizzard in the east, when many places were completely isolated for hours.

John J. McGraw Dies in the East.

New York—John Joseph McGraw died in a hospital at New Rochelle, N. Y., after 10 days of critical illness. He was believed recovering from a severe attack of uremic poisoning when he suffered a sudden relapse. At the bedside of the famed baseball leader were Mrs. McGraw, Charles A. Stoneham, president of the New York Giants, and other friends and relatives. McGraw's death came as a shock to the baseball world after bulletins indicated he was making hopeful progress. McGraw, who became a major league player when 18, had a long career in baseball, with 30 years in managerial positions. He piloted the Giants to 10 National league pennants and three World Series triumphs.

George N. Peek heads Trade Aid Bank

Washington—George N. Peek accepted the presidency of the export-import bank and at the same time announced that a second bank was being set up to handle trade with Cuba and a third would be formed to deal with other foreign countries. Peek said he wanted to make it clear that the bank had been created for the purpose of assisting our foreign trade and of providing facilities, not now obtainable in regular banking channels, for financing the seller.

Wheat Reduction Drive Will Resume

Washington—Chester C. Davis, farm administrator, said the campaign of last fall to sign up wheat growers in a compact to reduce production would be reopened. The action was taken, Davis said, in response to a widespread demand of farmers who did not sign last year.

Train Drops off Viaduct, Five Killed

Pittsburgh—Derailed as it sped into the Pittsburgh yards, the engine and tender of a Pennsylvania passenger train toppled 20 feet to the street below and five persons were killed and about 40 injured as several of the coaches left the rails. The cause of the derailment is unknown.

Time Machine

It was Anthony's first ride in a railway train, and the succession of wonders reduced him to a state of hysterical astonishment. The train rounded a slight bend and, with a shriek of its whistle, plunged into a tunnel. There were gasps of surprise from the corner where Anthony was kneeling. Suddenly the train rushed into broad daylight again, and a small voice was lifted in wonder.

"It's tomorrow!" exclaimed the small boy.

Ostrich Flesh Proves to Be Really Good Eating

Ostriches are now being bred on a large scale at the Moscow zoological park, not because of any noticeable revival in the feather market, but because some one has discovered that the flesh of these birds makes fine eating, says a writer in the Detroit News.

Through use of incubators and a method which is described as forced breeding, officials of the park have been able to obtain a yield of 15 to 16 chicks a year from each pair of adult ostriches. When fully grown they weigh 100 to 135 pounds.

The ostriches appear to endure the cold climate of Moscow surprisingly well when it is considered that their native habitat is in a semi-tropical country. It is believed that the thick layer of fat beneath the skin that serves as insulation against too much heat at home protects them from the cold in the rigorous climate in which they now find themselves.

In addition to the work that is being done at Moscow it is planned eventually to breed large numbers of ostriches in the southern steppes of the U. S. S. R.

"Entered as second-class matter, April 27, 1932, at the post office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, under Act of March 3, 1879."

WE TURN ALL THE CARDS FACE UP

With this issue the Forum publishes the Pennington county financial statement, and according to agreement with the county board at the time the contract was let, this issue is being sent to every taxpayer in the county, as far as such is possible. Anyone who may have been overlooked can secure a copy at the Forum office, without charge.

Altho the publication this year was taken by the Forum at less than one-third the price that the county has been charged in the past, a new law passed at the last regular session of the legislature contained a joker which will in this case cost the county about one thousand dollars.

Under the old publication laws the county financial statement was published three times in the official newspaper of the county. The first insertion, maximum rate under the law was 90 cents per folio and the two subsequent insertions at 45 cents per folio. Many lawmakers, especially those from the smaller counties felt that this was an excessive cost, arguing that one publication properly distributed would be sufficient. A bill was introduced in the house of representatives which provided for one insertion only. This would have cut the cost by fifty per cent. The bill was referred to the committee on printing and publishing; composed of editors and publishers only. This committee evidently feeling that a nice pork barrel graft was about to slip from them, tried to pigeonhole the bill. When the authors insisted upon action, they amended it to provide for two publications of the financial statement, once in the official paper, and once in some other paper in another part of the county. They argued that this would give better circulation of the statement and would lower the cost. Therein lies the joker. The second publication becomes actually a first publication for the paper that gets it and is therefore subject to the first publication rate. Therefore, whereas the cost in th past with three publications was a total of $1.80 per folio, (legal rate) the cost under the new law becomes also $1.80 cents per folio, (legal rate) for only two publications.

An effort was made by Representative W. E. Day of this district and the writer to get this bill so amended on the floor of the House to change the word "shall" where it appears in the law as follows: "The County Board 'shall' provide for a second publication of the" etc., to the word "may" provide for a second publication etc. This would have left it to the discretion of the county board and would have made it possible to dispense with the second publication in counties as small as Pennington where complete coverage can be secured with one. It would have meant a considerable saving to the taxpayers. All our efforts were unsuccessful however, the newspaper profession in the legislature are a powerful bloc and the best that could be done was to insert the following clause in the bill: "Provided however, that the County Board shall call for bids on both first and second publications.' This clause, while not as effective as was desired, nevertheless prevents unscrupulous county boards from using this second publication as a political football, and as an instrument for paying political debts at a full legal rate of ninety cents per folio, providing of course that competitive bids can be secured.

Splitting the publications between two papers was not particularly offensive to the newspaper men in the legislature for they have been doing this before. In almost every county in the state, Pennington county included, one paper has submitted a bid at legal rate which for want of other bids had to be accepted by the board. The official paper would then proceed to "split the graft" with the other papers to reward them for staying out of the bidding. This may or may not explain why the St. Hilaire Spectator has not submitted a bid in former years.

In order that the reader may know just what is meant by folio measurement of legal printing, we will explain that four folios set in the small type usually used in legal notices occupy about three and a half inches of space one column wide. At the maximum rate which the law allows; that is, ninety cents per folio, this means a charge for one insertion of $3.60. When it is considered that the rate for space in the average country newspaper ranges from 15 cents to 35 cents per inch, one column wide, some conception of the graft that the newspapers have perpetrated on the taxpayer is gleaned.

When bids on the official printing for Pennington county was opened by the county board on January 2nd, the bids were as follows: the Thief River Falls Times bid for first publication; 35 cents per folio. (The lowest rate charged by this firm before Forum competition existed was 80 cents per folio). The Forum bid was, for first insertion, 25 cents per folio. An honest bid, if the reader will consider the rate information given above. The St. Hilaire Spectator bid for second publication was 75 cents per folio.

The bid received for second publication seemed so excessive to the board that they asked the Forum publishers if we would be willing to rent our type set-up to the Spectator or print a supplement for them at a nominal sum, if he on his part would agree to give the county the benefit of the saving. This we agreed to do and the cost of the supplement to the St. Hilaire publisher would not have exceeded $25.00. When Commissioner Roy called him on the telephone asking his cooperation, the St. Hilaire publisher refused to consider the offer.

The supplement contained in the St. Hilaire Spectator last week was set up in the shop of the Times and the supplement furnished to St. Hilaire by them. The statement as published in the Times of last week was the same set-up. It is interesting to know that the publishers of the Times and of the Spectator were in conference for about two hours on the Saturday evening preceeding the submitting of bids for this printing. We have very good reasons for believing that this conference cost the taxpayers of Pennington county something like $800.00.

We have no quarrel with anyone for trying to make a living. We know that contracting is a tough game and few contractors get rich. The honest contractors generally go broke. Collusion among contractors is being practiced on every hand and the consumer pays the freight, whether it be as a taxpayer or otherwise. What we do object to is such contractors parading about as community builders and public benefactors as the Times did when they announced that altho they will not get paid for it they will publish official records as a 'service to their subscribers". They are getting paid for it. Between them and the St. Hilaire Spectator they got 75 cents per folio for publishing the financial statement.

As the campaign rolls around this summer we will expect the Times to write some nice editorials censuring the state administration because there has been colution among paving contractors.

Tuesday's news dispatches told us that Judge Julius J. Olson of Warren has been appointed by Governor Floyd B. Olson to fill the unexpired term of Supreme Court Justice Homer B. Dibell. The Forum wishes to compliment the governor on his excellent choice to fill this most important position.

Judge Olson has been an outstanding jurist, having established a fine record of fairness and clearsightedness in his decisions, since he became judge of the district court.

His appointment to the Supreme Court leaves the judgeships in the fourteenth judicial district in the unusual condition inasmuch as there will now be two judges to be voted on in the fall elections. The person appointed to fill Judge Olson's place, as well as the Wiliam Watts position being before the voters. It is also unusual by the fact that it will bring two entirely new men to the bench at the same time; Judge Watts having announced that he will not seek reelection.

At the time that Judge Watts announced that he would resign due to ill health; a decision which he later withdrew when his physical condition showed some improvement; we agreed with other liberals and party members that in fairness to the district, a man from the south part of the district should be favored with the appointment to fill Watts' unexpired term. This in spite of the fact that we have here in this city a man exceptionally well qualified for the office in H. O. Berve. In company with other members of our party, we asked that the governor appoint M. A. Brattland of Ada, another liberal exceptionally well fitted for the office, and having the advantage of residing in that part of the district most entitled to consideration.

Now the situation is reversed. A vacancy is created in this end of the district and we feel sure that we voice the sentiment of the vast majority of the liberals in this end of the district when we say that the governor should give serious consideration to Mr. Berve when casting about for a capable, conscientious successor to Judge Olson.

Thief River Falls is strategically located to serve this end of the district to the best possible advantage and Mr. Berve is without question one of the best qualified attorneys in the district. He is known for his thoroughness; for his fairness; and for his knowledge of the of the law. His high ideals places him head and shoulders above the average members of his profession. Such a combination of circumstances can not be improved upon.

PLANNED RUGGED INDIVIDUALISM
Union Advocate

Senator William E. Borah made a short significant statement this week when he charged there was no difference between the rugged individualism of Herbert Hoover and the planned industrialism under the NRA. Labor is rapidly becoming aware of this fact.

More than 2,500 industrial codes have been written by the rugged individualists since last July. Approximately 257 of these codes have been accepted by the President and are now in force. All other industries are operating under the so-called blue eagle agreement between employers and the President. This blue ankle agreement is better known as the blanket code. It outlaws child labor. It recognizes section 7 of the National Industrial Recovery Act, and specifically provides for collective bargaining free of intimidation. It definitely provides that no workers shall be denied the right to belong to a legitimate union; that no worker shall be discharged because of his union affiliations, and makes it mandatory that the chosen representative of any union he heard be the employer.

Yet thousands of union men have been discharged because of their union affiliations. Hundreds of fake company unions have been organized in flagrant violation of section 7 to the exclusion of recognized Labor organizations. Factories have been closed by their owners in protest against unionization, and a great mass of evidence of wholesale violations of the NRA has accumulated in General Hugh Johnson's office Nothing is done to enforce the NRA. Compliance boards wink at violations of the blue eagle blanket code and refuse to take action. Here and there a small retailer or shop owner has been chastized by the czar of the NRA. But the real violators are unmolested.

This is all due to the fact that employer associations have dictated the terms of the NRA codes, and having dictated the terms have have dictated the policies of the National Recovery Administrator. They have raised prices and lowered wages; they have organized company unions and refused to recognize legitimate Labor organizations. They have dominated the compliance and regional boards and kept Labor representatives in a minority on all important Labor-industrial bodies.

This is "planned industrialism." It is nothing more nor less than rugged individualism under a new name and dignified with a lot of governmental regalia which means nothing in practical application.

THE STATE INCOME TAX
St. Louis County Independent

The invalidation of the state income tax enacted at the last session of the legislature by a district court in St. Paul, is no doubt gratifying to those who receive an income that would compel them to pay a tax, and some of the newspapers are lauding the judge for his decision.

While efforts have been made to secure a constitutional amendment that would permit of the enactment of an income tax law, the efforts have proved futile, although the staunchest opponents of an income tax have admitted that it was the only fair method of taxation, but they were afraid of what the legislature might do if such power was placed in its hands.

Propaganda galore was spread against the income tax amendment, some even going so far as to intimate that no matter what income a person might receive, the income would be subject to a tax, and as a result of this propaganda the amendment was defeated.

It is the inability of getting before the voters of the state the true facts regarding the income tax proposal that has caused its defeat. Those who are able to pay an income tax are the ones who control the means of publicity and they use it to the utmost, befuddling the minds of the voters to such an extent that a great many of them fail to vote on these important questions, and this is a vote in opposition.

The question of the validity of the income tax law will no doubt be taken before a higher court before the matter is settled.

Contract Bridge
Conducted by
W. C. STEPHENS
Culbertson System Instructor

Question, Mrs. C. F., Minneapolis: How should partner respond to an informative double? With a bust, should he pass?

Answer: If the doubler's left-hand opponent passes, doubler's partner is unqualifiedly forced to bid unless his hand is so strong that the pass is for "penalties." With a "bust" hand, partner should pass if there is an intervening bid, as a bid in this case would indicate strength. Without such intervening bid, a simple takeout should be made on from nothing to 1½ honor tricks. With approximately two H. T., a jump takeout is in order to indicate strength. With a stopper in opponent's suit and at least one H. T., one notrump is strength-showing; with two plus H. T., two notrump. With a strong trump suit combined with a hand of more than two H. T., a double jump bid may be made. Always keep in mind the 2-3 and the 4-5-6 count. They are always reliable friends in your bridge bidding.

Question, E. J., Thief River Falls: Should an opening bid of one notrump show greater strength than a suit bid? If so, why?

Answer: Yes. Because the notrump opening bid may be caught between two strong hands and crushed with a severe penalty. Review the 4-5-6 principle. With the suit bid, the use of trumps for ruffing would naturally assist in making the penalty less severe. Always prefer a suit bid, even if shaded approximately one-half Honor Trick, to a notrump. Never open with a shaded bid suit if your honor trick strength in the hand is a minimum.—you need a little reserve.

shelter and food for all.

No citizen can point with pride to a system of industry which makes so many things that people need and desire and at the same time makes it impossible for the people to buy; nor to a system which, at the same time, permits the hunger of tens of thousands and the locking up of millions of bushels of wheat in order to maintain prices; nor to a system under which the masses are seldom more than twenty-four hours away from destitution, while the wealth of a comparative few, enjoying special privileges, steadily increases.

Until there can be devised some method which, along with rewards going to capital there shall be, at the same time, assured security to labor, the shadow of Communism will always be menacing.

Harnessed Mississippi Will Spread Many Big Benefits

This is the seventh of a series of eight articles on the nine foot channel now under construction in the Mississippi river.

The Upper Mississippi, properly harnessed with a nine-foot channel, will spread its benefits over every section of the valley. Federal law contemplates the progresive extension of joint rates and through routes for the transportation of freight jointly by rail and river, with a fair division of the carrying charges between the two mediums.

The river is simply an open public highway to the ocean and the world's markets. Its use is not limited to a single corporation as are rails and terminal facilities of a railroad. It may be used by anyone who has any sort of watercraft to place upon it. It can be and already is used by competing companies engaged in common carrier business. It is used by contract carriers, carrying freight under contract for certain manufacturing or producing patrons. And some manufacturers operate their own private towboats and barges to carry their own products.

Since the river is a public highway, its use would only be hampered if its traffic were regulated as it has been necessary to regulate the transportation monopoly owned by railroads. It never has been necessary to regulate lake or ocean traffic as to rates, because competition saved the public from excessive charges. There is no monopoly of water transportation.

It has been necessary, in the public interest, to regulate railroads, but even this regulation has not been completely successful. Although earnings of rail lines are regulated, many millions of dollars' worth of fictitious capital has been issued, and the public has been forced to pay rates which allow earnings on this inflated capital. It is this very situation which has shown the necessity of using the rivers. Anything that serves to hamper or limit the use of water highways simply helps to continue the system of rate gouging from which this landlocked region of the United States particularly is suffering.

Hobby Corner

The Hobby Corner opens Friday in the Commercial Club rooms in the new auditorium.

Schedule: March and April for those to whom the winter days and evenings seem too long. May and June for those who are well nigh bursting with springtime inspirations.

Any girls who want to do something different but is not sure what might stop stop in and talk to Alice Larson between four and six afternoons or seven and ten evenings.

Women interested in art, home beautification, or design are invited to meet Mrs. Zeh between two and five afternoons or seven and nine evenings.

Friday men will have their inning with Mrs. Zeh ready to listen to their preferences among clay modeling, Sketching, and Modeling.

If anyone cleans his attic and finds games of old equipment, even an old screen or congoleum rug which might be of use to others, the Hobby Corner would appreciate the donation at any time, the sooner the better.

TO A FARMER

Nay, measure not thy lands by rod or mile,
For these are only units of extent;
But measure thou with heart-throb and with smile
When evening comes to close a day well-spent
And cheapen not thy soul with vain regret
At what the marts of trade from thee withhold!
For all about thee, if thou look aright,
Are God's free gifts beyond the price of gold!

Thou hast above thee skies of deepest blue;
O'er hill and dale untainted breezes blow;
Beneath thy feet the yearning soil awaits
To do thy bidding—if thou will it so.

Thou hast the glorious sunset of the plain;
Bright feathered songsters greet thee at the dawn;
Thou hast the fruits from garden, field, and tree,
That bid thee feast when summer days are gone.

The lowly beast and fowl their tribute pay
To recompense thee for thy kindly care.
Good friends are they, and guiltless of all guile;
They love and serve, and many a burden share.

Fret not thyself that fortune hath not smiled;
But humbly count the blessings that are thine.
And take thou time from striving after wealth,
To make thy home a refuge and a shine!
Far from the jostling throng, live thou thy life,
Nor heed the phantom voice that bids thee roam.
Stand thou a king of thine own realm, and say . . .
"Behold, indeed, my Kingdom and my Home!"
—Humphrey W. Jones.

old friend lard for frying as well as for other purposes.

Whatever fat is used must be clean and free from residue of previous fryings. If fat is strained through a cheese cloth after each using, it may be used many times. There are various tests for the temperature of fat while frying. A frying thermometer which registers up to 600 degrees is, of course, the most accurate, but experience will show the cook how to test by dropping cubes of bread into the fat to brown in a varying number of seconds according to the food to be cooked.

A timetable [illegible] deep fat frying follows:

Croquettes, most other cooked foods, oysters, thin fish and fish cakes, 390 F. Bread test, 40 seconds.

Fritters, doughnuts, most other uncooked foods 360-370 F. Bread test, 60 seconds.

French fried potatoes, 395 F. Bread test, 20 seconds.

Anchovy Turnover.

Roll pastry thin and cut in small squares. Spread lightly with anchovy paste, with chopped ham, or with grated cheese. Dampen edges of pastry and fold over diagonally. Press edges together and fry in deep fat at 390 F. until light brown.

French Fried Onions.

1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup water
2 tablespoons oil
1 egg white
10 or 12 large onions
Milk

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add water, beat smooth; add oil. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Slice onions one-eighth inch thick. Separate into rings. Reserve small rings for other use. Soak in milk to cover one hour. Drain and dry, dip in batter and fry in deep oil at 395 degrees Fahrenheit until light brown. Drain on soft paper.

old friend lard for frying as well as for other purposes.

Whatever fat is used must be clean and free from residue of previous fryings. If fat is strained through a cheese cloth after each using, it may be used many times. There are various tests for the temperature of fat while frying. A frying thermometer which registers up to 600 degrees is, of course, the most accurate, but experience will show the cook how to test by dropping cubes of bread into the fat to brown in a varying number of seconds according to the food to be cooked.

A timetable [illegible] deep fat frying follows:

Croquettes, most other cooked foods, oysters, thin fish and fish cakes, 390 F. Bread test, 40 seconds.

Fritters, doughnuts, most other uncooked foods 360-370 F. Bread test, 60 seconds.

French fried potatoes, 395 F. Bread test, 80 seconds.

Anchovy Turnover.

Roll pastry thin and cut in small squares. Spread lightly with anchovy paste, with chopped ham, or with grated cheese. Dampen edges of pastry and fold over diagonally. Press edges together and fry in deep fat at 390 F. until light brown.

French Fried Onions.

1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup water
2 tablespoons oil
1 egg white
10 or 12 large onions
Milk

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add water, beat smooth; add oil. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Slice onions one-eighth inch thick. Separate into rings. Reserve small rings for other use. Soak in milk to cover one hour. Drain and dry, dip in batter and fry in deep oil at 395 degrees Fahrenheit until light brown. Drain on soft paper.

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS
Pennington County Board

MEETING OF FEBRUARY 26, 1934

Pusuant to call, a Special Meeting of the Pennington County Board was held Monday, February 26th, 1934 at 10:00 o'clock A.M. in the office of County Auditor.

Members Present: Lee, Kinghorn, Roy, Ness and Mandt.

Members absent: None.

The Auditor announced the meeting had been called for the purpose of discussing the proposition of Pennington County organizing for the purpose of qualifying for a grant of Federal Poor Relief.

County Auditor Fowler reported that the Committee appointed by the Board at meeting February 13th, consisting of himself, County Attorney Lundgren and Chairman Kinghorn had taken up the matter of this County receiving Federal Poor Aid with the State Board of Relief at St. Paul on Friday February 23rd, and had secured a proposition from them which was as follows: That the State Board would organize this County under Federal Regulations, which would require that they send some party not a resident of this County to Pennington Couny to act as Administrator of Relief in Pennington County. That a committee on Relief would be organized to supervise the work, Two members of said committee to be appointed by the County Board from their membership and three members to be appointed by the State Board of Control. That this committee and the Administrator would then have full charge of administering Poor Relief and Federal Civil Works Administration aid in Pennington County. When so organized the State Board would pay all relief aid rendered in the County including ordinary medical attention, but in case of any major operations that might entail a heavy expenditure this expense would be borne by the County if the County saw fit to authorize the service. Ordinary medical service and all relief expense of any other nature would be borne from State Allotment. For this service the County would have to agree to pay the sum of 100.00 per month toward expense of supervision and furnish the Administrator with an office and care for the incidental expense of maintaining the office such as phone, postage, etc. He explained that this proposition was more liberal than in most Counties, but was made to this County in view of the fact that Pennington County has borne the entire burden of poor relief up to this time with no Federal or State Aid.

Commissioner Ness moved that Pennington County proceed to organize to meet the Federal Requirements for Poor Relief and that chairman of County Board be authorized to appoint two members of the County Board to act on the Committee for this County. Motion seconded by Commissioner Roy and carried.

The Chairman of the Board announced the appointment of Commissioners Paul Roy and O. M. Mandt to service the Relief Committee.

Commissioner Roy moved that the Board interview the City Council and Library Board with a view of securing appropriate quarters for Relief administrator in either the Auditorium or Library Buildings. Motion seconded by Commissioner Lee and carried.

Commissioner Ness offered the following resolution and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS the Governor of the State of Minnesota and the State Board of Control have allotted to the County of Pennington from funds made available to the State of Minnesota by the Federal Relief Administrator under provisions of the Federal Emergency Relief Act of 1933 a grant for carrying on direct relief and for work relief, for relief of destitution, the hardship resulting from unemployment and other such causes within said County, and

WHEREAS, the administration of said appropriation for such relief work is subject to such rules and regulations as may be established from time to time by the Federal Relief Administrator and the State Board of Control as the State Welfare Agency; and

WHEREAS, the County of Pennington is a County operating under the County System of Poor Relief with the responsibility for the support of the poor placed by law on the Board of County Commissioners of said County of Pennington, and there is consequently no body or committee whose sole function is the care of the poor, and because it is apparent that the problem of caring for the poor has reached such proportions as to necessitate the creation of a committee whose sole responsibility shall be the administration of relief funds, and

WHEREAS, in the judgment of the Board, the acceptance of said relief funds and the administration of same strictly in accordance with the Federal Relief Act of 1933, and the rules and regulations established by the Federal Relief Administration and the State Board of Control of the State of Minnesota will be of great assistance to said County of Pennington in discharging its responsibility imposed by law for the care of poor, and will result in benefit to the people of the County.

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED by the Board of Commissioners of Pennington County, that the County of Pennington hereby accepts much allotment of Emergency Relief funds and any additional allotment of funds which may be made in the future and agrees to expend all County Funds which are available or which may be available and agrees to use and administer the same for the objects and purposes specified by the Act of Congress, the Federal Relief Administrator, the Governor and the State Board of Control of the State of Minnesota; and for the purpose of providing a suitable county-wide agency for the administration of said relief funds this Board hereby resolves that a Relief Committee consisting of five members be and hereby is designated and established to be known as the Emergency Relief Committee of Pennington County, with power and authority to carry out all of the orders, rules and regulations of the Federal Relief Administrator and the State Board of Control with reference to the administration of said funds within Pennington County. Said Relief Committee, to consist of County Commissioner Paul Roy, County Commissioner O. M. Mandt, and three additional members to be selected by the State Board of Control, all of said members to serve as members of said Committee without compensation.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that said County Emergency Relief Committee shall have full authority to supervise the expenditure of both Federal and County Funds as well as any state funds which may be made available in the future. Said County Emergency Relief Committee shall have authority in consultation with the State Board of Control to appoint such workers as may be approved by the State Board of Control to carry out the purposes of the County Emergency Relief Committee. The Principal paid employee of said County Emergency Relief Committee shall be known as the County Relief Worker and shall be directly responsible for the expenditure of all relief funds within the County. It is understood and agreed that the Board of County Commissioners shall authorize and empower the said County Relief Worker to sign County Poor Orders in order that the function of the Emergency Relief Committee in administering all relief funds in the County and coordinating all relief activities may be more fully carried out.

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Board of County Commissioners agrees to provide a suitable office space, furniture and fixtures, typewriters, adding machines, postage, stationery, light, heat and telephone which may be necessary for the efficient operation of the County Relief Office.

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, THAT the County Auditor shall furnish the County Emergency Relief Committee with a statement of the monthly expenditures from County Funds of all poor relief expenditures within said county classified in accordance with the form prescribed by the State Board of Control.

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Harry L. Fowler, County Auditor, or other such person or persons as may be designated by the Governor of the State of Minnesota are hereby authorized to issue orders or drafts upon said relief funds in such form as shall be prescribed by the State Board of Control and the Governor in the expenditure of such relief funds for any and all relief purposes as shall be first approved by the Emergency Relief Committee of Pennington County in accordance with the rules and regulations prescribed by the State Board of Control.

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that said, relief Committee shall have authority to perfect its own organization by the selection of a chairman, vice chairman and secretary.

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that said Emergency Relief Committee shall have authority to carry on said relief work from such central office or offices in the County Court House or other suitable place as deemed necessary and advisable.

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that said Emergency Relief Committee shall have authority to carry on any and all activities leading to the coordination of the efforts of all relief agencies within said County.

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that it is understood that Federal Funds are to be considered only suppmental to local funds and that the Board of County Commissioners will make a maximum poor relief levy in order to more fully discharge their liability for the support of the poor and will do everything within their power to cooperate with said County Emergency Relief Committee and the State Board of Control to provide for the support and care of poor persons residing within said County.

IT IS FURTHER UNDERSTOOD and agreed that the allotment of any funds to said County of Pennington shall in no way bind the Federal Relief Administrator or the State Board of Control to furnish additional funds to said County.

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Board of County Commissioners agrees to choose two of its members to act as its representatives on the new Emergency Relief Committee. It is understood with the formation of this new set-up, the old C. W. A. Committee ceases to exist.

Motion for adoption of the foregoing resolution was seconded by Commissioner Mandt and unanimously carried.

Commissioner Lee moved that the Special meeting adjourn. Motion seconded by Commissioner Roy and carried.

H. W. KINGHORN,
Chairman County Board.

H. L. FOWLER,
County Auditor.

Only Way

The man with a black eye and badly scratched face, who was smashing up a new, good-looking car with a sledge-hammer, naturally attracted a crowd. He would hit the car, pause, take a deep breath, and hit it again. He aimed blows at the running-board, mudguards, radiator, and windscreen.

"Your car?" asked a bystander.

"My car," said the man, as he smashed a headlight.

He surveyed the result and grunted with satisfaction. Then he handed the hammer to a garage man—who it turned out, had lent it to him—got in the car, and drove off. As he disappeared the garage men explained what it had all been about.

"That fellow got mixed up in a fight last night," he said. "Got badly knocked about, so he stayed at a hotel instead of goin' home. Called up his wife and told her he'd been in an accident. So"—the garage man shrugged his shoulders—"so he had to have an accident."—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Believe it or Not!

You have repeatedly been told about the economy in the New Ford V8 during 1933 which to some people is thought exaggerating so we quote you an example of a trip made by four local men the fiist part of October 1933 in a 1933 V-8 Standard Tudor.

The four occupants of the car were Carl Wennberg, Geo. Baken, Rudolph Sagmoen. and Ardell Robinson. 3,700 miles were mave on this trip which took them through the large cities of Chicago, Albany, New York, the Twin Cities, Buffalo, Baltimore, Niagara Falls, Washington, Pittsburgh, Detroit and Schenectady at which pointe many sight seeing tours were made with considerable stopping and starting. They also drove through the Alaghany mountains.

On the open road they travelled as fast as 85 miles per hour and averaged 60 miles per hour. In spite of this high speed they averaged 18 miles per gallon, added no oil between each 1,000 miles, added no water on the entire trip and at no time out of high gear. This is not a guess figure as an accurate record was kept for the purpose of dividing the expense. The above participants of the trip will verify these figures if necessary. This gives you an idea of the remarkable economy that can be obtainep with the New Ford V-8 driven at a moderate speed. The New Ford V8 for 1934 is more economical due to Dual Carburation and Dual Intake Manifold which according to tests will give you 2 1-2 miles more per gallon.

We would like to give you more facts about the 1934 Ford. Immediate deliveries can be made.

Morro Castles

There are two Morro castles in Cuba, the famous Castillo del Morro at the entrance to Havana bay, which was constructed before 1600, and the Morro castle at Santiago on a promontory to the right of the bay, built by General Pedro de la Rocca in 1640. There is a third castle of this name in Puerto Rico. El Morro is Spanish and means a promontory.

Title of Esquire

The title of Esquire was not recognized until the reign of Richard II, and it was confined to the younger sons of peers and their eldest sons, the eldest sons of barons and knights, and a few others by virtue of the office they held. As a courtesy title it is accorded to barristers, bachelors of law, arts and divinity, consuls, and others.

POTATOES MERIT PLACE ON MENU

Some Misconceptions Regarding Food Value.

By EDITH M. BARBER

One of the best food habits and one which almost all families have is that of putting potatoes on the menu. Actually there is perhaps nothing that contributes more for the price we pay for them than potatoes. I find there is a popular misconception of the value of the potato in the diet. How often I hear, "I don't eat potatoes; they're so starchy!" "We don't have potatoes often, they're so fattening!" I really do not know how the potato gained this false reputation. Actually, as far as caloric value is concerned, one medium-sized potato ranks with one apple, one small banana and one large orange in providing us with 100 calories. Compared with most other vegetables it is true that the potato is higher in calories, but at the same time it supplies us with some of the most important food nutrients, which we must have daily, and at a very low price.

All vegetables and fruits have a very large proportion of water. The potato is about three-fourths water. The other one-fourth contains enough protein to be of value and enough starch to give us calories, again at a low price. At this point I might say that by the calorie we measure the fuel value of food and that each one of us daily must have a goodly supply of these fuel units to maintain life. It is only extra calories which are fattening. At the same time that the potato gives us calories and protein it gives us worth-while amounts of phosphorus and of iron and comparatively large amounts of vitamin B, G and C, as well as some vitamin A. It is also a "basic" food in case that interests you. Nutritionists who have been working so hard this year to plan well-balanced meals on the smallest amounts of money possible have found that half the money spent for vegetables should be used for the purchase of potatoes in order to make the most of the small amount available.

When potatoes are baked the largest amount of nutriment is retained. If the skins are carefully washed and then greased slightly there is no reason why they should not be eaten, except perhaps by the smallest children. Many people are very fond of the skins of potatoes. The next best way of cooking them from the nutriment standpoint is to boil them in the skins, which come off so easily that very little of the potato itself is lost. It seems to me there is nothing much better than potatoes properly baked or mashed. I use "properly" in this connection because, although it seems that nothing could be easier than to bake a potato, we too often are served with a soggy, watery product. I like to use a hot oven at first and then reduce the temperature after the first fifteen minutes. As soon as the potatoes are soft when they are pressed with a towel they should be removed from the oven and broken open at once to let out the steam.

To mash potatoes I like to put the hot potatoes through the ricer and then to add hot milk, a bit of butter and seasoning, and to beat them thoroughly. Mashed potatoes should be served at once. They do not improve by standing. This is one of the reasons why we all prefer home-made mashed potatoes.

There are, of course, dozens of other ways in which potatoes can be utilized to advantage. It is a wise plan to bake or boil enough for at least two meals. The left-over baked or boiled potatoes can be creamed, fried or dressed in many different ways. Mashed potatoes may be made into puffs, croquettes or into old-fashioned potato cakes which taste so good for lunch, or even breakfast.

Do not scorn the potato, which is one of the contributions made by the western continents to the whole world.

Stewed Potatoes.

3 cups diced potatoes
2 cups milk
Salt
Pepper
3 tablespoons butter

Melt the butter in a frying pan, add the potatoes and seasoning, and stir over the fire until the fat is absorbed. Add the milk and cook slowly about half an hour. More milk may be added if needed.

Lyonnaise Potatoes.

3 cups cooked potatoes
2 onions, sliced
4 tablespoons butter or bacon fat
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
Salt

Heat the fat in a frying pan and cook the onions in it a few minutes. Add the potatoes and cook slowly, stirring occasionally until all sides of the potatoes are gold brown. Season with salt and pepper. Press flat with knife and shake over low fire until brown on bottom. Turn like an omelet. Serve on a hot platter with finely chopped parsley sprinkled over the top.

DEEP FRYING IS EXACT SCIENCE

Woe to the Cook Who Trusts Solely to Color.

By EDITH M. BARBER

French fried potatoes are very popular, as you may observe in any restaurant even if you yourself never order them. At home, cooking potatoes in this way is often the only occasion when deep fat is used. Of course there are some houses where the doughnut jar is kept filled with the home-made product, and the housekeeper will usually plan some dish for luncheon, such as codfish balls or croquettes, in order to use the fat kettle to advantage when she fries them.

If you like your fish balls with bacon, try frying the latter in deep fat as well as the former. The result is a crisp bacon exactly right in color and which holds its shape when used as a garnish. Fish fillets are also delicious cooked in deep fat with bacon as a garnish and savory. They may be dipped in a batter or simply rolled in flour.

There are a number of other foods which are particularly good cooked in this way. French fried onions, for instance, can be made at home so that they will rival those which have made several restaurants famous. Egg plant cooked in this way we are all familiar with, but I had French fried squash for the first time not long ago. A lattice cutter was used to cut Hubbard squashes for this purpose. Sweet potatoes are not so commonly used as white for the usual French fries; but they are very good cooked by this method.

Other meats beside croquettes and bacon may be cooked in deep fat. Liver, cut in cubes, will be crisp and tender if cooked this way a few minutes. Lobster and shrimp if dipped in a batter will remain tender. I do not care for chops or cutlets fried in deep fat unless they have been steamed first. You probably have been offered, as I have, underdone breaded veal cutlets or pork chops at some time.

In selecting deep fat for frying, be sure that it has a neutral flavor. One of the cooking oils or one of the vegetable fats can be used as well as lard. As they have a higher smoking point than lard, some persons prefer them. Others prefer to stick to the

A Valuable Asset.

If you have health, then, you have an asset of immense value. Endeavor to keep well, therefore, if you wish to succeed. Remember you can worry yourself into illness, just as you can indulge in food which does not agree with you and have acute indigestion or just as you can neglect any of the known health rules and get sick. Keep yourself mentally and physically well.

There are few persons who have not ability in some line of work and accomplishment. Realize this and make the most of whatever the thing or things are. These are some of your assets. There are persons with endless ability who fail to succeed, because they do not recognize their capabilities.

Germany's Only Gold Mine

The little town of Reichenstein, on the Silesian-Czech frontier, which has only 2,500 inhabitants, is renowned for its possession of Germany's only gold mine. The mine's yield of the precious metal is 18 pounds a month. Reichenstein gold used to be famous. In the Sixteenth century the amount worked from the Reichenstein mines was over 20,000 ducats. The great Fugger family owned 145 shafts in the Seventeenth century and many royal rings were made from the gold.

Squaring of a Circle

The squaring of a circle is attempted in the Rhind Papyrus, 2000 B. C., the oldest known mathematical book by Ahmes, an Egyptian priest. Since that time this famous problem has been studied by Archimedes, 200 B. C.; Huygens, 1654; Newton, Liebnitz, and many others.

Desert Animals' Habits

Many desert animals aestivate, or sleep throughout the summer, just as a large number of animals in cold climates hibernate during the winter.

Moles Are Not Blind

Moles are not blind, but the eyes of the common garden mole of the eastern United States apparently serve little purpose as organs of sight. They are very small, sunken and almost completely hidden by the fur and skin. Eyes of the western or Townsend mole have not degenerated as far as those of the eastern variety, as they often open wide when the animal is disturbed.

'RAILWAY CLERK' DESCRIBES HECTIC WASHINGTON DAYS

year ago. The railroad workers, of course, have felt that influence for many years as the result of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Esch-Cummings act and succeeding railroad legislation. But it was foreign to other workers. To them Washington was merely the seat of corruption, at the worst, or at the best, of mere speechifying by vote-grabbing congressmen.

The docket of the national labor beard will convince any doubter of the great change of the past nine months. One week's list of cases before the board represent the complaints of thousand, evea tens of thousands of workers in Dundalk, Md., Duluth, Minn., Chicago, Rockford, Ill., New York city, Bellingham Wash., and Los Angeles. Clothing workers, lockmakers, radio workers, machinists—for the most part newly organized workers—are laying before the board cases originating for the most part in the refusal of employers to recognize their unions and deal with them collectively.

Very frequently in those labor board sessions the old cry is heard—"This is my business and I'll run it as I see fit." That merely draws a smile in Washington nowadays. The old philosophy of individualism is as dead as the dodo, even if it doesn't know it. The day is gone when a boss can say that sweatshop wages, long hours, refusal to deal with his workers collectively is "my business." It's everybody's business. Not a railway clerk, or machinist, or school teacher, or technician in the land but hasn't a direct interest in seeing that decent wages and working conditions prevail thruout industry.

The New Deal is putting on a grand show in Washington nowadays and fortunate the man or woman who has a ringside seat to watch it. The President says there's a niae billion dollar deficit and smiles— and so does everyone else. Congress pitches into a mere $2,000,000,000 farm mortgage guarantee bill, and gives it three hours! A row of jaunty financiers pass before Senator Black's subsidy committee and tell how they iuvested $200 in Superterranean Aircraft and now they're worth $10,000,000. A hundred slick and oily public utilities pirates come to town to put over a code that copper rivets the power trust's monopoly over your electricity, gas and power. An NRA administrator airily dismisses mere consumers from a widely-heralded hearing on price changes caused by NRA codes.

The issue of unionism in the eteel industry comes up, and five industrial members of the national labor board, casually sitting in their offices on the fourth floor of the Department of Commerce building failed to go up to the seventh floor to assume their seets on the tribunal.

Through it all the President sits in the White House, dispatches a tremendous volume of work, sees senators and congressmen, politicians, industrialists, labor leaders — and smiles. Twice a week the correspondents, a hundred of them, troop into his study for the regular Wednesdey and Friday press conferences. If the President is carrying a tremendous burden on his shoulders, he doesn't show it. He bandies a quip with a reporter, flicks an ash from his cigar, adjusts his glasses, and proceeds to discuss a rearrangement in veterans' schedules. Then questions—an endless stream from reporters representing every section of the press in every part of the country. How about the postmaster in Los Angeles; have you given any thought to who's going to get the job? Will $350,000,000 more be enough to see CWA through? Anything new of Weirton steel? What's happened to the newspaper code? Is it true that the St. Lawrence waterway treaty means that British warships can bombard Chicago.

A casual jest parries an unwanted question, a "yes" or "no" settles an involved situation, or an extended explanation, "For background only," gives the White House view of the Cuban situation.

Gathering news in Washington is largely a question of racing from one conference to another—particularly for the correspondent who is held more or less responsible for everything. At 10 in the morning he is down to see Gen. Johnson, red-faced and husky-voiced, to find out what's happening to this or that code, to hark-ups; to Ford's defiance of Section 7A, to charges that NRA is stimulating monopoly and exhorbitant price increases. The General smiles only occasionally; usually he 's gruff in a good natured way, nearly always frank in telling what's on his mind.

The reporter then races over to Harry Hopkins's conference at 10.00. Hopkins is CWA and federal administrator, a compound job with plenty of headaches in it. An assistant explains the federal relief census just that two-fifths of the persons on relief are children under 16. Then the scandals of CWA. Politicians here, there, everywhere, are using it to reward hangers-on, to pick plums. Questions shoot in from Pittsburgh, Denver, Chicago reporters, asking how about so-and-so in their balliwicks. And how about Mr. X, who says, how come that CWA workers riding around in automobiles? That's the kind of question that makes Hopkins explode.

Attorney General Cummings may be holding forth at 11, Secretary of Labor Perkins at 11:30. Or on a dull day the correspondent travels the mile up to the "hill" to take in Senate and House committee hearings, beginning at 10:30, and the Senate which convenes after noon.

The afternoon is more of the same. A mad whirl.

The correspondent gets little chance to reflect on the significance of the show until Sunday—unless he's the kind of correeponlent who has to be on tap seven days a week. This correspondent, on a Sunday, when he sits down to reflect on the week's and month's happenings, would set down observations something on this order:

1, Every sign points to war. It proceeds now on the economic battlefield, waged with managed currencies, embargoes, subsidies to exports, quota systems, struggles for markets, a general effort to set up every country as a little self-contained world of its own. And hardly anyone notices it. The navy asks for $516,000,000 and 102 more ships, in addition to 32 now being built out of PWA funds. The Assistant Secretary of War brags in 'Liberty' about how the army is ready to suppress riots and disorders—riots of hungry men and women. The Japanese and British jingoes point to increased American naval expenditures and demand—and get—bigger navies for themselves. A mad race for more armaments, paid for by crushing taxation of the peoples of every land. And hardly a word said in protest.

The President of the United States presents the biggest gamble in American history to Congress in the form of a $9,000,000,000 deficit based on the assumption that industry in 1936 will be operating at about 98 per per cena of normal. How does he know? What if as many good economists say, "normal" from now on will be the 1930-33 average, somewhat under 70 per cent of the precrisia average. That means 10,000,000 unemployed. Can the budget be balanced in 1930 with 10,000,000 or even 5,000,000 unemployed? If it can't, the next step is uncontrolled inflation.

3. NRA has degenerated into mere "self-government by industry," the frankly announced goal of Gen. Johnson. But self-government by the sleek pirates in charge of American business and finance merely means charging all the traffic will bear, gouging the consumers, underpaying the worker, starving the farmer off his farm.

4. As yet there has been no change in the labor provisions of the recovery act, comparable to the provision in the emergency transportation act, regarding company-financed company unionism, or out-and-out compulsion to the big anti-union industries to recognize and deal with bona fide unions. The chances are the law will not be rewritten in this session of Congress. So far the auto, steel, rubber and other basic industries have defied unionism successfully, and the National Labor Board has been impotent.

These are somber reflections, after an exhilirating Monday-to-Saturday workweek watching the Washington merry-go-round. But readers of the Railway Clerk will do well to check them up in the light of their own observations.

FRENCH MISSION TO SEEK CAMP OF MOSES

The French archeologic mission returned recently from Palestine has announced that a motor road now leads to the summit of Mount Nebo, the Palestine mountain, whereon Moses is supposed to have died as he contemplated the Promised Land. Tourists now may speed at a mile a minute up a splendid road to look over the Land of Canaan, contrasting with the heartbreaking climb of Moses, who spent a week on the journey.

The French mission made such satisfactory progress in its excavations atop Mount Nebo that it was decided to send another mission as soon as work can be resumed. It is hoped that some trace of Moses, or of his camp, can be found.

Thus far not a single piece of evidence has been found to confirm that portion of the Bible story. Atmospheric and climatic conditions have changed the country east of the Jordan and, while it may have been a rich plateau in Moses' day, it is comparatively poor land today.

According to native legend, Moses buried on top of the mountain an inscribed stone with instructions and lessons for his followers. Thousands of stones were dug up, but none bore even a suspicious mark. It is for such a stone that the Franciscan mission is looking.

Typography

Typography, producing as it does the books, newspapers, and magazines, accounts for the bulk of commercial printing, and likewise it has been found to be the cheap and practical method of getting out the greater part of the world's stamps. Processes differ with the various stamp printers as a result of their experience, but on the whole typographed stamps are uniform and generally carefully executed.

Concordia Concert Band To Appear Here Mar. 11

The Concordia Concert Band of 45 members will appear here Sunday, March11, at 2:30 p.m. under the auspices of the Thief River Falls municipal band, in the auditorium. This organization is the one that journeyed to the Century of Progress Exposition last summer as the official bend of the Norwegian Kingdom.

By tireless and conscientious effort Prof. Holvik, director of the band, has built up an organization that now, according to well known critics, is one of the finest bends in the United States. This band was engaged by the Livingston, Montana Rodeo Assosociation in 1930 and made such an impression that efforts have been made every year since to secure their services at this rodeo.

Any resident of the State of Minnesota can well be proud to identify this band as one of the Minnesota bends because of its fine records both at the World Fair and on their various other tours.

Miss Naomi Swanson, the county school nurse, states that she has received very good response to the announcement that a reduced rate will b given to those country school children who want to have dental work done now.

Gov. Olson Files for Reelection Mon.

step in order to confirm his "repeated past declarations that it has been and is my intention to run for governor and not for senator.

The "draft Olson for Senator" propaganda has created a great deal of confusion among Farmer-Laborites throughout the state. While the vast majority of the rank and file of the party would gladly see the governor elected senator, they have a feeling that he should serve as governor for another term. Moreover, there is a sentiment among them that to precipitate a conflict within the ranks of the movement at this time would not operate to the advantage of the Farmer-Labor ticket at the polls next fall

Will Support the Ticket

In his statement to the press at the time of filing, the Governor stated that Senator Shipstead had informed him that he would file for senator on the Farmer-Labor ticket, and that he would campaign with and for the other candidates of the party for the state and national offices.

There is no gainsaying the contention that there is today considerable opposition to Senator Shipstead's indorsament for re-election to the Senate. The Senator's failure to support the ticket two years ago as well as in 1928 and 1930 has aroused much antagonism to his candidacy in Farmer-Labor circles. Even so it is generally recognized that his senate record, in the main, has been satisfactory.

Governor's Statement

Governor Olson also states that he has several important tasks recently undertaken which he desires to finish. His statement follows:

"I am filing for governor today in advance of the convention of the Farmer-Labor association, in order to confirm my repeated past declarations that it has been and is my intention to run for governor and not for senator.

"Some time ago Senator Shipstead informed me he would file for senator on the farmer-labor ticket, and that he would campaign with and for the other candidates for the Farmer-Labor party for state and national office. I will not, therefore, become a candidate against him, by reason of being drafted or otherwise.

"From a personal standpoint I would like to finish, as nearly as possible, many tasks undertaken during my administration of office. If the people of the state believe I am worthy of re-election as governor I will be glad to serve them again."

Farmer-Laborites Pleased.

It is a certainty that the governor's decision to again seek the governorship will be pleasing to more than 90 per cent of the Farmer-Laborites of the state though there are, of course, a considerable number who would have been more than pleased to have him enter the race for United States senator.

THIEF RIVER FALLS FORUM

VOL. 2 NO. 49 OFFICIAL PAPER OF PENNINGTON COUNTY THIEF-RIVER FALLS, MINN. THURSDAY, MARCH 8, 1934

DISTRICT B. B. TOURNAMENT TO START TODAY

Prowlers to Play Plummer In First Tournament Game Thurs.

Last Friday night theProwlers defeated the strong Grand Forks basket ball team 28 to 24. As the game started it looked like another defeat for the Prowlers as their opponents lost no time in getting started on their way towards victory. Their success was short lived, however, as the locals seemed to be all over the floor and soon overcame the lead of seven points that the visitors had piled up during the opening minutes of play. The first quarter ended 11 to 7 in favor of the home team due to the fast-breaking forwards and the tight defense put forth by the guards. The second quarter opend with the Prowlers again taking the aggressive and the play during this period was much the same as during the preceeding period of play with the score being 16 to 7. The third and fourth quarters were repitions of the first and second with the game getting rougher as the play progressed. During the third quarter one Grand Forks man objected to the referee's decision and he made the mistake of telling him so, which no one but the captain has a right to do, by which act he was ordered off the floor.

Plans were made for the district 13 basket ball tournement to be held in Crookston March 8 and 9 at the Crookston Hotel in Crookston Minn by the district committee. Because George Lee cannot be present, the matter of getting an official for the tournament to replace him was taken up. The chairman was authorized to secure either Verne Smith or Kenneth Mullen both North Dakota University students highly recommended by Coach C. A. West.

On the basis of the eight-team plan approved by the committee last December Thief River Falls, Crookston, Warren, and East Grand Forks were declared eligible for the district tounament as class B and C high schools, and Plummer, Climax, Fisher and Oklee were found to be eligible representing the class A high schools. The rankings of the schools mentioned are as follows:

Class B and C High Schools

	Won	Lost	%
1. Thief River Falls	5	1	833
2. Warren	3	3	500
3. Crookston	2	4	333
4. East Grand Forks	2	4	333

Class A high Schools

	Won	Lost	%
1. Plummer	7	2	778
2. Climax	5	2	715
3. Oklee	2	1	667
4. Fisher	3	2	600

On the basis of the above percentages the teams will be paired as follows for the preliminary games on Thursday fore noon:

9 o'clock East Grand Forks vs. Fisher 10 o'clock Warren vs. Climax; 11 o'clock Crookston vs. Oklee; 12 o'clock Thief River Falls vs. Plummer.

Semi-Final Games

pionship game. 8 P.M., Friday loser of game No. 5 vs. loser of game No. 6 for third place.
9 P. M. Friday, District Championship Game.

The Regional basket ball tournament will be held in Thief River Falls Thursday and Friday, March 15 and 16, at the new auditorium.

Sandeen's New Cafe to Have Gala Opening Soon

The restaurant in the basement of the Chevrolet garage will be ready for opening some time within the next week according to an announcement made by Mr. Sandeen today. The basement has been plastered and painted and decorated until now it could compete in looks with the best night club in the northwest. It has gold and white walls and ceiling, with red and green tables and chairs. The lights are set in the ceiling in such a manner that they throw a soft light thru red, green and clear glass shades.

The exact opening date has not yet been set but an announcement will be forthcoming in a short time.

FLASH

Crookston, Minn. Mar. 8—The Prowlers defeated Plummer at the district basket ball tournament this morning 25 to 23.

M. A. Brattland of Ada, who was recently appointed District Judge by Governor Olson, to fill the vacancy caused by the appointment of Judge J. Olson to the State Supreme Court.

NEW 3RD STREET BRIDGE TO COST $78,479; ELSBERG

Construction by Minneapolis Bridge Builders Will Start Soon.

The Third Street bridge in this city was one of the seven contracts for bridges let by the State Highway department announced on March 3rd. Projects are in Pennington, Hennepin, Pine. Red Lake, and Polk counties Bids were rejected on a bridge at Red Wood Falls on T. H. No. 19 and two raiload underpassed on T. H. No. 45 at Scanlon because bid prices were considered too high compared with cost estimates. These jobs will be readvertised according to the announcement.

Construction of the bridge here was let to the Minneapolis Bridge company at a price of $78,749.09. It will have five spans with a total of 316 feet. Contract has been entered into by the city of Thief River Falls to install electric lighting cables and to light the bridge as a part of the street lighting system of the city.

The bridge will be of the low steel arch type with no overhead structure and there will be a 32 foot driveway with two walks of 6 feet on either side. There will be a concrete abuttment between the driveway and the walks.

Definite date for beginning construction has not been announced, but it is expected to be started in the near future.

City Postoffice to Get Cleaned Out Thru NRS

It was announced by the National Reemployment Service Monday that the cleaning of the city post office project for women has been approved. This project will result in the placing of eight needy women in jobs.

The women's quota of 22 is being maintained in Pennington county through projects in sewing, library work, knitting, spinning, clerking and stenography. Women interested in employment as housemaids are asked to register or renew their registrations by Carol Lillo, director of the Woman's division, as many private placements of domestic help are now being made.

Thronson to Handle The Oliver Agency

An announcement was made by T. M. Thronson of the Thronson Motor Co. today to the effect that his firm has completed arrangements to take over the agency of the Oliver Farm Machintry for this territory. Mr. Thronson states that the Oliver line of farm machinery is very complete and consists of well known makes of implemenas, and that his firm willl pay particular tatintion to the wants and needs of the farmers in the farm machinery line.

The Oliver Farm Equipment Company is a consolidation of several of the oldest farm machinery concerns in America these are the Hart-Parr Tractor Co., the Oliver Plow Co., the Nichols and Shepard Thrashing Machine Co., and the American Seeding Machine Co., all well known manufactorers of their special line of equipment.

Bernice and Irma Anderson arrived here from Chicago where the former has been employed as a beauty operator.

Numbers Played by Concordia Concert Band Seldom Heard Outside Professional Bands

The program to be played by the Concordia Concert Band at the auditorium, Sunday March 11 will offer some numbers seldom heard outside of concerts by professional bands and symphony orchestras.

One of the numbers is "Dance of the Hours" for "La Giconda" by the Italian composer Amilcare Ponchielli. This delightful ballet is very orchestral in nature, but when competantly handled by wood-wind instruments it proves to be an exceptionally fine band number.

Another of high merit is that riot of rhythm, "Rhapsody Espana," by the Spanish composer Em. Chabrier. While the composition moves in the characteristic three-eight time of Spanish dances, a stricking background of two-beat rhythm is presented by the accompanying sections.

A recent composition by the Danish-American composer Carl Bush is also included in the Concordia Band's program. This composition carries the descriptive and suggestive title, "A Chant from the Great Plains." This symphonic episode has been inspired by an Indian scene illustrating early life in the West. The calm of a summer day, the fury of the wind sweeping over the land, the signal calls and war dance are all interwoven to make in a real sense a chant from the great plains. It is fitting that such a contribution to American music by Scandinavian composer should be included in the concert program of an organization from a college that in a very real sense represents the northwest.

Among the other numbers on the program may be mentioned the charming "First Norwegian Rhapsody" by our famous Dr. F. Melius Christianaen; the familiar "Largo" from the New World Symphony by Dvorak; and the ever popular overture, "William Tell" by Rossini.

As soloist the Concordia Band will present Donald Berglund, a young flutist with exceptional talent and ability.

Filing for County Office Starts With 3 Candidates

Three filings for county offices have been made to date with county auditor H. L. Fowler, T. P. Anderson Pennington county auditor for many years and until January first postmaster of Thief River Falls has filed as a candidate for the position of county auditor as has Geo. M. Gunderson erstwhile county superintendent of schools. He was defeated for that position four years ago after serving two terms.

Arthur Rambeck of this city has filed for the office of sheriff. Several rumors of prospective sheriff candidates are floating about but up to today no other has taken the plunge and plunked down their ten bucks on the auditors mahogany.

Thief River Falls Second at District Declamation Meet

At the district declamation contest held in Crookston on February 28, East Grand Forks won three first places. Congratulations to Superintendent Reishus and his forensic department! The number of points awarded to the different school in the sub-district contests and the districts contest are:

East Grand Forks	45
Thief River Falls	18
Warren	16
Red Lake Falls	10
Plummer	10

The district declamation trophy, therefore, is awarded to East Grand Forks. The first place individual medals are awarded to the three contestants that represented East Grand Forks in the district contest.

NEW FARM AID PLAN OFFERED AT L O' L MEET

John Brandt Suggests A Plan Whereby Surplus Can Be Pooled

The biggest and best district meeting in the history of the organization, using the words of Mr. Brant, President of the Land O' Lakes Creameries and principal speaker at the meeting, was enjoyed last Saturday by the joint meeting of Districts 14 and 17. Nearly 2500 dairymen took advantage of the fine spring weather and assembled in Thief River Falls for the meeting.

The attendence award, based on the number attending and the distance traveled, for district 17 went to the Cearbrook creamery whose total number of visitors was 121, registered, who traveled a total of 7,700 miles; second place went to the Grygla creamery whose patrons numbered 146 and who travelled a total of 6,000 miles.

President Brant's address explained a new agriculture relief program which called for a control pool to absorb the surpluses due to seasonable variations this plan would be applied to only a few of the major products. He justified his plan by the recent successful experiment in the stabalizing of the price of butter. Mr. Brant also pointed out in his address the fine financial condition the creameries were in, in spite of the general depression.

Stuart McLeod president of the district 17, presided over the meeting; the high school band under the direction of S. P. Orwall, opened the meeting with a few selections, after which Mayor Tungseth gave his address of welcome in which he praised the organization and leaders.

Jungs Sponsor Bakery Tour For Benefit of Drum Corps

Housewives of Thief River Falls have been invited to a tour of inspection through Jung's Bakery on March 14 between 4 and 11 P. M. Jung's Bakery has agreed to pay to the Women's Auxillary Drum Corps twenty-five cents for each over eighteen years old who visit the bakery on this day, the total sum not to exceed $200.

Work will be arranged so that as possible of the preparation and the baking of the products can be seen by the visitors, Walt Jung announced and out of town visitors are invited to join the inspection.

ATTENTION!! Farmer - Laborites

An unsigned letter purporting to be a press release is being mailed to the newspapers thruout the northwestern part of the state announcing a "Farmer-Labor" meeting at Detroit Lakes on March 24. The letter and call carries no identification marks by which its source can be determined and inquiries of the Ninth District Farmer-Labor association officials reveals the fact that it is an unauthorized call. It is given prominent headliness in all opposition papers. The secretary of the Ninth District association, H. O. Berve of this city states that he knows nothing about the meeting and that the first he had heard of it was when we showed him the letter received by this office.

All county chairmen, committee men and other party workers are hereby notified that the meeting is not an official call.

The official call for the Ninth District conference will be sent out within a few days, Mr. Berve stated and will carry the signature of the Ninth District officials. "The press release you have received looks very much like 'Niggars in the Woodpile,' Mr. Berve stated, and officials of county units and others interested are urged to take no part in the Detroit Lakes meeting."

No City Mail By Carriers On Monday Afternoons

Because of the government economy program the city postal carriers service will be dispensed with on Monday afternoons, effective at once. All employees will be given one day furlough per month. Persons expecting important mail Monday afternoon are advised to have it sent special delivery, Mr. Smith, the assistant postmaster says.

CONCORDIA BAND DIRECTOR

Prof. J. A. Holvik, director of the Concordia College Band of Moorhead which will play a concert at the new auditorium Sunday afternoon March 11, at 2:30 p. m.

FARMER-LABOR'S CO. CONVENTION HERE MARCH 16

Delegates to be Chosen to District and State Conventions

Township elections are to be held March 13 immediately after which township Farmer-Labor caucuses will be held. These caucuses are to choose delegates to the County Convention which will be held in Thiof River Falls March 16. Townships may each elect two delegates to the county convention and all regular members of the Famer-Labor Association are automaticslly delegates to the convention. The county convention is called for the purpose of selecting delegates to the 65th legislative district convention which is to be held in Oklee at a date not yet announced, to select delegates to the ninth congressional convention which will probably be held in Erskine at a date not yet announced, and to select delegates to the state convention. Delegates will be chosen to the district conventions on the basis of one delegate to each 100 votes polled for Governor Olson in the 1932 election and to the state convention on the basis of one delegate for every 1000 votes polled for Governor Olson in the last election. Pennington County is allowed under this ruling 33 delegates to the district conventions and 4 delegates to the state convention three based on the total vote and one delegate at large. The state convntion will be held in St. Paul March 27. The county convention will also elect officials for the next two years; a County Chairman, a County Secretary and Treasurer, and a County Executive Committee.

Contract Bridge Lessons In Catholic Club Rooms

Last Saturday evening the Contract Bridge Club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Werstlein. Accommodations were made for twenty-four players. Miss Alice Staples won high award with a score of 3,410.

Owing to increased interest in Contract Bridge, arrangements have been made wherby all future Saturday evening meetings will be held in the newly-decorated club rooms of the Catholic Church which will accommodate forty players. The Lesson-Lecture by Mr. Stevens is from eight to nine o'clock after which bridge is played. A Contract Bridge tournement is arranged which will be played later in the season.

Fred C. Proehl of Hallock, state receiver for closed banks in that territory, visited in the city Monday evening.

DON RIETZLOFF TO BE MASTER OF CEREMONIES

Dedication of Legion Memorial Room to be Held Thurs. March 22

Don Fitzloff has been engaged as the Master of Ceremonies at the Seventh Annual Auto Show to be held in the new auditorium March 22, 23, and 24, under the auspices of the Elmer Ecklund post of the American Legion.

So far 24 automobile models are listed for exhibition along with flowers electrical and industrial exhibitions which will make this a show worth atteading, according to an announcement from Mr. Paulson. He further states that the newly organized Auxiliary Drum Corps will make their first appearance in new uniforms duriag the exposition. George Hardy's Purple Aces will furnish the music for the vaudville, Style Show, and for the dances which will be held each evening.

In the planning of the new auditorium one room was set aside as a Merorial Room to the Veterans of Pennington County, this room will be dedicated on March 22 and an elaborate program is being prepared for this occasion. There will be a banquet at 6:30 P. M. followed by the dedication services in the main auditorium at 8 P. M. following which will be a vaudeville show and dancing. Invitations are being extended to all members of the American Legion in the state to attend, and plans are going foreward for a ninth district rally at that time. State Commander, Mike Murray, State Adj. C. A. Zwiner, the State President, the Ninth District Commander, Dr. Harry Hedin, and the district president, as well as Carlisle Madson, Grand Chef de Gare of the 40-8 and many other prominent members of the State Legion and the 40-8 are planning to attend. This will rank next to a district convention in size and, according to Mr. Paulson, the members of the Elmer J. Eklund Post will do their utmost to show the visitors a good time.

Democratic Convention In Crookston March 15

The ninth Congressional district meeting of the Democratic party and friends of the Roosevelt Administration will be held in Crookston Minn. March 15. The Democratic National Committeeman, Anna Dickie Olsen and Hon. Joseph Wolf will attend this meeting which will be held in the basement of the Methodist church at 6 o'clock. This meeting will be featured with a supper and it is expected that Adolph Bremer, father of the recently kidnapped Edward Bremer of St. Paul, will be at the meeting.

Mrs. Olesen is considered as the foremost woman orator in the United States and was on beard the Roosevelt Special in its tour of the many states during the Presidential Campaign last fall. She also campaigned the entire state of California in behalf of William McAdoo who rode into the United States Senate with the Democratic landslide. Mrs. Olesen has spoken on several Chautauqua platforms at various points throughout this country and will have a message well worth hearing; she is also chief of the N. R. S. in Minnesota.

Tickets will be available through the Democratic County Chairman, Judge N. W. Tarrent of this city.

FOSHAY, HENLEY TO SERVE TERMS

Utility Promoters Must Surrender Within 30 Days on Mail Fraud Sentence.

Minneapolis—Wilbur B. Foshay and Henry H. Henley must serve 15-year terms in federal prison for using the mails to defraud in connection with their operation of the vast Foshay public utility enterprises which crashed into receivership in 1929 with a loss of millions of dollars to investors.

Convicted at their second trial in Federal Court here two years ago and sentenced to serve 15 years in Leavenworth prison and pay fines of $1,000 each, Foshay and Henley appealed their case first to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, where they lost, then to the United States Supreme Court.

Now the highest court in the land refused to review their case and there is no further appeal.

Foshay is now in Colorado, where he is manager of a stone quarry. Henley is in Minneapolis, operating a small public utility business, which he started soon before his trial opened.

The government proved that Foshay and Henley made fraudulent representations in offering stock in the Foshay company and its related companies for sale, and in the manner in which they manipulated its books. They were tried twice, the first trial ending in a jury disagreement. After one of the lengthiest trials in Federal Court, they were convicted just two years ago.

They both must surrender within 30 days to begin their terms in the penitentiary.

New Deal to Stay Says Roosevelt.

Washington—The first year of the Roosevelt administration slipped into history as 12 months of unprecedented action and expirement designed to raise a fear-stricken nation from depression. At all around consciousness in affairs of government by the people of the United States has been one of the most salient features of the last year, President Roosevelt declared in a speech at the American University. Speaking here, the President asserted the new deal was not temporary but was pointed to eradicating the deeper causes of the immediate illness and of many other illnesses of the body politic.

Johnson Asks 10 Percent Cut In Hours

Washington—In line with President Roosevelt's plea, a 10 per cent slash in hours of labor and a corresponding increase in pay for industries under NRA was outlined by Hugh S. Johnson at meetings called to discuss methods of re-invigorating the recovery unit. Johnson, NRA administrator, made it plain that his proposal was tentative but that for some time such a plan, by a blanket presidential order after the completion of present code revision conferences, had been foreseen.

CWA Will Wind Up Task March 30

Washington—The civil works program is expected to end March 30, a full month ahead of the scheduled closing. Harry L. Hopkins, emergency relief and civil works administrator, announced all civil works employes in cities of 5,000 or over would be dropped from civil works March 30 and taken over by work divisions of state and local relief administrations April 1.

Insull is Ordered Out of Greece.

Athens—Police notified Samuel Insull, Chicago utilities man, that he must leave the country at once. The government insisted on Insull's departure because it feared the American government would be angry if Insull were sheltered here longer. Originally he was to be expelled Jan. 31, but won extensions of time on the plea of illness.

Purdue Averages 43 Points to Win.

Chicago—Purdue left a total scoring record of 512 points for coming Big Ten basketball teams to shoot at as they won the Big 10 conference battle. The Boilermakers averaged a fraction less than 43 points per game, while holding its opposition to an even 27 per contest. Wisconsin placed third, Iowa fifth and Minnesota seventh.

Gets 30-Day Term, Asks for Year.

Ashland, Wis.—Disappointed when Judge T. A. Humphrey gave him a 30-day sentence in the Ashland county jail for vagrancy, Joseph Goslin, pleaded with the judge to give him a year's sentence in state prison at Waupun. Goslin said he had been at Waupun before and likes the accommodations.

AUTO INSURANCE WILL NOT BE COMPULSORY

All Minnesota automobile drivers are not compelled to carry liability insurance by the financial responsibility law now in effect, according to a bulletin from the state highway department.

"The Minnesota act is not a compulsory insurance law, such as is in force in some states," says Highway Commissioner N. W. Elsberg. "A driver can carry insurance or not, just as he chooses— unless he:

1. Kills someone while driving;
2. Drives under the influence of liquor or drugs;
3. Commits a felony in connection with a motor car;
4. Is convicted three times within 12 months of reckless driving;
5. Fails to stop after an accident;
6. Fails to pay a judgment of over $100 in connection with a motor accident.

"The driver who does any of the things enumerated will lose his license and will be unable lawfully to drive a car in Minnesota. To regain the right to drive, he must put up a bond or insurance policy in the sum of $5,000 to $10,000 for death or injury and $1,000 for property damage. In lieu of the bond or insurance policy, a cash deposit of $11,000 may be made.

"The measure protects the public against the reckless and irresponsible driver, without penalizing the careful motorist."

LIVESTOCK EXCHANGE RENEWS EFFORTS TO GET RAILROADS TO ABSORB SWITCHING CHARGE

William P. Dolan, secretary and traffic manager of the St. Paul Live Stock Exchange, late Tuesday renewed his efforts to bring about the absorbtion of live stock switching charges on light minimum carloads. The roads ordered to absorb the $4 per car switching fee out of their regular freight charge, effective on Nov. 22, 1933. This meant a saving of thousands of dollars a year to shippers by rail coming to this market and removed one of the handicaps under which this market operated previously.

Mr. Dolan Tuesday had a conference with the Minnesota Lines in St. Paul, at which time he presented his facts and arguments for absorbtion of the swiching fee on light carloads as well as on standard minimum cars of livestock coming into the market. The officials of the roads asked to have some time to consider the evidence and digest the facts before giving their answer to the appeal.

The Great Western, Rock Island, and Burlington roads already absorb the switching charge so the matter is before the other roads that traverse this state and come into the St. Paul market.

Where the shippers pay freight on less than standard car minimums they are not now relieved of the switching fee. The roads recently voluntarily put into effect this plan for lower freight on part car shipments to compete with truck traffic and it did not bring the roads under the orders of the state railroad and warehouse commission in connection with the absorbtion of switching rates.

FIGURES DO NOT INDICATE MEAT FAMINE IN U. S.

Production reduction seems to be the fashion now-a-days, especially in the live stock industry, but from all available figures, it does not look as if the country is facing a meat famine, states the weekly livestock market bulletin issued by the Central Cooperative Association, St. Paul, Minnesota. A decrease is shown in the number of hogs in the United States on January 1, but the cattle population has increased and sheep population is about the same.

Hog population of the country as of January 1st this year was 55,976,000 head or approximately 8 per cent below a year ago and the smallest since 1930. In spite of the six million pigs and 200,000 sows slaughtered last fall, the January 1st count was only 3 per cent below the ten-year average hog population. While the reduction is expected to elevate prices, pork and lard stocks held in storage by packers must not be ignored when considering the hog market. On February 1st this year, pork stocks were 36 per cent larger than a year ago and lard stocks were three times as heavy as a year ago.

Cattle population of the United States on January 1st at 67,352,000 head was nearly 3 per cent larger than a year ago and the number was about the same as during the 1910-1923 period. In 1918 the cattle population reached its peak at 71,000,000 head.

An increase of 3 per cent in the number of dairy cattle indicates that the expansion is not all in beef, altho dairy cattle eventually find their way into beef channels. Frozen and cured beef stocks on February 1st were 86 per cent greater than a year ago.

Sheep and lamb prices have been making encouraging strides upward, leading hog and cattle prices by a wide margin. Yet sheep and lamb population continues to show a slight reduction from a year ago. Stocks of frozen mutton and lamb are twice as large as a year ago, but that class of meat is merely a drop in the bucket compared with pork products.

Term "By and Large"

The term "by and large" is borrowed, according to Webster, from nautical use. A vessel which sails well "by and large" sails well on the wind or off the wind. In general usage it means in every way, in all respects.

Time to File State Income Tax Is Extended Until April 15th

A general extension of time to April 15th has been granted by the Minnesota Tax Commission for the purpose of filing State Income Tax returns which were due on March 15th. Taxpayers who desire to take advantage of this extension of time will be charged interest at 6% for the thirty day extension on any tax which would otherwise have been due and payable on March 15th.

Every person is required to file a return on his net income is excess of $1200 if single; or $2000 if married or if he is the head of a household. All taxpayers are required to file returns if their gross income exceeds $5000 irrespective of whether or not they have any net income. A credit of $250 is allowed for each person (other than husband or wife) dependent upon and receiving his chief support from the taxpayer.

Salaries of officers and employees of the State of Minnesota or of any of the cities, towns, or other subdivisions or agencies of the State are subject to tax. A taxable income in an amount equal to the value of such things. Considerations received in the form of the use of property as part of a person's compensation are taxable to the extent of the value of such considerations. For instance, a minister of the gospel or anyone else who receives his compensation in cash salary plus the use of a dwelling house, must include the rental value of such dwelling house in his gross income. Marriage fees, babtismal offerings, and other amounts received by a clergyman or religious worker for services rendered are taxable income. However, contributions made by one to whom no services had been rendered are gifts and are not taxable.

An employee of a corporation who receives compensation in the form of capital stock in such corporation is required to include the market value of such stock at the date of its receipt by him in his income. Notes received in payment for services are to be included in gross income to the amount of their fair market value at the time of receipt. Patronage dividends distributed by cooperative associations are taxable income to the recipients.

A taxpayer who sells his home during the year must include the profits on the sale in his income. If the sale results in a loss, such loss may be deducted from his income. In general, the term "gross income" includes all income derived from any source whatsoever, with the following exceptions; The value of property acquired by gift or inheritance is not to be included in gross income. Amounts received under accident or health insurance contracts, workmens' compensation acts, or by way of damages received in any suit or agreement in payment of personal injuries or sickness of the taxpayer are exempt from tax. Amounts received as compensation for the death of any member of the taxpayer's family are also exempt from tax.

Pensions, family allotments, or other similar allowances received from either the federal government or the State of Minnesota are exempt from tax. Tax exempt interest includes interest received from the State of Minnesota or the United States government. This exemption does not apply, however, to interest received from other states, nor does it apply to gains derived from the sale of tax exempt securities.

Salaries of federal employees are not taxable. In determining who is a Federal employee, it is necessary to inquire into the character of the organization by which such person is employed. In general, if the organization is a branch of the federal government, the employee would be considered to be exempt from tax.

Amounts deducted from wages of employees under a plan of unemployment insurance are not considered income of such employees and they should report only the net amount of wages received. But deductions from wages to be paid into pension funds, or any fund except unemployment insurance, are to be reported as income just as though such amounts had been received in cash wages. State employees, however, are exempted from tax on contributions to State Retirement funds.

J. P. RIORDAN BECOMES NEW GENERAL AGENT

J. P. Riordan, vice president of the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, and chairman of the emergency committee of the bank, has been made general agent of the Farm Credit Administration in the 7th Land Bank district, succeeding Leo T. Crowley, who resigned to take a position with the federal bank guarantee corporation in Washington. Mr. Riordan assumed his active duties several days ago, having been selected by the board of directors of the district at their last meeting, subject to the resignation of Mr. Crowley.

COMMISSIONER'S LOAN RAISED TO $7,500

It was announced at the Farm Credit headquarters in St. Paul this week that the commissioner's loan has been raised from $5,000 to $7,500. As nearly one-half the farmers who get loans are served through the commissioner loan, the raising of this maximum is expected to help materially in refinancing agriculture.

EMPLOYERS IN INDUSTRIES DEMAND TRAINED WORKERS

This spring thousands of young men will be completing the high schools of the State of Minnesota. Most of them will be asking these questions: "What shall I do?" and "Where can I find a job?" These two questions are two of the most important they will ever be called upon to answer in all their lives.

The great amount of unemployment today increases the number of people who are looking for employment. This increases the competition for a job.

More and more the success of the employer in his business depends on his securing the most competent labor force possible. He is constantly raising the standards of admission and setting up all kinds of tests in selecting his people.

It is perfectly natural under these conditions that employers should give preference to those young men who already had some previous training or experience.

The young man who finishes high school and then fits himself for a skilled trade or occupation, among the many of which are affered at at schoole such as Dunwoody Institute, stands a better chance of succeeding than his fellows who seek employment without the benefit of such additional schooling.

HALF OF MINN. HIGHWAYS NOW DIRT OR GRAVEL

More than half of Minnesota's trunk highway system now consists of gravel or dirt roads. Prior to the recent expansion of the system, about one-fourth of the trunk highway system were gravel or dirt, the remaining three-fourths being bituminous treated or paved.

This situation is shown by a check made by the state highway engineers on the 4,356 miles of country roads taken over by the highway department this year. Mileages of the various types of road now in the system are:

Untreated gravel, 5,043 miles; bituminous treated gravel, 2,690; dirt roads, 826; paved, 2,555. This makes the total mileage of the new system 11,114 miles. The total mileage before expansion was 6,759 miles.

Of the new roads taken into the trunk system, 778 miles were dirt roads, 3,300 miles were graveled, 228 miles were bituminous treated gravel and 49 miles were paved.

It is estimated that the counties have been spending more than $1,000,000 a year on the 4,356 miles of roads added to the state trunk system, according to the highway department. This expense from now on will be met from revenues of the state highway department, and will be lifted from the tax burdens of the counties. Funds of the highway department were not increased to meet the additional expenses, but, on the contrary, were severely decreased. The department spent less than half as much money in 1933 as in 1932.

N. D. READY TO ASK U. S. FACTORY FUND

Washington, Feb. 24—A group of North Dakota representatives, headed by A. C. Townley, Nonpartisian league leader, prepared Saturday to present to the public works administration a formal application for a loan of $4,384,286 to finance a program of state owned industries. The program calls for four woolen mills at Dickinson, Jamestown, Minot and Langdon, central storage plants at Bismarck and Minot, clothing plant at Fargo, 51 produce storage plants, general cannery in the Yellowstone irrigation basin, two shoe factories, three tanneries and one linseed oil mill.

Fort Snelling—Six hundred and twenty men are being housed and fed at the transient relief camp. This camp is one of nine in the state.

Minneapolis—Mayor A. G. Bainbridge has been ordered to bed by his physician and told to stay there for a month. He is suffering from a heart ailment.

Warren—Judge Julius J. Olson of Warren was named by Governor Floyd B. Olson as an associate justice of the state supreme court, to succeed the late Justice Homer B. Dibell of Duluth.

Duluth—This year's program calls for the planting of 30,000,000 trees on 30,000 acres in the northern forest, nearly four times as great as the number planted in 1933 when 8,300 acres were seeded.

Princeton—The Republican state indorsement convention will be held at the Minneapolis auditorium April 13, E. L. McMillan, chairman of the Republican state central committee, announced here.

Rochester—Dr. W. A. Allen, said to be the oldest practicing in Minnesota, observed his 100th anniversary here, March 6. Knights Templar and Eastern Star members held a birthday party for the physician.

Minneapolis—Ninety thousand Minnesota farmers, about 85 per cent of those eligible, will have signed contracts in the corn-hog reduction campaign by March 15, according to Dr. Andrew Boss, University Farm.

Red Wing—A church built between 1859 and 1861, known as one of the oldest landmarks in Goodhue county, will be razed. It had served for worship by members of the German Methodist church in Belvidere township.

Edina—The mill pond, once a beauty spot near the Minneapolis city limits, will be restored soon. The water level is to be raised and the shores landscaped in connection with the proposed Minnehaha creek restoration program.

Northfield—Four hundred students at Carleton College conducted a mass meeting in Skinner Memorial chapel and decided never to support the government in aggressive warfare and to take definite action towards the establishments of international peace.

Hancock—A Kandiyohi county 4-H club worker, Melvin Williams, Willmar, on his way with friends to a meeting of his organization, was burned to death when their car struck a stalled truck in a heavy fog and caught fire four miles east of here.

Minneapolis—More than 500 University of Minnesota students and graduates will be added to the 463 already at work on campus federal aid projects, by reason of a quota increase to 966, Malcolm W. Willey, chairman of the committee in charge, announced.

St. Paul—One of the largest moving jobs in St. Paul's history was completed when 40 men manning eight trucks moved the offices of the Federal Land bank from Fourth and Minnesota streets in St. Paul to new quarters in the Railroad building, Fourth and Jackson streets.

St. Paul—A drive to halt the sale of inferior spirits and poor quality whisky in Minnesota is under way, according to David R. Arundel, state liquor control commissioner. Commissioner Arundel said he has assigned two inspectors to check Minneapolis and St. Paul on-sale liquor establishments to make analysis of liquors sold over the bar to determine whether state labeling requirements are being met.

St. Paul—A home-made relief plan, government appropriations to be matched dollar for dollar by the states, to replace the CWA program in drouth areas in six north central states March 15, was evolved by representatives of those commonwealths at the relief program conference here. The work relief program virtually assures continuation of relief administration throughout the upper Mississippi valley after May 1, when CWA workers will be demobilized throughout the United States.

Minneapolis—The Golden Glove boxing tournament was held here with boys from all over the northwest competing. The champions, who successfully fought their way to the top through an entry list of 150, are: Heavyweight—Ben Blanchette, No. Dak. university; Light Heavyweight—Russ Schultz, Minneapolis; Middle Weight—Kenny Brown, No. Dak. university; Welterweight—Walter Petrie, Park Rapids; Lightweight—Lawrence Martin; Featherweight—Owen Trickey; Bantamweight—Cully Eckstrom; Flyweight—Carlyle Loverud, all from Minneapolis.

St. Paul—Further declines in the corn market is predicted by observers, according to Lloyd Eveland, government supervisor for corn loans, now in Minnesota. Government support has raised the price and when this support is withdrawn, authorities believe the price will naturally slide back. Because of this, farmers who have not taken advantage of the government loan because of advancing prices may be disappointed. Time for applying for corn loans has been extended to April 1.

Capitol News Review

by A. I. Harris

John P. Arnoldy, chief of the highway patrol, has appealed to all Minnesota motorists to dim headlights when approaching other cars at night While modern headlights are not supposed to be glaring, many of them get out of adjustment and are dangerous, Mr. Arnoldy said. In a recent test, the patrol chief found that less than 50 per cent of night drivers dim headlights at all, even after requests to do so by the dimming of other headlights approaching them. In another test three drivers out of 17 dimmed their lights. Highway officials believe drivers will respond to an appeal for ordinary courtesy to other drivers. "There is no question but that a large percentage of headlights in use on our highways are dangerous to other motorists." Mr. Arnoldy said A courtesty drive by highway patrolmen has been ordered.

Muskellunge are listed as one of the most desirable of Minnesota's numerous game fish and every angler always looks forward to the sport of landing one of these fighting members of the finny tribe. Experiments in muskellunge propagation last year at Elbow Lake met with success and authorities of Division of Game and Fish are now considering the possibilities of setting aside large areas in muskellunge lakes for the breeding of this gamey fish. Plans involve penning muskelunge in restricted areas and prohibiting all fishing in these areas.

According to orders received from Washington, CWA demobilization will be so swift and rapid that the number of Minnesota CWA workers will be down to 32,000 by the first of April. This means the the machinery recently set up by the state emergency relief committee for the gradual tapering-off of the CWA activity will be strained to the utmost between the necessity of getting under the quota requirements and handling the flood of applications for review and mediation. Demobilization must be accomplished so fast that country boards will have little time for thorough investigation. Even workers who are not laid off immediately cannot look forward to a very long continuance on the job. The quota allotments are rigid.

Don't be apprehensive if your drivers' license does not show up a day or so after you send in your applications. A last minute rush has swamped the drivers' license bureau and means you may not receive your license for several weeks. Gil Garmichael, bureau head, gives assurance that no concentrated drive on unlicensed drivers will begin for another two weeks. There are still 500,000 drivers who have not made application for license.

Not realizing that 250 citizens each day clamor for conferences with the governor, many persons make long trips to the Capitol seeking an audience. Quite often they are disappointed. If one lives a considerable distance from St. Paul it is advisable to write and ask for an appointment before one calls. This would save many a fruitless trip.

The figures just released by the state emergency relief committee, showing a drop of 41.8 per cent from January 1933 to January 1934 in the relief of load of families aided, reflects the result of SWA work in Minnesota. Most of the decrease followed the advent of that work in November, but it cannot show the full benefit of the CWA program as it affects relief needs. The peak of relief comes in March, following a steady rising curve. By every indication this curve was headed for a new high in March, 1934, with conservative estimates placing the relief load from 25 to 50 per cent higher than that of March, 1933, which itself set a record. But the rising curve was arrested and downward until at the present time it is below the summer level.

Evidence of greed has showed up here and there among those who have hay and grain to sell to the state for drought relief. In one instance a grain dealer tried to charge 70 cent a bushel for oats when the market price was about 35 cents. Hay prices have been boosted by sellers about $2 a ton. However, those in charge of buying for the state executive council, refuse to pay more than the market price. All grain and hay purchased by board is brought in Minnesota and as near to the drought district as possible. Last week the executive board voted another $500,000 to be expended for drought relief.

MINNESOTA NEWS

St. Paul—Floyd B. Olson has filed for a third term as governor of Minnesota.

Osseo—A full day's program was held in the interest of potato growing, at the annual potato day here.

St. Cloud—Railroad agents reported the theft of 1,260 pounds of butter from a refrigerator car here.

Fort Snelling—Six hundred and twenty men are being housed and fed at the transient relief camp. This camp is one of nine in the state.

Minneapolis—Mayor A. G. Bainbridge has been ordered to bed by his physician and told to stay there for a month. He is suffering from a heart ailment.

Warren—Judge Julius J. Olson of Warren was named by Governor Floyd B. Olson as an associate justice of the state supreme court, to succeed the late Justice Homer B. Dibell of Duluth.

Duluth—This year's program calls for the planting of 30,000,000 trees on 30,000 acres in the northern forest, nearly four times as great as the number planted in 1933 when 8,300 acres were seeded.

Princeton—The Republican state indorsement convention will be held at the Minneapolis auditorium April 13, E. L. McMillan, chairman of the Republican state central committee, announced here.

Rochester—Dr. W. A. Allen, said to be the oldest practicing in Minnesota, observed his 100th anniversary here, March 6. Knights Templar and Eastern Star members held a birthday party for the physician.

Minneapolis—Ninety thousand Minnesota farmers, about 85 per cent of those eligible, will have signed contracts in the corn-hog reduction campaign by March 15, according to Dr. Andrew Boss, University Farm.

Red Wing—A church built between 1859 and 1861, known as one of the oldest landmarks in Goodhue county, will be razed. It had served for worship by members of the German Methodist church in Belvidere township.

Edina—The mill pond, once a beauty spot near the Minneapolis city limits, will be restored soon. The water level is to be raised and the shores landscaped in connection with the proposed Minnehaha creek restoration program.

Northfield—Four hundred students at Carleton College conducted a mass meeting in Skinner Memorial chapel and decided never to support the government in aggressive warfare and to take definite action towards the establishments of international peace.

Hancock—A Kandiyohi county 4-H club worker, Melvin Williams, Willmar, on his way with friends to a meeting of his organization, was burned to death when their car struck a stalled truck in a heavy fog and caught fire four miles east of here.

Minneapolis—More than 500 University of Minnesota students and graduates will be added to the 463 already at work on campus federal aid projects, by reason of a quota increase to 966, Malcolm W. Willey, chairman of the committee in charge, announced.

St. Paul—One of the largest moving jobs in St. Paul's history was completed when 40 men manning eight trucks moved the offices of the Federal Land bank from Fourth and Minnesota streets in St. Paul to new quarters in the Railroad building, Fourth and Jackson streets.

St. Paul—A drive to halt the sale of inferior spirits and poor quality whisky in Minnesota is under way, according to David R. Arundel, state liquor control commissioner. Commissioner Arundel said he has assigned two inspectors to check Minneapolis and St. Paul on-sale liquor establishments to make analysis of liquors sold over the bar to determine whether state labeling requirements are being met.

St. Paul—A home-made relief plan, government appropriations to be matched dollar for dollar by the states, to replace the CWA program in drouth areas in six north central states March 15, was evolved by representatives of those commonwealths at the relief program conference here. The work relief program virtually assures continuation of relief administration throughout the upper Mississippi valley after May 1, when CWA workers will be demobilized throughout the United States.

Minneapolis—The Golden Glove boxing tournament was held here with boys from all over the northwest competing. The champions, who successfully fought their way to the top through an entry list of 150, are: Heavyweight—Ben Blanchette, No. Dak. university; Light Heavyweight—Russ Schultz, Minneapolis; Middle Weight—Kenny Brown, No. Dak. university; Welterweight—Walter Petrie, Park Rapids; Lightweight—Lawrence Martin; Featherweight—Owen Trickey; Bantamweight—Cully Eckstrom; Flyweight—Carlyle Loverud, all from Minneapolis.

St. Paul—Further declines in the corn market is predicted by observers, according to Lloyd Eveland, government supervisor for corn loans, now in Minnesota. Government support has raised the price and when this support is withdrawn, authorities believe the price will naturally slide back. Because of this, farmers who have not taken advantage of the government loan because of advancing prices may be disappointed. Time for applying for corn loans has been extended to April 1.

Capitol News Review

by A. I. Harris

John P. Arnoldy, chief of the highway patrol, has appealed to all Minnesota motorists to dim headlights when approaching other cars at night While modern headlights are not supposed to be glaring, many of them get out of adjustment and are dangerous, Mr. Arnoldy said. In a recent test, the patrol chief found that less than 50 per cent of night drivers dim headlights at all, even after requests to do so by the dimming of other headlights approaching them. In another test three drivers out of 17 dimmed their lights. Highway officials believe drivers will respond to an appeal for ordinary courtesy to other drivers. "There is no question but that a large percentage of headlights in use on our highways are dangerous to other motorists." Mr. Arnoldy said A courtesty drive by highway patrolmen has been ordered.

Muskellunge are listed as one of the most desirable of Minnesota's numerous game fish and every angler always looks forward to the sport of landing one of these fighting members of the finny tribe. Experiments in muskellunge propagation last year at Elbow Lake met with success and authorities of Division of Game and Fish are now considering the possibilities of setting aside large areas in muskellunge lakes for the breeding of this gamey fish. Plans involve penning maskelunge in restricted areas and prohibiting all fishing in these areas.

According to orders received from Washington, CWA demobilization will be so swift and rapid that the number of Minnesota CWA workers will be down to 32,000 by the first of April. This means the the machinery recently set up by the state emergency relief committee for the gradual tapering-off of the GWA activity will be strained to the utmost between the necessity of getting under the quota requirements and handling the flood of applications for review and mediation. Demobilization must be accomplished so fast that country boards will have little time for thorough investigation. Even workers who are not laid off immediately cannot look forward to a very long continuance on the job. The quota allotments are rigid.

Don't be apprehensive if your drivers' license does not show up a day or so after you send in your applications. A last minute rush has swamped the drivers' license bureau and means you may not receive your license for several weeks. Gil Garmichael, bureau head, gives assurance that no concentrated drive on unlicensed drivers will begin for another two weeks. There are still 500,000 drivers who have not made application for license.

Not realizing that 250 citizens each day clamor for conferences with the governor, many persons make long trips to the Capitol seeking an audience. Quite often they are disappointed. If one lives a considerable distance from St. Paul it is advisable to write and ask for an appointment before one calls. This would save many a fruitless trip.

The figures just released by the state emergency relief committee, showing a drop of 41.8 per cent from January 1933 to January 1934 in the relief of load of families aided, reflects the result of SWA work in Minnesota. Most of the decrease followed the advent of that work in November, but it cannot show the full benefit of the CWA program as it affects relief needs. The peak of relief comes in March, following a steady rising curve. By every indication this curve was headed for a new high in March, 1934, with conservative estimates placing the relief load from 25 to 50 per cent higher than that of March, 1933, which itself set a record. But the rising curve was arrested and downward until at the present time it is below the summer level.

Evidence of greed has showed up here and there among those who have hay and grain to sell to the state for drought relief. In one instance a grain dealer tried to charge 70 cent a bushel for oats when the market price was about 35 cents. Hay prices have been boosted by sellers about $2 a ton. However, those in charge of buying for the state executive council, refuse to pay more than the market price. All grain and hay purchased by board is brought in Minnesota and as near to the drought district as possible. Last week the executive board voted another $500,000 to be expended for drought relief.

The Minnesota Tourist bureau has gone educational and is at present conducting a campaign on conservation in the Minneapolis public schools. About 5,000 pupils are seeing motion pictures and hearing George Bradley, bureau director, lecture each day.

TBE "NEW DEAL" AFTER ONE YEAR

Sunday, President Roosevelt rounded out the first year of his term, and while it moy be too carly to definitely condemn or positively commend tha measures that have been taken to hring the country out of the slough of depression, it seems to us that we may well take stock of ourselves, and the "New Deal", after one year.

However much we may differ about the wisdom of the measures that have been inaugurated; one thing we must all ogree on, and that is, we were demanding "action" and got it. More things have been crowded into this one year by the administration thon has been achieved by any other administration in history in an entire term. And yet, much as we may regret it, the truth of the matter is that we have progressed very little in that year. We are still lamentably close to where we started from. One after another, the much touted panaceas that were to breathe new life into a deod economic order have failed of their purpose—the bank holiday, the NRA, PWA, and CWA, the monetary inflation, farm loan, home loan and the AAA. Aside frm tiding us over one strennous year they have served only one useful purpose, and that is to bring home the fact, that no one will relinquish something they have in possesion "for the good of humanity." Capital will not invest without a reasonable guarantee of return on its investment. Appeols to patriotism will not shake loose a nickle from the masters of finance and industry who would of necessity have to make the first move. A reorganization cannot be brought about thru voluntary measures.

President Roosevelt may of course have still onother "pullmotor" that he can whisk out of the hat, but the fact must be evident to every thinking person at this time, that sooner or later, perhaps within the next three months the administration will stand definitely at the crossroads and will have to chose between Fascism and Socialism. Which road we will take will largely devolve upon the American people and how well we have learned the lessons that past experience and European examples can teach us. Whatever the future may hold in store for us, we must all agree with Prof. Allen Nevins of Columbis University when he says:

> "To the interwoven American economic, political and social system of 1932 we can never go hack. At the close of one year of Franklin D. Roosevelt many of us apprehend but dimly the outlines of the New Era; but the dullest can comprehend that an Old Era is dead."

ABOUT THAT CONGRESSIONAL CANDIDATE

Two weeks ago we said that the first sensible suggestion we have heard made yet for a congressional candidate on tha Farmer-Labor ticket was the one made by the Farmers Independent of Bagley when they suggested Lonard Hnuske. Prior to that (we are not taking into consideration all the gossip about who would like to run) we had heard two suggestions made. The first was Municipal Judge Nyklemo of Fergus Falls nnd the other Leonard Eriksson, also of Fergus Falls.

If Leonard Eriksson is a Farmer-Laborite we're a South Sea Islander. He was elected to the House with Farmer-Labor opposition and when he wasn't talking an arm off the House he was voting against a constructive piece of legislation or trying to amend it into uselessness. If he is a Farmer-Laborite we're going to pack our belongings into a red bandana nnd go out looking for a progressive party. Judge Nyklemo we don't know anything about. We have watched and participated in progressive politics in the ninth district since 1908 and we have never heard of Nyklemo until someone suggeste that we should run him as a Farmer-Labor candidate for Congress. What we want to know is; where was Nyklemo in 1918? Where was he when the rest of us were being locked out of halls, run out of town, being tarred and feathered and having onr homes painted yellow? Where was Nyklemo when we were running the elder Lindberg, the greatest statesman that Minnesota ever produced for governor and were thrown in the jug and accused of being pro-German and sedetious for our trouble In other words; where was Nyklemo and Eriksson, yes, and for thnt matter Hauske when it was unpopular to be a Non-Partisan Leaguer and a Farmer-Laborite.

Leonard Hauske is a personal friend of the writer. We know him to be a man of fine personality. He has done an enormous lot of good work for the cooperative movement in the valley. We know that he is progressive. But we also know that he has not been an active party member. We know that he has not been an outspoken and avowed in his affiliation with the party. We have every reason to believe that if he was elected to congress he would vote right. But we do not know. He has never been tried.

The ninth district was the cradle of the Non-Partisan League and of the Farmer-Labor party. Here the first organization work was done that culminated in the union of the Farmers' Non-Partisan League and the Working Peopla's Non-Partisan Political League under the banner of the Farmer-Labor party at that never-to-be-forgotten convention in St. Paul in September of 1923.

There is no need for the Farmer-Laborites in this district to select new converts nor untried men to represent us in Congress. There is no desrth of good, one hundred per cent, true and tried Farmer-Laborites to choose from.

Let us maka some suggestions, being that everyone else have had n try at it. There is Walter E. Day of Bagley, a member of the legislature since 1918. With as fine a record of work and vote as any man ever had. There is Elmer Holm of Dilworth, a hard-working and efficient progressive and party worker. There is Gust Erickson of Spooner, one of the leading Farmer-Laborites of the house of representatives. There is Edgar Nordstrom of Becker county, he made a fine record in the house during the last session. There is Erick Friberg of Roseau county, one of the best "stickers" the progressives ever elected to office. There is our own incomparabla Senator Laura Naplin, experienced, capabla and with a 100 per cent voting record. There is Tom Vollom of Erskine, one of our best "war-horses"; there is Buckler of Crookston, he never shied at a fight yet. But what's the usa of enumerating any more? There is a hundred more equally good timber thruout the district we know if elected to coagress they would vote right. Why should we take chances on selecting someone we only believe would vote right? Let us forget about all this Republican balderdash being peddled about for the purpose of diverting us from our own ranks and decide on whom of our hundred percenters can best serve the district and can best be elected, before someone gets a bright idea and suggest that we andorse Selvig.

SOUNDING A PROTEST TO "DELINEATOR"

A protest by tha Woman's League for service of Janes M. E. Church in Brooklyn, New York, has been sent to the publishers of "The Delineator" against liquor advertising in its pagea.

Declaring that the 91 members of this organidation, whose signatures were appended, "wish amphatically to register their disappointment and disapproval of the appearance of the advertisement of alcoholic beverages in "Tha Delineator," the protest continues.

"Such advertisement in a woman's magazina of the unquestioned quality and service as is The Delineator must mean the publishers think subscribers to this journal favor or ara indifferent to the promoting of liquor-drinking among tha women of America. But the unanimity of protest of this leagua of Janes Church is representativa of millions of church women in our land who deplore tha attempt to make vogua and acceptable the use of liquor. It is becauss we value "The Delineator" as well as raise tha standards of womanhood in America that we sign this protest and request tha discontinuance of such advertisement."

Similar protests to the publishers of this home magazine might make them realize the wisdom of changing their policy as to liquor advertising.

If my memory serves me right, one plank in the mayor's platform was; "keeping homa dollars at home." The only dollars going out of town was the beer dollars, still he vetoed tha new beer ordinance. He should be a politician then such inconsistency could be expected.

Here is further proof of the unfair distribution of wealth:
Our city council is obviously more entitled to a share of Brewer Bremer's million than those kidnappers.

Seeing that only working people are poor, why can't we all get rich loafing?

A friend of mine applied for a job at tha NRS office nnd was told that he couldn't get a job becouse ho is single and his dad is working. I guess he has no right to a job. Now he is looking for a place to starva to death without violating some coda or other ragulation set up by somebody who happened to arriva on earth a faw years earlier than he did.

This may be officially recorded as one of the dry parts of the state, but ten bootleggers selling stuff of all gradas from bad to worse are kept busy nightly supplying the thirsty ones.

Wa also read something a short time ago about stricter law enforcement. Maybe that was just another platform plank and therefore not to be taken seriously.

Question, J. P., Minneapolis: What is a pre-amptive bid.

Answer: An opening major suit "four" or a minor "five" is known as a strictly pre-emptivt overhid. It should be made on long, powerful trump suits, not necessarily solid, with little or no outaide strength whatsoever. The longer the suit, the weaker the hand when played defensively. The object of such a bid is to prevent opponents from bidding or from getting ths best fit of their hands. Apply the two-three count as to the number of tricks such a bid indicates, vulnerable and not vulnerable. A set is expected on such a bid if partner's hand is not as strong as presumed. The semi- preemptive bid is slightly different; it will be explained upon request.

Question: If one does not have normal trump support or n biddable suit after partner opens with a 'one' Spare bid, but does have 1½ Honor Tricks and hids one notrump, how does tha Spare bidder know whather this is a negative notrump?

Answer: The Spade hidder reasons as follows: Generally, but not necessarily, this bid denies support for his major suit. It does show, however, from one plus to two plus Honer Tricks. It is therefore negative from the viewpoint that it usually denies trump aupport; it denies enough strength to bid two notrump. Further than this, no man knoweth until further hidding. If the notrump bid, follows an intervening bid, it is streogth-showing rather than negative, since it is a free bid. Such a hid then shows a stopper in opponant's hid suit.

BUILDS HOPE ON ECONOMIC QUICKSAND

By Scott Nearing, F. P.

Rooseveltian optimism sees a deficit in the federal budget of seven billions in 1934; of three billions in 1935 and no deficit at all in 1936. According to this estimate, recovery will cost 10 billions—a cheap enough price to pay for restored prosperity.

When the administration made these estimates, CWA work was to stop about Feh. 15, 1934. But since there has been no joh pickup to speak of, CWA work has been extended three months at an estimated cost of a billion dollars. Where is this extra billion to come from? It must be borrowed and added to the 10 billion deficit.

What is to happen after May 1? Are tha four millions now on CWA work to be turned loose among tha eight or 10 million other unemployed?

What will happen to thess eight or 10 millioa unemployed who have never secured CWA jobs at all. Will they continue on the starvation levels of local relief.

Unless there is a considerable business pickup in the next 90 days—and at the moment thera is little indication that such a pickup will take place—the federal government will approach the fall and winter of 1934-35 with the original fonr million CWA workers on its hands, plus the additional millions that must ha taken on to avert starvation or revolution.

The cost of this enormous dole will add at least four or five hillions to the estimated three hillions of federal deficit for 1935. Thus the 1935 deficit instead of being less than that of 1934, may very likely exceed it.

"Bot if there is a substantial pickup in business" argue the administration spokesman.

Well, suppose husiness picks up—to the levels of 1928-29. Roosevelt himself hss estimated the probahle unemployment is such a case at five million. Economists put the figure all the way from six to 12 million. What will happen to these millions in the deficitless year 1934 or 1937.

Even admitting full recovery, ths army of the permanently unemployed will demand billions in government oatlay. Should recovery be less than complete, the hurden will be correspondingly increased.

In 1932, during tha campaign, Roosevelt was sure ha could balance the hudget in 1933. Now he thinks hs may achieve this result in 1936. He will no more do this than ha will pick May-flowers in Massachusetts in January, 1937.

Roossvelt has both feet in the quicksand of a disintegrating economic system. If he lifts ona foot, ths other sinks into tha sludge. If ha advances, tha deficit increases. If ha retreast, the revolution threatens.

Stuck fast in this quagmire, increased by the lapping waves of fascism and ths rising tide of revolution, Roosevelt can whistle to himself or croon soft nothings to keep up the courage of his radio audience. But ha cannot save the capitalist system. It is only a question of time before he and his program of deficit-built prosperity will disappear under the slimy surface of capitalist decay.

I CALL THAT MIND FREE

I call that mind free which does not copy the past or live on old virtues, but forgets what is behind and rejoices to pour itself out in fresh exertions.

I call that mind free which is not passively framed by outward circumstances, but acts from an inward spring.

I call that mind free which protects itself against the usurpations of society, does not cower to human opinion, and feels itself accountable to a higher tribunal than man's.

I call that mind free which jelously guards its intellectual rights, calls no man master.

Contents itself with no hereitary faith, received new truths as an angel from heaven, and, while consulting others, inquires still more of the oracle within itself.

I call that mind free which sets no bounds to its love, and offers itself up a willing victim to the cause of mankind.

I call that mind free which no menace or peril can enthrall, and possesses itself though all else be lost.

NRA HAS BEEN MUZZLED

(Stephen Messenger)

The fading of the NRA as a recovery effort is due to the fact that there has been too much selfishness in tha support of it. With few exceptions employers could not, or would not take from their own pockets the amounts needed to give huying power the desired advantages over productive power. Some firms and some trades have lifted wages faster than prices, hut on the whole the effort has failed. It has been discovered that national income is not enhanced hy merely giving two men psy for half a day instead of a foll day's pay to one. All it has done is to cut down the poblic relief hill by putting the man who was working regularly on the same basis as tha public relief man. This was simply "passing the buck" of expense to the man who could least afford it.

Industry failed to co-oparate unless financed out of the public honey-pot—and s profitable market secured. But it has left us a few things of value—cut child labor in half, smudged the sweat-shops, reduced cut-throat competition in industry, preserved the right of collective bargaining among working men as woll as among employers and financiers. It has failed to increase wages in ratio to commodities, hut it has opened the way for industry to make other necessary corrections—or suffer the consaquenses in the long run.

JUST A MATTER OF HALF A MILLION

(St. Louis County Independent)

A little blow-up occured when a Ramsey county district court rendered a decision that s few road contractors refund nearly half a million dollars to the state for alleged overcharges on contracts. These alleged irregularities, or whatever they might be termed, occured when C. M. Babcock, the man who is pointed to as the father of the hest highway system in the good old U. S. A, and who hy the way was taken from his throne of high authority by the Farmer-Labor administration, and over which such an awful howl was set up about "playing politics" and firing the best man that the state highway department ever had

The St. Paul judge, however, ruled that Mr. Babcock had acted in good faith in the awarding of these contracts. Some criticism was simed at Mr. Babcock, however, in permitting s condition to exist that gave some contractors uncalled for advantages.

Had anything like this occured under a Farmer-Labor administration there would have been a howl set up by tha kept press of the state that could have been heard in every corner of the nation, but such a condition existing under a repuhlican regime, and effecting as big an individual as Mr. Bahcock had been portrayed to be, every effort has been made to temper the news and what few editorials were published. It was something that could not be overlooked hy the press, but the soft pedal was hrought into play. It is even intimated that there was considerable political background to the whole affair.

It remained, however, for the Farmer-Labor administration to get some action to remedy regulations that shut out competition which provided a monopoly for a favored few. n

CRITICIZING THE NRA

(Union Advocate)

General Hngh Johnson used strong language in his radio broadcast when he invited criticism of the NRA. But Labor has grown callous and hardened to the strong language of the blue eagle administrator. The fiery general failed utterly to impress Labor with his brief references to exploiting bosses and rugged individualists who oppose the NRA.

For months Labor has been demanding action on thousands of complaints fortified by affidavits and presented to General Johnson. For months Labor has urged the NRA chief to use the teeth contained in section 7 of the national industrial recovery act to compel industrialists to live up to their code agreements. For months Labor has heen scorned or given a minority representation on compliance, regional or code bonrds.

General Johnson apparently delights in trench talk over the air, but when it comes to enforcement of the hlue eagle codes he talks more like a chautauqua lecturer addressing a national convention of the Chamber of commerce. There is no fire in his voice when the steel trust literally thumbs its nose at him. There is no top-sergeant mannerism when the National Association of Manufacturers refuses to submit to collective bargaining. There is no oratory when Labor points out the pregnant fact that 90 per cent of the codes approved by General Johnson utterly fail to meet the issue of unemployment.

And so Labor has not been fooled by the gusto of tha blue eagle chief as he invited criticism of the operation of the NRA. Labor has become accustomed to just such things.

This is not saying that every capitalist aspiring for a government contract is a crook. We only mean that if honest, he can't get the contract.

President Roosevelt, therefore, did the proper thing, nationalizing air mail, and if he follows this up with the nationalization of the airplane industry, the industries from which the airplane industry buys its materials, the railroads over which it is hauled, and the banks who bleed all of them, there is no doubt that he will succeed in eliminating graft in this particular sphere of human endeavor.

Deep Mississippi Channel Will Protect Fish and Water-Fowl

This is the last of a series of eight articles on the nine foot channel now under construction in the Mississippi river.

The dams being constructed and to be constructed to canalize the Upper Mississippi and maintain a nine-foot depth of water for navigation purposes will not injure wild life nor the wild life refuges along the river. Instead, the result will be beneficial.

These statements are made on the best scientific authority obtainable. They are obviously true as a matter of reasoning.

High water doesn't hurt fish or wild fowl. It is low water that does the damage. Some breeds of ducks dive for food to almost incredible depths and hunters appreciate the value of plenty of water.

Rapidly changing water levels injure wild life. The nine-foot channel will help maintain uniform levels.

Is it likely that the federal government would permit one department to undo the work of another? Would the dams, be permitted to wreck the effects of the department of the interior to conserve our natural wild life resourses?

Opposition propaganda of this kind is not only silly but often malicious. The motive usually is ulterior and selfish. It has no connection with conservation. Small fections of certain conservation organizations have attempted to sway their national conventions into passing resolutions against the nine-foot channel. These efforts have failed, due to the good judgment of rank and file of thinking citizens and their refusal to be dominated by selfish political interests.

Fish die by the millions in isolated pockets and pools, caused by low water. Thousands of dollars are spent every year to save them. The nine-foot channel will reduce river fluctuations to a minimum, thus preventing the destruction of both fish and spawn.

Certain lowland areas will be covered with water when the dams are finished. A new feeding grounds for wildfowl may be flooded, but is there any reason why these wild rice and other feeding beds will not extend themselves outward to the new edges of lowland areas?

Great solicitude has been expressed for the clams. They live in the channel of the river, but they live just as happily in 10 to 20 feet of water as in four to six feet— much more happily than in a few inches. Spawn deposited in shallower channels will not be so likely to suffer when the channel is completed.

The only fish that spawn in the channel are catfish, garfish and sturgeon. The deeper, more constant channel will be a boon to them. It is these fish which carry and scatter the spawn of the clams. With a more extensive channel, the clam spawn will be better distributed and not so likely to be destroyed

Dam construction experience from all over the world has been studied to provide dams that will not cause silt deposits in the Upper Mississippi. It has been claimed silting above the dams will bury the clams and kill them. But with dams which permit a normal flow of water on the bottom of the river, silting is reduced to a minimum.

The Hastings dam is not a comparable example. It has been held up as the "horrible example". However, the Hastings dam is open at the bottom only a part of its length. It has silted some perhaps, but there is no clamming industry there, few fish and no wild life refuge. The trouble with the Hastings dam is not silt but sewage. Industrial sewage, not navigation, ruined the fishing in this region.

But even the sewage menace above the Hastings dam is being removed. The Twin Cities now are engaged in building a $16,000,000 sewage disposal system, which will keep all sewage out of the river. Like the nine-foot channel, this sewage disposal system no longer is a project. It is a reality. Necessary legal steps have been taken. Part of the interceptors already have been built in Minneapolis.

Highly developed water transportation has not injured the fishing even in so old a country as France, which has actually thousands of miles of canals alone. One has only to read such authorative publications as the National Geographic to find that urban residents, from Paris and other cities take their week-end outings in the country and fish, not only in the natural streams, but in those canals. In addition to improving the economic and industrial condition of the valley, the controlled Upper Mississippi should be a boon as well to the devotees of Nimrod and Izaak Walton.

LAND BANK HAS 10TH MILLION DOLLAR DAY

The Federal Land Bank of St. Paul passed its 10th "million dollar day" on February 16, and at the same time made its record disbursement of the year when it put into the hands of farmers in North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan $1,231,000.

This was the 5th "million dollar day" in February, the other 5 having been made in the closing weeks of 1933, when the bank was striving to reach a goal of $32,000,000 for the year. It actually reached $34,455,000.

For the month of February, up to the 16th inclusive, the bank has disbursed $11,050,450 to 4,841 farmers. Of this total, 2,369 loans aggregating $7,341,000 were regular loans made by the Federal Land Bank, and 2,472 loans aggregating $3,709,000 were made by the bank as agents for the Land Bank Commissioner, so-called commissioner's loans. For the year to Feb. 16 the bank had loaned $29,292,800 to 12,724 farmers.

U. S. AGT URGED TO FORCE THE FARMER

Directors of the National Farm Bureau Federation went on record last week in favor of legislation forcing farmers into compulsory co-operation. They recommended that the agricultural adjustment administration be vested with the necessary authority.

It was further suggested that the secretary of agriculture be authorized to issue injunctions to require the fulfilling of marketing agreements and the observance of licensing provisions.

A proposed "compulsory co-operation" amendment read:

"To permit the secretary of agriculture to put into operation whatever control or marketing plan is agreed on by the producers of two-thirds of the acreage of any commodity, and to make such plan apply to the entire commodity and all producers thereof."

The plan also provides that if two-thirds of the producers of any commodity formed a co-operative, the group should receive all the federal aid granted. Others would be compelled to observe the trade agreement while sharing none of the benefits.

The federation arged that the federal government buy with bonds, bearing low interest, lands which the farmers may wish to dispose of.

The Minnesota Kaleidoscope of 1933

Gives you first hand information of the doings of the 48th session of the legislature of Minnesota.

Read the following indorsement by the Farmer-Labor Leader:

The book shows the background of most of the controversies which arose over the income tax proposal, the unemployment insurance law. the chain store tax and other measures. It points out the weaknesses of certain groups in both House and Senate, and dissects the political intrigues with considerable skill. All in all, it is an excellent record to be used in the 1934 campaign and everyone interested in the political developments in the state should hav a copy for reference purposes.

R. LAKE COUNTY HOLDS ROUSING F-L CONVENTION

Two Hundred Delegates Fill Court Rooms in Red Falls

HON. M. A. BRATTLAND DELIVERS AN ADDRESS

Olson, Shipstead, Day and Melby are Commended For Good Work

Characterized as the biggest and history of Red Lake county, the Red Lake county Farmer-Labor convention swung into action on Sunday afternoon in the court rooms at Red Lake Falls with Carlos Stageberg of the Farmer-Labor Educational Bureau as temporary chairman. Mr. Stageberg explained the business of the convention and a resolution committee was immediatly selected and went to work. The committee was composed of John Melby of Oklee, G. Spong of Garness, Peter E. Johnson of Brooks, Chas. Barrow of Brooks and Fred Erdman of Red Lake Falls.

A motion was made to rule that the chairman and the secretary-treasurer of the county should be choosen from geograpgical localities in the county but after some discussion this motion was killed by amendment and never pressed to a vote. On nomination for county chairman A. H. Carlson of Pnmmer was nominated and no further nominations being made the temporary secretary Mrs. A. M. Hanson was instructed to cast the unnimoue ballot of the convention for Mr. Carlson.

Archie Marcotte of Red Lake Falls and Peter M. Johnson were put in nomination for vice chairman and on ballot resulted in 81 votes for Marcotte and 43 votes for Johnson. A motion to make the choice unanimus was passed without dissenting vote. While the ballots were being counted R. M. Aalbu of Thief River Falls gave a short talk on the growth of the Farmer-Labor party and urged that the old members who have been in the movement since before it became popular and the new recruits who are daily joining the organization work to gether in harmony to further the common goal; the reorganization of the economic order to bring about the cooperative commonwealth. "Forget about who gets this job or that job." he said, "we are engaged in building a new economic order, we are not conducting an employment agency."

Carl Swanson of Red Lake Falls was elected secretary-treasurer with-

GRAND OPENING OF SANDEEN'S CAFE, TONIGHT

Special Floor Show, and Dancing Team to be Featured

The grand opening of Sandeen's Cafe and night club, in the basement of the Chevrolet Garage, will be held Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, March 15, 16, 17, and 18. The doors will be opened at 7 o'clock Thursday evening with Hap Doyle as Master of Ceremonies. A special dance orchestra has been secured end a sensational dance team Beb and Ackerman will entertain patrons daring all four evenings, Wm. Sandeen, manager, announced.

The new Cafe has just been re modeled and redecorated and it compares favorably with the best in the entire atate. Soft lighting effects, good music, good food and the best entertainment possible to obtain will be presented at this letest addition to the entertainment facilities of Thief River Falls, Mr. Sandeen says.

Applicants for Poor Relief Report on Mon., Wed., Fri.

Orvilla E. Olaon, newly appointed poor relief administrator for Pennington County, announced that the relief office will be open on Mondays Wednesdays and Fridays only to poor relief applicants. The new headquarters for county poor relief is in the basement of the auditorium.

Mrs. Roger Anderson and infant daughter, of Mavie are patients at a local hospital.

Mar. Apportionment For Schools $6,872.50

The county treasurer, John Gullingsrud, announced to day that the 1934 March School Apportionment check has been received. The amount of the check is $6,8672.50 which will mean $2.50 per pupil on a total of 2749 pupils.

Owing to the drought and depression the payment was made much earlier than usual for fear that some schools might not be able to carry on because of a shortage of funds, according to a letter which was received by Mr. Gullingsrud along with the check.

Ice Code Gives Strand Bros. Right to Cut and Sell Ice

A letter was received by the Strand brothers of this city this week from Jas. A. Horton, chief examiner of the Federal Trade Comission advising them that it is unnecessary for them to obtain a permit to harvest and sell ice. According to the letter, the ice code was not to be construed to prohibit anyone from entering into business. The latter stated that if the Strand Brothers had availed themselves of the opportunity of harvesting and storing ice, no furthar action is necessary.

Oswald Helseth Captain of Champion University of Minnesota Rifle Team

The University of Minnesota Rifle team again won the Big Ten Conference title, this time with Oswold Helseth, formerly of this city, as its captain. The team won the title last year and also annexed the National Intercollegiate title by defeating the United States Naval Academy by a narrow margin of 12 points.

Of no little interest to his friends in this city and vicinity is the fact that Mr. Helseth was second high point man in the national meet last year. All of his more intimate friends know something of his extraordinary skill with the 22-calibre rifle which he was seldom seen without while he lived here. "Oz," as he is better known to his friends, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Issac Helseth of Minneapolis and is a senior in the college of Engineering of the University of Minnesota. He moved to Minneapolis with his parents in 1925 when the Minneapolis Company moved its shops to that city.

PROWLERS LOSE CLOSE CONTEST TO WARREN FRI.

Locals Lead all Way Thru Game until Final Whistle

The Prowlers lost a "heart-breaker" game last Friday night to the Warren high school basket ball team in the final game of the district basket ball tonrnament at Crookston by the score of 21 to 19, in a story book ending. There wasn't a time during the game that the Warren team led the locals but the final score shows that Warren won. At the end of the third quarter the Prowlers were leading 14 to 11, they increased their lead 19 to 13 during the fourth quarter and as the game was drawing to a close the Warren boys began to let loose with long shots of which three took effect. Tying the score at 19 all. The final toss-up came just three seconds bfore the end of the game and to all outward signs it looked like there was to be an overtime period played, the ball went of-of-bounds and Warren took possession of the ball and the "Frank Merriwell' of the Warren squad decided to win the game so he shot from the middle f the floor; the ball had left his hands by about two feet when the final gun was sounded, if it went thrugh the hoop the game was won if not there would have to be an over time period, the ball looped lazily through the air it didn't seem to be in any particular hurry and, as all objects do, if finally came to a stop but only after it had gone through the nets of the basket. This basket, along with the stellar playing of the Warren team, ended the title aspirations of the Prowlers.

In the first round of the distict tournament Plummer bowed to locals by a score of 21 to 23 after two overtime periods had been played to break the tie. Warren defeated Climax by a score of 30 to 12 in their first game, Crookston defeated Oklee 41 to 9 and Grand Forks defeated Fisher 18 to 16. In the second round Thief River Falls beat Crookston 30 to 9 and Warren beat East Grand Forks 37 to 22.

The final night Plummer defeated Fisher for thirdplace in the district by score of 20 to 17 after a very exciting game, East Grand Forks nosed out Crookston in the consolation game 23 to 20. The championship game was played next in which Prowlers lost 21 to 19 to Warren.

A group of friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Chas. Dicken with a parcel shower last Thursday afternoon. The afternoon was spent in a social manner and lunch was served by the self-invited guests. Mrs. Dicken was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts.

LAND O' LAKES COOP. OIL STATION PUMPS INSTALLED

The Land O' Lakes Cooperative Oil Station on the corner of second street and Atlantic has sterted in business with the installation of gasoline pumps and the completion of pipe hookups. The formal opening will be announced as soon as the debris has been cleared away and the premices cleaned up, Mr. Norby says.

Gas can be bought at the station.

County Superintendent of Schools, Mr. Matheson atates that this work should be very helpful as this is follow-up work from tha work that was started last fall by Miss Kennedy. She will visit schools on March 15 and 16 and March 17 the Teachers' Institute will be held from 9 to 12 and from 1:30 to 4 P.M.

Will Rogers in Mr. Skitch At Avalon Sun., Mon., Tues

With Will Rogers and Zasu Pitts as the principal characters in the Fox production "Mr. Skitch" there is an unending stream humorous episodes in the picture to be presented at the Avalon theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Skitch, Will Rogers and Zasu Pitts are ousted from their comfortable home in Missouri by a forclosure sale. They leave with all their belongings in an antiquated car for California, the goal which they ultimately reach after many howling experiences. This picture is a portroyal of Mr. Average Man after he has met reverses only the humor involved does not show up so readily to him.

Concordia Choir to Appear Here Apr. 7

Announcement has been made that famous Concordia Choir of Concordia College, Moorhead, will appear here on Friday April 6th at the city auditorium under the auspices of the Trinity Ladies' Aid.

This organization, directed by Prof. H. W. Monson, is now in its fourteenth season and has of late years been acclaimed as one of the finest organizations of its kind in the United States. Last yeer, it was accorded the distinction of being chosen by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra as assisting organization on the program given April 2 at the Cyrus Northrup memorial auditorium, a distinction hitherto accorded olny to the St. Olaf choir.

Regarding this concert, the Twin City critics were profuse in their praise of the work of tha choir. Lewis S. Miner in the St. Paul Daily News said: "There was little left to be desired in the way of unanimity, precision, dynamics or flexibility." John K. S. Sherman, in the Minneapolis Star, said: "Like the St. Olaf Choir, it has something of the inhuman in its technique." And Victor Nilsson, in the Minneapolis Journal, speaks of the "charming vocal feature" that was aded to the Symphony Concert through the appearance of the Concordia Choir.

CLEARWATER COUNTY F-L CONVENTION SATURDAY

The Farmer-Labor County Convention for Clearwater County will be held Saturday, March 17 at Bagley. Minnesota. This promises to be a very interesting meeting and all Farmer-Laborites from this county that can be there will be welcomed, according to word received from Rep. W. E. Dey.

COUNCIL ORDERS REMOVAL OF BOX CARS ON E. SIDE

Action Outcome of Charge Box Cars Detract from City's Appearance

At the regular meeting of the city council last Tuesday night, Lloyd Alness presented a petetion to remove the box-car dwellings that are being put on the east side of the river on the corner of Johnson and Marrian streets and in that vicinity, on the grounds that such dwellings detract from the value of his property and that they also detract from the appearance of the neighborhood. As tha highway will run by that corner after the new bridge is built, it will give a bad impression to tourists going through according to Mr. Alness. The petition was granted by the council and an order was to be made to the chief of police to remove them, as there was no moving permit granted when they were moved in by the county.

A resolution was passed by the council recommending that work should go forward in trying to receive a grant to establish an air port and port of entry in the city of Thief River Falls.

Mr. Bennes brought up the matter of the school board wishing to get the city to vacate the street on Markley Avenue blocks 7 and 8 in order to insure stafty for the school children of Knox school. This petition was first filed with the city council in 1932 but no favoroble action was taken on et that time. The matter was referred to the committee on streets.

County Board Holds Listless Meet Tues.

The county board held its meeting and transacted all the business that was before it, and adjourned. Because of town elections, Mr. Fowler said, there was not much interest in this meeting. A resolution was adopted recommending an Air-port and Port of Entry for the city of Thief River Falls.

Another resolution was adopted asking for $5000 special aid for state aid road number one. The rest of the time was spent, according to County Auditor Mr. Fowler, in listeaing to road delegations.

Low Admission To be Feature Of Auto Show

Variety of Exhibits Will be Shown at Spring Exposition

The committee in charge of the Auto Show announces that they intend to set the prices for admission to low that the price will stop no one from attending. Admission to the dances on Thursday and Friday will be forty cents for men and twenty-five cents for women; prices for the vaudeville and Style Show Thursday and Friday nights have been announced as thirty-five cents for the main floor and twenty-fiva cents for the balcony. For the Saturday night vaudeville show prices have been set at forty cents, as this will be a two hour show, there will seats for everybody, according to Mr. Paulson chairman in charge of the exposition.

The local business places having exhibits at the Auto Show are: Thief River Oil Company, exhibiting a built-over car; Ford Motor Co.; Chevrolet Motor Co.; Taxeraas Motor Co. Borchert Hill Motor Co. Thronson Motor Co.; Borry's Garage; Land O' Lakes. O. K. One Stop Servica, exhibiting Shell oils and greases; Thief River Music Co.; Thief River Falls Seed House; Oen Merchantile; L. Alness; City Water and Light Department; Kelly Hardware. All exhibits will be placed along the walls in order to leave as much open floor space as possible Mr. Paulson states.

The committee announces the following program of the exposition: Thursday afternoon the Veterans' Memorial Room in the basement of the new auditorium will be dedicated, followed by vaudeville and dancing; Friday the Style Show, vaudeville, and dance; and on Saturday night there will be a two hour vaudeville, a dance and as the final act a New 1934 Plymonth Automobila will be given to the holder of the lucky ticket, free.

Wednesday City Carrier Service is Discontinued

A further notice was given by the post office in this city to tha effect that there will be no afternoon mail service on Wednesday afternoon in the future. There are now three days in the week that there is no afternoon mail carrier service they are according to the officials, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. This curtailment in service is due to tha government's economy program, according to the Postal Officials in the local office.

SCHOOL BOARD HOLDS MEETING MONDAY P. M.

At the school board meeting held Monday 12, Superintendent of schools, the high school principal, and the entire teaching staff were reelected to their present positions at the same salaries for 1934-1935 as they received for tha school year of 1933-1934. A request was received from the girls rifle club for the usa of the high school gymnasium for rifle practice. The request was laid on the table for future consideration, according to the Superintendent of city schools, Morris Bye.

Regional B. B. Tournament to Be Held Here

Games to Start at 8 o'clock Tonight, Finals Played Friday Night

The basketball tournament for region eight will be played tonight and tomorrow night, March 15 and 16 at the new municipal building in this city. The first round of the tournament will bring Badger and Cass Lake together at 8:00 p. m. The doors will be open at 7 oclock. The second gama will be played at 9 p. m. between Warren and Twin Valley.

On Friday at 8 p. m., the consolation game will be played between the losers of the first and second games and at 9 o'clock the regional championship will be fought out between the winners of the two first games. The winner of this game will represent tha region at the state tournament at the Twin Cities.

Admission prices are fifty cents for adults and twenty-five cents for students.

The season records for the teams that will participate in the tournament showa Badger to have lost two games, one to Thief River Falls and one to Greenbush; Warren to have lost three games, one to Thief River, one to Grafton and one to East Grand Forks; Cass Lake has lost seven, to Bemidji twice, to Brainerd twice, to Staples twice and to Crookston once. Twin Valley has lost two games, one to Thief River Falls, and one to McIntosh.

The state tournament will be played March 22, 23, and 24 at the Minneapolis City Auditorium. The winner of region 8 will play the winner of region 7 in the second game of the state meet.

Oratorio Date Definitely Set for Mon. March 19

According to Dr. P. L. Vistaunet, the date for the oratorio Hayden's "Creation" has been set es Mondny March 19, at eight o'clock P. M. This is a contradictory date to the one announced last week as the tentative date. There will be two more rehearsals before presentation of the play to be held Saturday and Sunday afternoons and Dr. Vistaunet, director, requests that members of the cast be present.

A misunderstanding resulted in the Forum stating last week that the Hill Billies of Fargo would furnish the orchestration for the presentation. Thia is erroneous, the orchestra is composed of local musicians,

ncrease in Jobs Seen as Spring Draws Near NRS

With the expansion of Public Works with the advancing spring the NRS stresses the importance of checking their registration cards.

Mr. Davidson also states that many persons who have registered once do not attach enough importance to the call to renewal of cards once a month. This renewing of cards is highly important if you yosh to receive a job thru this office. Records from the NRS show that many private placements are being filled every day. Mr. Davidson invites all those who are interested in private placements as opposed to CWA to come in and register as one seeking private placement.

FARMER LABOR CO. CONVENTION HERE TOMORROW

Largest Convention in the History of Pennington Called at Noon

NEW CLUBS FORMED THRUOUT THE COUNTY

Republicans Can't Buy Seats In the Convention at Dollar a Throw

Indications are that the Pennington county Farmer-Labor convention to ba held at the court rooms here tomorrow will be the largest gathering of its kind in the history of the county. Intensive organization work has been carried on thruout the entire county during the last month and it is expected that two hundred or mora dues-paying members of the association will be on hand to take part in the deliberations.

Regular Farmer-Labor clubs hava been organized in several of the townships and with the club in this city which has a membership of over seventy members it is expected that the attendance will tax the capacity of the court rooms. Most of the townships in the county have been solicited for members and altho but few of them are organized to the extent of having officers elected they are expected to attend the convention and be seated as delegates on the strength of their list of applicants seeking a club charter.

Accordingto the strict interpretation of the rules of the organization only members of duly organized and chartered clubs and of the state association and two accredited delegates from each unorganized township should be seated, according to H. O. Berve, county secretary, but the county committee feels that due to the extreme cold weather and impassable roads that have prevailed since the first of the year, and the consequent handicap to organization work, tha committee will be inclined to be liberal in issuing credentials to delegates

CWA GRIEVANCE BOARD CONDUCTS CLOSED HEARING

Nine Men Claimed Unjust Discharge are Denied Public Hearing

A hearing was conducted at the court house on Tuesday as a result of appeal being taken by nine CWA workers from complaints against them by their foremen resulting in their discharge. According to the men involved, they received a letter from the CWA office advising them of their discharges and stating that the action was taken because of reports by their foremen that their work was unsatisfactory. They insisted that the complaint was unjustified and demanded a hearing before the CWA grievance board, requesting also that the hearing be open to the public.

The grievance board agreed to hold the hearing only on condition that it be a closed hearing and consequently, altho the court room was filled with citizens demanding that the hearing be open, the committee, the nine men who had been discharged and their attorney Mr. Berve adjourned to the attorney's chambers and the hearing was held there. A report released to the press after the hearing, stated that the committee has taken the matter under edvisement and would announce their decision later.

Lund and Tunberg to Occupy New Shop Mon.

The new Service ship built by Lund and Tunberg, local Ford dealers will be ready for occupancy on Monday, March 19th according to an announcement made by Mr. Tunberg this week. The floor was completed on Monday and equipment is being installed at this time. The building which is 50 x 50 feet is of tile construction is sealed inside and is plentifully supplied with windows, providing a well lighted warm, commodious shop. Large doors to the south and to the east make it easy of access and will facilitate getting cars in and out of the shop, Mr. Tunberg stated. An invitation is extended to the public to inspect it on Monday.

PAPER MONEY BONUS IS VOTED

House Party Leaders Routed As Bill Passes, 295 to 125— Expect Veto.

Washington — House Democrats dared a promised veto to pass the Patman bonus bill, then quietly agrsed in caucus to support a plan to send the $354,000,000 of veternns' and government pay increases contained in the independent offices hill to conference with the senste to seek a compromise ecceptabls to the President.

The bonus hill goes to the senate, which so liberally amended the independent offices supply hill with veterans benefits as to hring upon lt, too, ths threat of a veto if it wers not changed.

The Petman hill would nuthorizo the issuance of $2,200,000,000 in United States notee of small denomlnetion against the total gold supply owned hy the treasury.

The measure would provide epecifically that all of the treasury's gold would he placed back of the notes and that they he maintained et a parity with other paper currency.

Opponeats have hurled charges of greenhacks and printing press money st the Patman proposal, hut Patman has aserted that even with the issusnce of $2,200,000,000 in new money there would he left in ths treasury more gold than necessary to provide 40 per cent hacking.

Patmen has described his hill as one for controlled expansion with a dual purpose of helping the veterans and also the country by increasing the circulation medium.

The house vote on the bonus measure was sufficient to override a Presidential veto but many members who voted for cash payment during the tumultuous session undouhtedly would change their position after Mr. Roosevelt formally disapproved the hill.

N. W. Conservation Camps Announced

Washington—Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation, announced the number of summer camps of the civilian conservation corps allotted to each state, and the quota of men for the states. They included: Minnesota—48 camps, a reduction of three, and 6,700 men; Michigan—59 camps, same as the winter, and 11,700 men; Wisconsin—44 camps, an addition of one, and 7,200 men; Iowa—22 camps, same as the winter, and 5,500 men; North Dakota—7 camps, all new, 1,600 men; South Dakota—18 camps, same as the winter, and 2,300 men.

Hog Purchasing is Halted by U. S.

Washington—The farm administration has stepped out of the hog market, convinced that for the present, at least, it has accomplished its aim of buying pork for the needy and at the same time absorbing market surpluses. Gerald Thorne, farm administration economist, said the government now had sufficient pork to meet the needs of the federal surplus relief corporation, through which tha meat is distributed to the unemployed, and thet a decline in the receipts of hogs on livestock markets had heen noted since early in February. He said purchases may he resumed.

U. S. Expects Insull in Gotham April 8

Washington—Samuel Insull, Sr., probably will arrive in New York city on Sunday, April 8, ending his exile in Greece. Officials said they wers convinced Insull would hs forced to leave Greece on the steamer Statendam. Federal officials have announced Insull would he arrested immediately npon touching American soil. All ports at which tha Statendam will visit are in countries with which the United States has extradition treaties.

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT PUTS WEIGHT LIMIT ON TRUCKS

Effective March 1, a three-ton weight limit will be temporarily pnt in effect on traffic using Trunk Highway No. 59 between Rochester and Stewartville, and Trunk Highwny No. 43 between Winona and Rushford. Pnving of these two highways is now in progress, and the work has progressed to a stage where traffic heavier than three tons would do eerious damage, according to an announcement by the state highway department. These two ronds will he hituminous pavement.

AUTO DRIVERS WITHOUT LICENSE SUBJECT TO ARREST

March 1 was the legal deadline for obtaining drivers licenses, and no extension of time can be granted, according to an announcemet by Gil W. Carmichael, director of the drivers license division of the etate highway depnrtment. The law sets March 1 as the date when the drivers license provisions become effective, Mr. Carmichael explained, and there is no provision for modifying this. Persons who are driving withcut a license after March 1 are declnred hy the law to be guilty of n misdemanor and suhject to arrest and fins.

FORD PLANT WAGES AND MATERIAL $41,000,000

More than $41,000,000 was dispnrsed by the Ford Motor Company in January in payment of wages and purchase of materials, it was disclosed today by the company's home office.

The dispursements were at the rate of more than $1,750,000 during each business day in January.

The Ford Company's dispursements for wages during the month totalled $7,500,000. This was 50 per cent greater than disbursements for this purpose in January a year ago. Of the total $5,500,000 was in wages paid out in the immediate Detroit area.

Expenditures for materiala totalled $33,500,000 during the month, it was said. This compared with $8,500,000 paid for this purpose in January, 1933.

N.R.S. Acts As a Screen Only Best Fitted Placed

An announcement was made by H. Davidson to the effect that with the gradual termination of the CWA the Nationnl Reemployment Service is beginning to funtion as it was intended to, under the new social order. Under the true set np it was intended that the NRS should funtion as a clearing plnce of information relative to employment between the employer nnd the employee. It waa in this capacity that it served the CWA.

Although the NRS merely refers the applicant it also ncta as a screen through which only these best qualified for the work are allowed to pass hefore they are nllowed to contact the employer. In this way it saves the employer the time of interviewing all applicants for the job. The NRS aimply makes a selection of the three or four with the best training and persanality for the position and these are suhmitted to the employer; in this way the employer is not only saved a lot of time but his judgment is also backed up by that of trained personnel man.

SUPPLY OF LONG-FED BEEF IS LIMITED SAYS CHAS. LEE

Future enpplies of long-fed beef cattle will be limited according to the opinion of Charlee E. Lee, who heads tha cattle dspartment for the Central Co-Operative Association of South St. Paul. "In epite of the heavy stocks of frozen and cured beef in storage, which indicates there will be enough beef, such as it is, to enpply the coneumer demand, choice, tender, well-marbled eteaks and roasta will be scarce," saye Lee.

Factors contrihuting to the shortage of long-fed beef as pointed out hy Lee, are feed in many dry areas, and the fact that corn has been pegged at 45 cents per bushel. Many feeders have scaled up their cribs, accepting the 45 cent loan from the government and simultaneously curtailing their feeding operations. Also a tendency to unload their cattle as soon as the market promieed even slight encouragement, has been the case with many feeders. Theee feeders in good times, ordinarily feed their cattle for many months before they send them marketward.

The average price of cattle last week was 17 per cent above a year ago, but 30 per cent below tthe five-year average for that period.

"For several years, cattle production has been on the increase, reaching a new peak in 1933," explains Lee, "but the increase has heen largely in dairy cattle. This country will have of low grade beef without the vast importations of South American canned beef, and I helieve one of the most effective measures of relief that the government could bring would be an embarge on canned beef from Argentine and other South American countries. European countries are placing rigid restrictions on importations of beef in an effcrt to protect their prodncers and we ehould do likewise. Imports of South American canned beef to this conntry have increased in recent months, this being a result of efforts on the part of South American countries to find new markets for their snpplies which are now being excluded from European markets.

U INTRODUCES A NEW VARIETY SPRING WHEAT

Thatcher wheat, an outstanding new variety of hard red epring wheat has just been named by the Minnesota Agricnltural Experiment Station which is preparing to diatribute seed to "approved growers" for increase this year. The etation has removed Marquillo from its list of recommended varieties, Thatcher being decidedly superior.

Thatcher wheat ie resistant to rust has no awns, matures early, is a high yielder and has stiff straw which resists lodging. Five years' milling and baking teeta hy the Minnesota experiment station and the U. S. Department of Agriculture indicate that that Thatcher is equal to Marqnis, the recognized standard for milling and haking quality.

Thatcher is a douhle cross variety made from single cross lumillo x Marquis and eingle cross Marqnie x Kanred. Throughont the eeveral years of its development and testing, Thatcher wheat was labeled Minn. No. 2303. Its permanent name was chosen in honor of the late Dr. Roscoe W. Thatcher, former dean of the University Department of Agriculture.

Growers wiehing to ohtain eeed ehould apply through a county agent or local crop improvement association. Only growers who are members of the Minnesota Crop Improvement association whoee fields and equipment are suited to the production of clean seed will be approved.

The Minnesota etation also announces the addition of Wisconsin No. 38 barley to its recommended list for Minnesots. This barley has been a consistently high yielder at all the Minnesota atations and is indorsed hy maltsters.

"TREASON" TRIALS PLANNED FOR AUSTIAN SOCIALIST HEADS

Vienna—The Dollfuse goverment has announced that charges of treason will be hrought against the 24 members of the exective committee of the eocialist party. Among the leaders now in the Austro-fascist prisons are Karl Seitz, former burgomaster of Vienna and Dr. Karl Kenner, the first chancellor of the Austrian repuhlic.

The Socialist paper, Arbeiter Zeitung, made a surprise appearance in Vienna last week. Published in Czechoelovakia and delivered by government mail carriers, it contained a call to eocialists to prepare to resume the fight against fascism in the near future.

REEMPLOYMENT IS UP TO INDUSTRY, PERKINS SAYS

Interoational Labor Newe Service

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins tcld the code authority conference that two and a half million wage earners hnve heen re-employed, hut eight to nine million men and women are still either nnemployed or employed in Governmsnt enterprises. It is up to industry to sclve the prohlem of pntting them back into industry, she said.

Employment in the durable goods Industry must be increaeed hy a million and a half over November, 1933 payrolls. At least 728,000 persons must be added to payrolle in coneumption goods industries the Secretary declared.

THE PRACTICAL SYMPATHY OF BRITISH WORKINGMEN

London—In every iseue the "Daily Herald" is pnblishing reports on the progress of the relief campaign for the Austrian workers organized by the National Joint of the British Lahor Movement. The number of trade unions which have nlready hegun to help in the campaign is growing daily. Large trade unions euch as the Transport and General Workers' Union have made grants of as much as one thousand pounds ($5,000) from their central funde, and their bronches are of course contributing as well.

3000 MINNESOTA FARMERS BORROW $8,457,000 IN THE MONTH OF FEBRUARY

With loans averoging over $1,000 000 a day for every working day of February, the Federal Land Bank loaned to 3,140 Minnesota farmers during February $8,457,000, it was announced at Farm Credit headquarters this week.

This ontstripe all former records for benefits conferred on Minnesota farmers: and also breaks all other former recorde of the Federal Land Bank. The Minnesota loans comprised 1558 regular Land loans totaling approximately $5,791,000 and 1582 commiseioner's loans.

For 2 months of 1934 the bank has loaned over 40 million dollars, compared with 34 million in 12 mcnths of 1933. Its loans went to 14,3000 farmers in 1933 and have already benefited 17,360 in the 2 months of this year.

Since the emergency lending program started last May the Federal Land Bank has put over 75 million dollars into the hands of more than 31,000 farmers. Every month since July has seen a big increase in loans closed compared with the preceding month.

NRA HAS BROKEN DOWN SAYS NORMAN THOMAS

Chicago—"There is an ntter hreakdown of enforcement machinery in all parts of th country I have visited," Norman Thomas has wired General Hugh Johnson. "You have cracked down on no great employer axcept where lahor was organized to do the cracking.

"Your feehle geeture of eupport to Ford workers commenced after more than fonr monthe' gallant etruggle. Chevrolet company in St. Lonis is openly refuaing compliance with order to reemploy men discharged for belonging to nnion. Fifth Avenue Coach employees discharged in August still await justice.

"It is imposeible to protect the rights of labor so long as you rely upon weak enforcement machinery largely administered hy and for labor haters. Moreover, codes today operate to help monopolistic profiteering fixing."

"There will be no satisfactory solntion," Thomas told Chicago reporters, "on the basis of an imposaible partnership between workers and a profit making industry."

Miss Carol Lillo returned Monday from a business trip to St. Paul. While there she was the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. I. Frishie, 1256 Ashland Avenue.

Read the following indorsement by the Farmer-Labor Leader;

The book shows the background of most of the controversies which arose over the income tax proposal, the unemployment insurance law. the chain store tax and other measures. It points out the weaknesses of certain groups in both House and Senate, and dissects the political intrigues with considerable skill. All in all, it is an excellent record to be used in the 1934 campaign and everyone interested in the political developments in the state should hav a copy for reference purposes.

ALL NORTHWEST INTERESTED IN BIG SPORTSMAN'S SHOW

Covering two floors of the huge Minneapolis auditorium with hundreds of exhibits and half a hundred entertaining events and features from dancing to rifle shooting, the first annual Northwest Sportsman's Show will be held here from April 1 to 7.

Members of sportsman's organizations from every otwn in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Northern Michigan, North and South Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, Iowaand Nebraska and parts of Canada have been invited by letter to attend this show, which will portray all sports activities, both indoors and out.

"The purpose of this big show is to lay emphasis on conservation of the entire resourses of the great Northwest," C. K. Odekirk, manager of the show said in announcing it. "Too often we think of conservation as being confined only to game birds, animals and fish. We should always consider all other factors, such as trees, water, wild flowers, song birds, and similar things contributing to the existance of wild life."

"Our plan is to conduct an intense education of all sportsmen and nature lovers to the needs for conservation of all of our natural resources during this week."

Part of the entertainment events and features as now ready to announce include golf exibits, rifle shooting , fly casting, marksmanship tournaments, both rifle and archery, a horseshoe pitching tournament, field dog bench show, retriving contest, display of both men and women's sports clothing by living models, lectures and movies by leading conservationists, volley ball, the Northwest Pingpong Tournament, and enormous displays of game and fish, all alive.

Organizations endorsing the big show include theMinnesota State Conservation Department, the University of Minnesota biological department, Izaak Walton League, Minnesota Game Protective League, Minnesota State Athletic Commission, Minnesota Forestry Association, American Legion Conservation Department, Hennepin County Sportsman's Club, Minnesota Trapshooters Association, Minneapolis Bait Casting Club, St. Paul Fly and Bait Casting Club, National Horseshoe Association, St. Anthony Gun Club, Minnesota Assotiation of the Amateur Athletic Union, and various boys and girls outdoor organizations.

Smallest Thing Having Life

Two types of diatomes, one-celled animals or plants, the smallest living things in the world, are magnified hundreds of times before it is possible to photograph them. By magnifying the smallest 2,400 times, it is brought so close to the eye that the "ribs" or vertical lines in the diatome are distinct. These ribs measure only one four-hundredths of the diameter of the human hair. Another diatome, when magnified 1,000 times, is used in testing the flatness of the field of a microscope. Diatomes are found in fresh and salt water.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

WE WANT LEADERS, BUT WE DO NOT TOLERATE BOSSES.

There seems to be a concerted move on the port of some of the state officials to precipitate the state convention in the choice of candidates for state and congressional offices. Such activity is absolutely unjustified and can only result in clashes between the Farmer-Labor party as such and the Farmer-Labor association. There is no objection to anyone aspiring for public office of course. It is the right and the privilege of every American citizen. Neither can there be any objection to starting a boom for this or that person. But there are a great many very valid reasons why the state officials elective or appointive should refrain from selecting a slate and pull wires and bring pressure to bear in favor of such a slate.

Discounting the propaganda of the Twin City daily press, it is nevertheless quite apparent at this time that efforts are being made from St. Paul to put Representative Elmer Holm of Dilworth over as the ninth district candidate for congress on the Farmer-Labor ticket. We have no particular aversion to Mr. Holm, altho we do believe that there are other Farmer-Laborites in the district who are better qualified for the position and have better rights to our support. Nevertheless, if Mr. Holm is indorsed by the ninth district convention we shall support him. We feel that the convention is best qualified to pass on the merits and demerits of the candidates. What we wish to make clear, is the fact that we shall insist that the ninth district be allowed to thresh out its own problem without outside interference.

The ninth district was delivered a strong progressive majority while the rest of the state was still babbling about the farmers and the workers having nothing in common. This district sent a Non-Partisan delegation to the legislature back in 1918 and we have sent progressives there ever since, that have battled for the rights of the people against the disheartening odds of reactionaries from other parts of the state. To attempt to tell us who we should run for Congress is almost like a ten year old girl trying to show grandma how to knit.

The Republican party was a fine, progressive party sixty of seventy years ago, but control of it passed into the hands of politicians and thru them into the hands of the special privilege class. The history of all other parties that have come and gone is the same. It is up to the rank and file of the Farmer-Labor association to profit from the examples of the past and to see that they keep control of the association and its policies in their own hands or it will go the way of other parties, into the hands of special privilege.

The very method of organization of the Farmer-Labor association is such that it should be easy for the rank and file to retain control of the organization. All that is necessary is that we insist that we do have control and keep our heart free of petty jealousies. We must remember that we are engaged in a struggle to rebuild an economic order; rebuild it to wipe away old inequalities ad injustices; rebuild it to the end that human rights; the right of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness shall be paramount to property rights. We are dedicated to the establishment of the cooperative commonwealth. We are not interested primarily in conducting an employment agency.

Offices, elective and appointive are important only to the end that filling them with capable men and women, heartily and conscientiously agreed on the ultimate goal of the party will hasten and facilitate the early arrival at the goal. They are the means to an end and not the end itself.

Leaders are leaders only as long as they annunciate and expound the principles, policies and asperations of the movement. When the seek to dictate what those principles, policies and asperations shall be they are no longer leaders, they are bosses and we will not tolerate bosses.

WHY THE OBJECTION TO A PUBLIC HEARING

It is hard to understand the action of the CWA grievance board in denying a public hearing to the nine CWA workers who were discharged some time ago and demanded a hearing on the complaints made against them. If the complaints were justified, if the CWA board in this county has conducted its work honestly and without favoritism, then it certainly should have nothing to fear from a public hearing. The fact that the men who involved would naturally have the most to lose from a public hearing, demanded it to be public goes far to substantiate their claim that their discharge os unjustified. The refusal of the grievance board to let it be open to the public certainly places it in the unenviable position of having some explaining to do.

There has been reports of favoritism and unfair tactics by CWA officials coming to us from all over the country, but up to the present time no shadow of suspicion has been cast upon the local board. If they wish their reptation for fairness to be continued, it behooves them to make a prompt and frank explanation of their objection to a public hearing. If there is anything in their records that can not stand publicity, the sooner we know it the better for everyone concerned.

LIFE'S DARKEST MOMENT

We heard a story the other day about a certain Republican editor who called up a Farmer-Labor Legislator on the phone and requested that he go to St. Paul and interview the governor to further the candidacy of a democrat for an appointive position. As the story was told us, the conversation went something like this:

Editor, "Don't you think Mr. Brown would be a good man for this office? Mr. Smith."

Representative, "Yes, Mr. Brown is a very capable man and I am sure he would fill the position with honor."

Editor; "I was sure you would think so. We were wondering if you would go along to St.Paul and see the Governor to recommend him."

Representative; "Well—I am pretty busy."

Editor; "Yes, yes, I know. Of course we would be glad to pay all expenses and hire a man to take your place while you are gone."

Representative; "Who is going down?"

Editor; "Why—ah, Mr. Jones of this city will be going down."

Representative; "I am awfully sorry, but you see Mr. Jones was the only businessman in your city who refused to let me put my campaign cards in his place of business last campaign. It would be very embarrassing for me so you must excuse me."

O! Comediante, O! Tragediante,

WEEKLY WASHINGTON LETTER

BY
Congressman Paul John Kvale

The President's request for power to enter into trade agreements with other nations which might provide for raising or lowering of existing tariff rates, commented on briefly in the last week's letter, has been modified considerably as the result of the sharp protests it aroused in Congress. Proposing originally to be permanent legislation and to repeal the existing flexible provisions entirely, under which the Tariff Commission recommends changes to the President after study, the amended plan seems likely to provide for a three year period of operation of the new system, and continues the commission's power to study and recommend ate charges to the President.

It will not, however, be permitted to take such action on any rates that result from his tariff and trade agreements with other lands, which he hopes to use as a means of improving our relations with other powers as well as of giving us some renewed hold on world markets for many of our surplus products. Nor will it permit any tampering with the list of products and materials on the "free list" as Congress wrote it. Commodities on this list are not assessed any charge for entering our domestic markets, and Congressional leaders regard its preservation as important.

The measure is nothing revolutionary, but represents the trend in tariff legislation over a great many years. Little by little tariff legislation, originally one of the most important funtions of the legislative branch, either through grants of power to the independent and semi-judicial Tariff Commission, or through delegation of power t the Chief Executive. This step is imprtant for the reason that it represents the first actual break in the dizzying climb, ever upwards, of the various rates, especially since the war. Other nations retaliating in self protection and perhaps in some measure of revenge, took similar actions with the result that economic relations between natins have been seriously disturbed. The President, realizing this, dares boldly to ask for the power to lower some rates if by so doing he can gain concessions from nations interested in such rates which will be of advantage to the United States.

The Supreme Court, in an important decision revolving around the right of the State of New York to control its milk prices, has reafirmed the position it took in approving Minnesota's Moratorium law, and has thereby given even clearly its approval to the general character of legislation embodying the several fronts of the New Dealer's attacts on depression.

Its importance will be reflected in the added assurance on the part of the officials in the AAA, where some doubt had begun to creep in, as the results of the continued attacts on its policies by enemies who insisted the act and its application to be unconstitutional.

Mention of the AAA recalls the rather extended comment in this column about two weeks ago regarding the dairy situation, and particularly the administration's policy regarding production and sale of fluid milk in cities. The department has continued its resistance to the group of House Members which organized, bitterly assailed the Department of Agriculture and Secretary Wallace, and that the milk producers be guarenteed a minimum price, and the department also set a minimum resale, or retail price.

The Secretary now very properly points out that he has not lowered the price to the producer in a single city as the result of his new policy, but that he has increased it in several places. He has most admirably decided that he will not use his office to guarantee a fixed profit to distributors who have been proven by departmental auditors to have made as much as thirty percent annually on their invested capital.

In that connection, it is interesting in the extreme to note that some of these distributing companies have been receiving tremendous salaries, as revealed by the report given a short time ago to the Senate by the Federal Trade Commission. Twenty two executives, for instance, in two of our leading national milk concerns hauled down salaries in 1932 of more than a million, or an average salary per man of nearly fifty thousand dollars. That would have paid the milk bills for a whole year for thirty thousand children. A little time with a pencil and paper will show that to pay these twenty two executives' salaries for that year, it took the gross income of 1,650 farms, each with a herd of ten cows giving normal yields for a whole year.

Figures like those rather weaken the hands of the group which is trying to interfere with the department's program for restricting distributors, increasing the prices of milk and butterfat to farmers everywhere, instead of just around the larger cities, and in addition of giving the milk to the consumer at a price which will stimulate consumption and create an additionel demand.

Indications are that these developments together with other considerations that cannot be discussed for want of space, may result in a thorough investigation by the Federal Trade Commission into the whole milk distribution business. Certainly it has developed in recent years into a decidedly big business institution, with all the earmarks of powerful centralized domination, and with racketeering and violence to be added to the exorbitant profits that have been shown up.

An Early Edison Experiment

To test a chemical theory, young Thomas Edison induced his father's chore boy to swallow a quantity of seidlitz powders, believing that the gases thus generated would enable the lad to fly, but the only results were stomach pains for the chore boy and a vigorous application for young Edison of a strong switch.

Especially when we have a surplus of everything.

Minute Sermons

By Dr. Crawford Grays

What goes on in the depths of one's being will rise to the face in noticeable indications.

Discontent soon shows its fevered spidit in frettish features. Anger reveals unlovable lines that will not hide. Uncontrolled passions pencil course markings.

Fine thinking, noble living, unselfish deeds, righeous traits work their way into the face and all unconsciously imprint beauty there.

Love softens the features and gives them a warmth like the gentle beauty of spring flowers. Inner peace reveals itself by a quit calm in the face. Purity of thought manifests itself by a winsome reverence in the eyes. Kindness writes its autograph on the cheek. Sorrow sweetly borne transfigures the face with an appealing beauty.

Question: When should I take out my partner's one suit bid with notrump?

Answer: A pass of your partner's opening one bid is permissible only when you hold less than one plus Honor Tricks. As a general rule, notrump takeouts deny support for partner's major suit but do not deny support for a minor suit. With a balanced distribution of the hand, a notrump response should occasionally be preferred, even when holding adequate support in partner's major suit. Of course, it is understood that you do not have a bidable suit together with at least 1½ Honor Tricks in hand, as with such a hand you would take out in suit.

When considering the notrump takeout, the 4-5-6 count should be carefully studied. Now with a balanced hand containing about one plus to two plus honor tricks, a one notrump should be made. If you have about 2½ to three honor tricks, a two notrump bid should be made. If you bid only one, you are generally denying as much as 2½ honor tricks. You know that your partner, by his opening bid, has at least 2½ and five honor tricks in the combined hands should be good for two notrump.

Two notrump is almost forcing, so openly hand should respond unless he has a bare 2½ honor trick with the barren 4-3-3-3 distribution.

Your immediate response of three notrumps shows at least 3½ honor tricks, so is a mild slam invitation. Should partner hold three and a half honor tricks, then you are in the slam zone. Don't forget the 4-5-6 count when trying to decide with how many notrump you will respond.

Raleigh's Burial

In the chancel of St. Margaret's, Westminster, near by the altar, lies the headless body of Sir Walter Raleigh. His execution on October 29, 1618, took place close at hand in Old Palace Yard. After the head had been shown at the four corners of the scaffold, it was placed in a leather bag, over which Sir Walter's gown was thrown, and was borne away by Lady Raleigh in a coach. For the 29 years of her widowhood Lady Raleigh preserved this sad memento mori in her keeping.

Squirrels Controlled

Naturalists say that when any species of squirrels becomes too abundant the situation is controlled naturally in one of several ways. For example, the natural enemies of that species may migrate into the area because of the abundance of the food supply. If that does not occur, disease, which is always present, may become epidemic. The food required by the species may become depleted, which condition may weaken or kill enough specimens to restore a balance.

HAUNTED

By Joan Lascelles Ranson

The ghost of autumn haunts the early spring.
The half-burnt umber of dead leaves
Clings to boughs new-budded with fresh green.
Among bright garlands of clustered sheaves,
The ghostly leaves of last year, half unseen
With fading strength still weakly cling,
Until the harsh wind, blowing day by day,
For the growing young makes way.
In youthful spring the dark and sadder note
Of vanished grandeur, autumn's outworn coat,
Reveals a beauty soon to fade again.
Nature beholds its youth with wistful pain,
In these new buds, so soon to turn;
Just as young men, in glimpses, learn
The outworn tiredness of the old,
Who to the tree of life still firmly hold.

KEEP THE FAITH

Union Advocate

If the Farmer-Labor party is to grow in usefulness and service to the people of Minnesota, its leadership must keep the faith of those who created the organization. Its leadership must yield to party discipline in occasion.

Just now there is a rumored movement on foot to barter and trade for political prestige. There is talk, here and there, of Farmer-Labor support of certain democrats seeking congressional ambitions. Outstanding among those expecting Farmer-Labor support is State Representative John J. McDonough, frequently referred to as the mouthpiece of the Farmer-Labor administration in the lower chamber of the legislature. Rumor is rife that he has the support of the Farmer-Labor administration for congress.

Representative McDonough is a democrat and has never posed as a Farmer-Laborite at any time. If he is the mouthpiece of Governor Olson he can only claim to be the personal mouthpiece of the governor. He has never been acclaimed by the Farmer-Labor group in Ramsey county, nor has he been recognized as anything but a democrat. He has cooperated with Farmer-Laborites, who in turn have supported him because they did not have any other alternative under the circumstances.

If there is any substance to the rumor that the state administration plans to do a little horse trading here and there, it is high time that the rank and file of the party be informed of the identity of those who seek to barter and sell. It is time that a halt be called to such tactics, and that those responsible be acquainted with the fact that the Farmer-Labor party and not a bazaar.

The Farmer Labor party will grow in usefulness only as it proves its real worth through demonstration. It cannot demonstrate as long as it remains 39 per cent Farmer-Laborite, 36 per cent republican and 25 per cent democrat. It can only prove its principles when it is at least 85 per cent simon-pure Farmer-Laborite. And neither republicans nor democrats are to be trusted to execute or demonstrate Farmer-Labor principles.

If there is actually a tendency on the party of certain leaders to use the confidence and trust of the rank and file of the party to play the political stock market, let them beware.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SHOULD KNOW THIS BY NOW

Minneapolis Labor Review

We have stated in another editorial that chiseling employers have been most to blame that the NRA did not accomplish more during the first year of the Roosevelt administration.

What has caused this? What has the President not done that he should have done that would have prevented this? What has he done that he should not have done that has had a tendency to bring this about?

We feel it all answered in the mistake the President made when he closed the banks of the nation a year ago for the protection of the depositors in not taking the banks over for the government.

We believe that it will be found that most banks are veritable citadels of sabotage against the NRA.

In the past the banks shaped the policies of industries toward the workers and toward government. They have not ceased to do this and they will continue to do it so long as there is private ownership of banks regardless of the fact but for loans from the government and purchase of their stock by the government many of these very same banks that are attempting to scuttle the NRA would have their doors closed. Privately owned banks reserve the right in most instances to dictate to concerns that borrow money from them what both their labor and political policies shall be. Banks are decidedly opposed to the NRA

Take over the banks for the government Mr. President and you will remove one of the biggest handicaps to the NRA

MINNESOTA AUTO TAXES

Windom Citizen

We still insist that the Minnesota auto tax is too low, when one considers the property, and the work that thousands of voters who formerly had no interest in trunk highways now live on the new, unimproved routes, we look for a demand for enough income to take care of a little construction in coming years. If we are informed correctly a car that is taxed at $7.50 in this state would be taxed at over twice that amount in Iowa. Iowa is still building roads. In Minnesota we have no funds for construction, unless Uncle Sam will give us some.

TOWN MEETINGS

Minneapolis Journal

Annual town meeting in Minnesota townships, will take place March 13. The township has often been referred to as the last stand of pure democracy. The town system in Minnesota is copied from that of New England where for centuries the town meetings have been forums of debate on local government issues.

In Minnesota, however, the old funtions of the townships have been largely taken from them by legislation centratizing the care of the poor and the upkeep of highways in County hands. There is little left for the town meetings to decide that really interests the average citizen, and the meetings are poorly attended. There has been some increase of attendance in the last two or three years, caused by the demand for economy, and results have been shown in greatly reduced town levies

The town unit may not be economic for administration under modern conditions, but it is unfortunate to see the old institution of the town meeting on the decline. Other governmental matters are handled by elected representatives. In the town meetings, each individual has a direct voice in levying his own taxes.

In Goodhue County a plan offered by T. A. Hoverstad is given publicity by the Kenyon Leader. He wants each town meeting to elect delegates to a county convention to be called for the express purpose of discussion of local government systems, laying stress on the importance of the township.

It may bee too late to return the township to its former status, but it is worth while to safeguard the voice of the people in local governmental affairs. If they do little else, at least the town meetings can discuss and vote recommendations for governing policies in County, State and even National affairs. There is something about the dictum of citizens and taxpayers, assembled in their sovereign capacities, which commands [illegible] attention. The accumulated mass [illegible] resolutions [illegible] large number of town meetings [illegible] an expression of opinion to which even Washington must listen. Neither are the educational results of such discussions to be ignored.

And then we heard a story about a women who having swallowed a dime rushed t the doctor and he made her caugh up two dollars.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Minneapolis—One hundred and nine persons were arrested here in raids on illegal liquor stores.

Hastings—A new parochial school building ,to cost between $60,000 and $70,000, is to be built by the Guardian Angel's church of Hastings.

Cannon Falls—A team of horses sold for $290 at an auction at the W. V. Stimson farm here. Cows brought $50 to $60 and young calves $25.

St. Paul—Minnesota's oldest bachelor, Dan Eyre of St. Paul, was 103 years old March 7. He received a cake with 103 candles on it, a small bonfire.

Winona—L. L. Brown, 75, southern Minnesota lawyer who had practiced in Winona the last 50 years died from complications of injuries suffered in an automobile accident 10 days ago.

Warren—The rabbit hunt staged by the Warren Gun club's rabbit hunters closed with the team headed by Steve Easter winning with 2,501 points. The losing team, headed by Si Anderson, collected 2,110 points.

St. Paul—With 2,270 more farmers now than in 1931, the back to the farm movement in the state has become a reality, the state farm census for 1933 taken by the U. S. department of agriculture reveals.

Mankato—Farmers of Blue Earth county are obtaining federal corn loans at the rate of $11,000 a day, according to figures compiled in the office of L. E. McMillan, county agent here. Applications received to his office cover 546,000 bushels of corn.

Minneapolis—Steps to test the right of the state to minerals, sand and gravel beneath public waters, involving millions of dollars to unmined merchantable iron ore in northern Minnesota were started at a meeting of the Minnesota conservation commission.

St. Paul—A 25-year conservation program in Minnesota to fit in with the federal planning scheme of the national administration is being planned by the state department of conservation. Commissioner E. V. Willard announced following a meeting with directors of the divisions.

St. Paul—Processing taxes totaling $14,533,330 have been collected by the U. S. internal revenue office since July 9, it was announced by Joseph Wolf, collector. The money collected principally from wheat and hogs in Minnesota, will be paid back to farmers as benefits for crop reduction.

St. Paul—Purchasers of intoxicating liquor in Minnesota will now know whether the blended whisky they are buying contains ethyl alcohol, colored water on prune juice. New federal labeling regulations became effective March 7 for domestic liquors, with April 7 the deadline for more specific labels on imported brands.

Marshall—Mrs. Lydia A. Hodgkin, Marshall's 84year-old world traveler, is back home after a trip to Palestine. After 18 days in Jerusalem she sailed from Port Said, stopping on the way to New York at Rhodes, Istambul, Athens, Naples, Ville Franche and Gibraltar. The trip began two months ago. She left Paris just before the big riots.

Grand Marais—Snow shoes and dog team will be required to reach the northernmost post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, located on the Gunflint trail, 33 miles north of here. The new post, Gunflint Trail post No. 2960, was installed at the Veterans Conservation corps camp No. 1785 at Poplar Lake. Officers and 70 men were installed into the order.

St. Paul—Three midwest governors indorsed a demand for price fixing of basic agricultural commodities by the federal government at a meeting at Des Moines, Ia. The governors—Olson of Minnesota, Schmedeman of Wisconsin and Herring of Iowa—designated Olsen as their spokesman at conclusion of a two-day parley of midwest farm leaders from 10 states.

Shakopee—A new state highway up the Minnesota river bottom, from Mendota to Shakopee, is being planned as a CWA project, with unemployed men housed at Fort Snelling to do most of the work. This will replace the old Minnesota valley road which was included in the mileage added to the trunk highway system by the 1933 legislature and will parallel the Omaha railway through Savage.

Hibbing—Hibbing, richest little village in the world, was dragged into the spotlight again on charges of Edward J. Pearlove, state comptroller, that lavish expenditures, both legal and illegal, had been made from municipal funds. The charges, made in an audit completed in December, cover the five years from 1928 to 1932, inclusive. Excessive tax levies of more than $1,000,000 and unauthorized payments exceeding $300,000 were alleged in the report. The village has many businesses subject to license by ordinance which are operating without payment of the license fee, the audit charges.

St. Paul—Cancellation of CWA projects will follow any attempts to bring personal or political pressure to bear in CWA employment offices, or failure to follow federal preference procedure, Gov. Floyd B. Olson, state administrator, warned.

Duluth—Water volume in the six reservoir lakes at the headwaters of the Mississippi river increased 545,000,000 cubic feet during February, Major D. F. Johns, U. S. district engineer, announced. At the end of the month there were 11,148,000,000 cubic feet of water in the lakes.

Although the many details of administration are not yet fully decided upon by the state emergency relief committee, the basic principle of the new relief program will be "work relief." Persons elibible for relief will be given the opportunity to volunteer wark in exchange for the aid given them. Payment will be in cash and according to the Minnesota wage scale just sent out to administrators, in which n minimum of 55 cents an hour is established. Work relief will apply first ta drouth areas included in the direct relief set-up and to other direct relief counties.

A new "racket" of forging farmers names to gasoline tax refunds has been interrupted by George H. Griffith, Director af the State Oil Inspection Department. Two oil station attendants were recently convicted on this charge, others are under investigation. Under the state law, farmers are exempted from paying the 3 cents a gallon tax when gasoline is not nsed to operate a vehicle on the highways, but the tax must be paid purchase and then refunded through the form of a claim to the Oil Inspection Department. Mr. Griffith said the forgeries were made possible through the laxity of notary publics who attested to signatures of persons not present.

The chief difference between a politician, so-called and a atatesman is that the former will lend his support only to issues which are popular and which will benefit him politically while the later will lend his support to nn issue that may, for the moment, not claim popular support but which he believes to be in the public interest. By lending aid to the campaign for a municipal power plant in St. Paul, which was known to have virtually no chance of passage. Governor Olson showed that the support of a principle which he believes to be sound and beneficial to the people is of greater concern to him than to his own political prestige. That may be one of the reasons why the people believe they have a great leader in their Governar.

After the Club Meeting

By FLORENCE DOUGLAS

WHEN it first happened Mabel thought tbat they ought to call off the clnb meeting. With little sister Dalsy and herself so upset that they couldn't cut the bread for the sandwiches straight, how were they going tn he ahls ta ect as hostesses far the literary club thet night? Bnt after talking to tbe president nf tha club over the lelephone Mahel reluctantly chnnged her mind.

"Somcthing really rather npsetting has happened," she seid, with an air af mystery. "Especielly npsetting to poor little Dalsy, though I'm nervons enongh over it, goodness knows."

"Pnor little Delsy," was a rather heautiful young woman of twenty-five, who lived elone with her hachelnr sister, some ten yeers her senior.

"You'll just heve to have the meeting," Mrs. Henry Jones, the president nf the club, insisted, "unless, of course, it is physically impossihle. Every ons is expecting to he there, and we couldn't reach every one now. We're going to hnve theetrical charades—going to act out the nemes of great actors or plnys—and yonr house is so nice for chnrodes, with tha wida double doors and the lerge drawing room."

Daisy eppeared rather pale and listless that evening, while Mabel, whn was clearly excited, showed cheeks thet flemed with color.

The chnrades progressed smoothly enough, the members of the club dividing themselves into fonr groups, each one af which presented some distinguished sctor, living or desd. The grnup of which Mrs. Jones was leader had chosen Richard Mansfield. "Rich" was easy enough, end "ard" wonld he rendered hy a Cockney Englishman trying to say hard. For the lsst name, "field" was comparatively easy, and for the first syllable they wauld just need e mnn's hat or cost.

"No use seerching here," said Mrs. Jones. "There never was a man in the femily, or et least nat for ever so long. But I'll just run to one nf the neighhors. I guess Professor Barnes, next door, would he glad enough to let me have his hat."

So she hurried to the Bernes. Bnt the house was closed. So she went on to the next house. The first knock at the old-fashioned hrass knocker hronght a prepossessing man to the door.

"I have come on a strange errand," said the thoroughly substantial Mrs. Janes. "We are having e club meeting end are doing charadee. We need a man's hat or coat. Would you lend us one?"

"I'll lend yon both," said the young men, somewhat amused.

The charade was entirely successful. True, Mabel looked surprised when Mrs. Jones appeared in a derby and ulster. "I wonder where she got the man's hat and coat?" she said. which gave her the clue she needed tn guessing the charade.

It was some minutee after the lest guest had departed, end Mahel snd Deisy were straightening up before going ta bed. Dalsy had just come npon the derhy and ulster when the telephone called Mahel.

"I'm awfully sorry," came Mrs. Jones' voice, "but I forgot to retnrn the man's hat and cont I horrowed. I got them at the hnuse jnst heyond Professor Bnrnes. Would you mind seeing that they get hack?" And she hung up.

"The housa heyond the Barnes," Mehel repeeted, looking hlankly into tbe receiver. "Why, Dalsy—thet het and coet—they must helong to—to—"

"Not to—" and Daisy went even paler than she had heen the rest of tba evening.

After Mabel had mede Daisy take a cup af hlack coffee they talked the matter over. First Mahel insisted that she would go alone, and then it wes agreed that it would look hetter if they went tngether. There was hardly a chance that "be" would come to the door.

But "he" did come to the door—Hunter James Corbett himself.

"Your bet and nlster," Mahel said.

"Ob, we hardly expected ta see you," said Daisy.

Mehel was protesting. Bnt somehow Hunter Corbett contrived ta get his neighhars into tha living room. And in a marvelously short time, considering, be hed persuaded Mahel as well as Daisy thet he hadn't really been to hlame at nll. Daisy and he had heen engeged, fanr yesrs ego, and then there was e misunderstending. Then he went eway and had not written because be thought Daisy loved some one else. He had come hack that day for the first time in fonr years to try and win her hack.

The terrible thing thet had so shaken Mahel's nerves was the event that morning nf their seeing James return as tbey walked ont to do the morning's ordering.

"And to think I borrowed a het from Daisy's future hnsbend," said Mrs. Jones later, thongh sbe never did find nnt to her own satisfaction just what the excitement was all about.

RED LAKE COUNTY FARMER-LABORITES HOLD CONVENTION

out opposition and the new officers were seated.

Hon. M. A. Brattland of Ada, newly appointed judge of the 14th judicial district was introdnced as one of the pioneer progressives of the Ninth congressional district. "We have been tied hand and foot by the precedents, lows and contracts of the pest," he said, "it is time that the judiciary interpret the laws in th epirit of the future." Referring to the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court on the Mortgage Moratorium law, he nrged his listeners to read both the upholding and the diseenting opinione of the court on that measure. Chief Justice Hughes in his opinion was facing towards the fnture, he said while the dissenting opinion altho i was masterly written faced the past and would govern the present and the future by the ontmoded restrictions of the past. "Until the judiciary interpret the laws in the spirit of the future we shall not be truly free." he said. "Laws must be interpreted to protect the producers, the common man," he continued and voiced the hope that the progressives would make a clean sweep of the electi ns and place men in the halls of Congress, in the Legislature and in other positions that were of integrity with an eye to the welfare of the commonman and their faces to the future.

Fred Miller of Red Lake Falls, August Lindquist of Oklec, John Sorenson of Garnese of Oliver Flage of Red Lake Falls were elected to the county central committee which is composed of these four and the chairman, the vice chairman and secretary-treasurer.

W. E. Quist of Thief River Falls spoke shortly contraeting the conventions formerly held in Red Lake county with the present large gathering.

Mr. Cogswell, chairman of the Farmer-Labor association of Itasca county gave a talk on the issues of the coming campaign and gave graphic illustrations of the methods being used to get the farmers against the workingmen.

Carl Swanson, Ernest Patnode and A. H. Carlson were elected to represent Red Lake county at the state convention to be held at the state convention to be held at St. Panl on March 27. The executive committee was instructed to issue credentials to fifteen delegates to each of the 65th Legislative convention and the Ninth district congressional convention.

Resolutions endorsing the Frazier bill, state banks, state insurance of public buildings, state weighing and grading of livestock and opposing nepotism were adopted as were resolutions commending and endorsing Governor, Floyd B. Olson, Senator Henrik Shipstsd, State Senator Laura Naplin representatives J. O. Melby and W. E Day. Another commending the Farmer-Labor Leader and its policies was also adopted. A resolution was addressed to the state convention requesting that the division of membership be charged to give the local club 25 cants, the county organization 50 cents and the state organization 25 cents. A resolution was also passed thanking Carlos Stageberg of the Edncational Bureau for his services as temporary chairman.

who are known to be bona-fide Farmer-Laborities."

"However if Republican wheelhorses should attempt to coma in and get control of the Pennington county Farmer-Labor association, through buying memberships and a seat in the convention at a dollar a seat, they will a rude awakening," Mr. Berve said.

The convention will be called to order at 12 o'clock noon, but all delegates who do not have their regular credential cards should be on hand early and secure them from the credential committee, which will be on hand earlier, it is announced.

According to information received from the state headquarters, a temporary chairman, vice chairman, secretary treasurer and as many directors as the convention may see fit will be elected at this time. A regular county central committee will be set up when there five of more clubs in the county. At that time each clnb will elect members of the county Central Committee from its membership, one for the organization and one for each bundred members or fraction thereof. No club may have more than five members of tha county central committee. This county central committee will then choose from its own membership a county chairman, vice chairman and secretary-treasurer.

Farmer-Labor Club is Formed at Highlanding

Honor for organizing the first Farmer-Labor club in Pennington county outside of the county seat, goes to the Township of Highlanding. Seventeen Farmer-Laborites of that township gathered at the Highlanding creamery on Saturday evening and after holding a short caucus on township officials proceeded to organize themselves into a Farmer-Labor club.

Alfred Hammersten was elected chairman; Anton Johnson, vice chairman; Palmer Wold, secretary; Peter Refness, treasurer; Elnar Jenson, director. A membership committee composed of Anton Johnson, Geo. Johnson and Andrew Fimrit was elected. The following are the charter members of the club: Geo. Johnson, Knute Hegland, Leo Ellingson, A. Fimrit, Anton Johnson, Elo Sanders, Olaf Haugan, Elvin Sanders Ed. Kerstsd. Gunnuf Gunstenson, Clifford Vad, Alfred Hammersten, Henry Hjelle, Palmer Wold, Peter Refness, and Elmnr Jenson.

The group laid plans for submitting an application for charter and for all members to attend the county convention in this city tomorrow.

State's Highway Revenue To go for Bond Charges

More than 33 per cent of the total state revenues of the Minnesota highway department thie year will to meet bond charges, according to N. W. Eleberg, highway commissioner.

Interest and principal payments on roed bonds issued in past years will claim $4,000,000 of the highway department's revenues in 1934, Mr. Elsberg said. This is one-third of the state collections for trunk highwaya anticipated this year, the estimated total being about $12,000,000.

Approximately $5,000,000 will be alloted for maintenance of the enlarged trunk system, which this year is more than 11,000 miles in length, compared with less than 6,800 miles previously. Costs of right-of-way, engineering, snrveys, plans, transfers to the stete motor vehicle fund and the etate generel fund and eimilar items will absorb nearly all of the remainder of state funds. Federal funds will be used for construction purposes.

Farmer-Laborites of Marshall County Hold Meet at Middle River

Farmer-Laborites of Marshall county gathered at Middle Rvier Friday in an enthusiastic meeting. Members of the county central committee were present. Richerd Rice the county secretary and endorsed by Marshall county and Roseau county Farmer-Labor convention as the district's candidate for state senator, gave n short talk. A talk was also made by E. M. Evans of Middle River. Mr, Evans is the Farmer-Lobor endorsed candidete for representative from Marshall county.

A membership list was started for the purpose of organizing a Farmer-Labor Association club in Middle River, and many signatures were affixed after the meeting. An organization meeting of the new club will be held in the near fnture.

R. M. Aalbu of Thief River Falls gave a short talk in which he severely criticized the record of Senator W. L. Peterson of Lancaster, "Tbie man hasn't a street car within 300 or more miles from his district" Mr. Aalbu said, "but he nevertheless led the fight that the reactionaries made against repeal of the nefarious Brooks- Coleman street railway act. I wonder what he traded for that service." He characterized Frank Green, Representative from Marshall county as a man whom he believed would trade nway his shirt to get a local bill thru.

"He expended probably thousands of dollars that you people had to dig down into your jeans to fork up, entertaining the legislators at dinners at one of the finest St. Paul hotels for tbe purpose of putting across the so-celled Marshall county bond bill." Mr. Aalbu said, "and it was absolutely unnecessary for no thinking man in the legielature could have voted against it." He also scored Mr. Green for voting against the bill which would have made it possible for the state to pay the supplementary school aid 100 cents on the dollar inetead of on a pro-rated basis during the term of Theo. Christianson as governor. Mr. Engen, Superintendent of schools of Marshall county apeaking shortly afterwards stated that without the supplementary school aid there would probably not be a high-school functioning in Marshall county outside of Warren.

Director of Concordia Choir is Highly Endorsed by Leading Music Critics

The Concordia Choir which appears here in concert April 0th at the new auditorium is under the direction of Prof. H. W. Monson, now serving his tenth year as head of the department of music at Concordia College, Moorhead, Minnesota.

Prof. Monson received his early musical training under Prof. Carlo Sperati, at Luther College, Decorah, Iowa. While stationed at Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky. during the war, he studied at the Louisville Conservatory of Music, where he was awarded first place in the annual Josephine McGild contest in composition.

After receiving further training under T. P. Giddings at the Mac Phail school of Music, Minneapolis, he spent two years in that city as high school music supervisor.

During his stay at Concordia College, Mr. Monson has written several compositions for the Concordia Choir, some of which are included on the program this year. Several of his compositions and arrangements have been issued under the title "The Concordia Choir Series," which is already finding a wide response wherever it has been introduced.

The Duluth News-Tribune speaks of "Mr. Monson's unusual gifts as a composer," while Prof. J. Victor Berquist, widely known Swedish composer, says, "When our congregations are willing to hear and our choirs are willing to sing music on the order of Prof. Monson's, then our church music will again attain the dignity it had during the time of Bach and Luther."

Mr. George Stump, vice-president of the Minneapolis college of music, says in a letter to the management, "I am quite sure that in Mr. Monson you have one of the country's finest choir directors."

Filings for District Judge Prove Popular

A spirited race for the offices to be filled on the district bench seems to be assured with five filings to date and more expected momentarily.

H. O. Chommie and J. M. Bishop, both of this city have filed and the Farmer-Labor county convention here last Friday endorsed Judge M. A. Brattland of Ada who has already filed for the office and urged H. O. Berve of this city to file, pledging the support of its forces. W. E. Rowe and Martin O'Brien of Crookston have both filed.

MANY LEISURE TIME GROUPS BEING FORMED

Any Club May Be Formed if Enough Interest is Shown

The recreational program for Thief River Falls is getting further under way with the organization of a Mens Rifle Club, Women's Gym Night, Girls Hobby corner, Boys Athletic Group and a concert orchestra.

The Men's Rifle Club will meet on Sunday mornings at nine o'clock in the basement of the NRS building. Herb Jung and Mr. Messenger will conduct the group and give instructions as to the finer points of target shooting, according to the district director Mr. Messenger.

Beginning with Wednesday of next week the women of this community will be able to use the gym in the basement of the NRS office for relaxation and physical fitness during the evening.

It will be open to them from six to ten o'clock under the direction of Roy Langevin whose activities in the mens recreational group has received much response.

According to Miss Alice Larson, the girls hobby club with a membership of 85, now meets in the Knox building on the second floor in the northeast corner room every night. The officers elected are: Dorothy Greenland, President; Violet Kelly, vice president; Ruth Wasgren, secretary; and treasurer; Adels Holmstrom, Publicity Chairman. Their interest groups have undertaken an unusual program consisting of outdoor cookery, play production, Writers' League, and soap carving.

Mr. Bruce states even though that the Oratorio has been presented that the Concert Orchestra will continue with rehearsals. All persons who can play an instrument, especially string instruments, are urged to talk to Mr. Bruce about joining the group. Concert music will be featured just for the sake of the enjoyment of well directed orchestration, according to announced plans of Mr. Bruce.

PENNINGTON GETS $44,185.00 FROM STATE FOR ROADS

Pennington county will receive $44,185.00 as its share of the state one-mill road tax and gasoline tax. This was decided at the 1934 meeting of the state board of allotment in St. Paul to apportion the state road and bridge fund, says a highway bulletin issued this week.

From the one-mill tax, Panninton Marshall and Red Lake counties will each receive $10,185, whils Pennington county's share of the gas tax will be $29,000, Red Lake county's share will be $25,000 and Marshall county's share will be $50,000. In addition to this Pennington county has been allotted $5,000 as a special allotment for C A number 24. Red Lake county gets a special allotment of $1,000 fo bituminous treatment on the road between Oklee and T. H. road numbe 92. Marshall county received no special allotment.

The entire proceeds of the one-mill tax go to state aid roads, while one third of the total gas tax collections go to county aid roads and two-thirds to state trunk highways.

The total amount to be distibuted from the State Road and Bridge fund this year will be considerably less than in 1932, owing to an estimated average tax delinquency of 25 per cent and a decreased consumption of gasoline in the state. The Board of Allotment placed the total available this year from the one-mill levy at $1,018,530 compared with $1,291,003 last year. The 1034 share of the counties in the gasoline tax was estimated at $3,2000,000 by the board, as agains $3,6000,000 in 1933.

Members of the board of allotmen are N. W. Elsberg, commissioner o highways; Stafford King, state auditor and Julius Schmahl, state treas.

The law fixes the minimum allotment of gas tax funds to any county at ¾ of one per cent of the tota amount available, while the minimum allotment to any one county from the one-mill tax is 1 per cent. The maximum allotment to any county is 8 per cent of each fund, Hennepin, Ramsey and St. Louis counties receive the maximum permitted by law. Gas tax funds are distributed to the counties in August and February of each year One-mill funds are paid out on state aid roads as completed projects are approved by the state highway department.

Farmer-Labor Congressional District Convention, April 7th

According to an announcement made by H. O. Berve, Secretary, and A. M. Landby, Chairman, of the Ninth Congressional District Farmer-Labor Association, the Ninth Congressional District Farmer-Labor Association's Convention is called to meet at Erskine, Minnesota, at the school auditorium, on Saturday April 7th, 1934, at 12:30 o'clock, noon. They ask that each county send a delegation of good dependable Farmer-Laborites to the convention and that these delegations should try to be there on time in order that the meeting can be started promptly.

The following business will be transacted at the convention according to Messers Berve and Landby:

REGION EIGHT TITLE WON BY CASS LAKE H. S.

Sheldon Gray Played Sensational Game Against Twin Valley

A fast and rangy team from Cass Lake high school won the region eigh basket ball championship last Friday night from Twin Valley by a score of 24 to 22. Twin Valley presented a team that gave the Cass Lake boys trouble all during the game. As the game ended in a tie of 20 to 20, an overtime period had to be played during which time Sheldon Gray, captain of the Cass Lake team, made two baskets unassisted while Twin Valley made two freethrows. The game was hard fought all the way through by two evenly matched teams. Cass Lake will represent this region at the state tournament today and tomorrow; they will meet Chisholm Thursday afternoon at four o'clock in the Minneapolis Auditorium in the second game of the tournament.

Those who saw the consolation game witnessed an upset in which Warren was decisively beaten by the Badger quint. Warren's team never threatened Badger after the game was under way; the final score was 30 to 21 which clearly indicates the strenght of the Badger team which was considered the weakest team in the tournament before the Warren-Badger tilt.

The tournament was a financial success, according to Morris Bye, regional chairman, due to the fine support given to them by the local townspeople as well as successful event in choosing a representative to the state tournament.

Scale Bought With Seal Funds Installed in School

A weighing and measuring scale to be used in the county school health program being carried out by the CWS nurse has been provided through the Christmas Seal funds, according to Mrs. C. W. Froata, Christmas Seal Local Manager, Thief River Falls.

The scale which will make possible the weighing and measuring of school boys and girls and the recording of their weight so that growth may be checked in future health examination, will be a valuable aid in the county school work.

"Scales and periodic weighing and measuring of boys and girls stimulate pupils' interest in growth and in practicing the proper habits of nutrition that help them make the proper gains," a bulletin from the Minnesota Public Health Association which provided the Christmas Seal scale, states; "Proper health habits build resistance to tuberculosis and other diseases and for this reason the providing of scales and the promotion of periodic weighing and measuring has always been included in the Christmas Seal program."

Mr. and Mrs. Miller of Gatzke were visitors in the city Tuesday.

Director of Concordia Choir is Highly Endorsed by Leading Music Critics

PROF. H. W. MONSON

The Concordia Choir which appears here in concert April 6th at the new auditorium is under the direction of Prof. H. W. Monson, now serving his tenth year as head of the department of music at Concordia College, Moorhead, Minnesota.

Prof. Monson received his early musical training under Prof. Carlo Sperati, at Luther College, Decorah, Iowa. While stationed at Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky. during the wur, he studied at the Louisville Conservatory of Music, where he was awarded first place in the annual Josephine McGild contest in composition.

After receiving further training under T. P. Giddings at the Mac Phail school of Music, Minneapolis, he spent two years in that city as high school music supervisor.

During his stay at Concordia College, Mr. Monson has written several compositions for the Concordia Choir, some of which are included on the program this year. Several of his compositions and arrangements have been issued under the title "The Concordia Choir Series," which is already finding a wide response wherever it has been introduced.

The Duluth News-Tribune speaks of "Mr. Monson's unusual gifts as a composer," while Prof. J. Victor Berquist, widely known Swedish composer, says, "When our congregations are willing to hear and our choirs are willing to sing music on the order of Prof. Monson's, then our church music will again attain the dignity it had during the time of Buch and Luther."

Mr. George Stump, vice-president of the Minneapolis college of music, says in a letter to the management, "I am quite sure that in Mr. Monson you have one of the country's finest choir directors."

Marshall County Gets $60,185 Red Lake County $36,185

Pennington county will receive $44,185.00 as its share of the state one-mill road tax and gasoline tax. This was decided at the 1934 meeting of the state board of allotment in St. Paul to apportion the state road and bridge fund, says a highway bulletin issued this week.

From the one-mill tax, Penninton Marshall and Red Lake counties will each receive $10,185, while Pennington county's share of the gas tax will be $29,000, Red Lake county's share will be $26,000 and Marshall county's share will be $50,000. In addition to this Pennington county has been allotted $5,000 as a special allotment for C A number 24. Red Lake county gets a special allotment of $1,000 for bituminous treatment on the road between Oklee and T. H. road number 92. Marshall county received no special allotment.

The entire proceeds of the one-mill tax go to state aid roads, while one third of the total gas tax collections go to county aid roads and two-thirds to state trunk highways.

The total amount to be distibuted from the State Road and Bridge fund this year will be considerably less than in 1932, owing to an estimated average tax delinquency of 25 per cent and a decreased consumption of gasoline in the state. The Board of Allotment placed the total available this year from the one-mill levy at $1,018,530 compared with $1,291,003 last year. The 1934 share of the counties in the gasoline tax was estimated at $3,2000,000 by the board, as against $3,6000,000 in 1933.

Members of the board of allotment are N. W. Elsberg, commissioner of highways; Stafford King, state auditor and Julius Schmahl, state treas.

The law fixes the minimum allotment of gas tax funds to any county at ¾ of one per cent of the total amount available, while the minimum allotment to any one county from the one-mill tax is 1 per cent. The maximum allotment to any county is 3 per cent of each fund, Hennepin, Ramsey and St. Louis counties receive the maximum permitted by law. Gas tax funds are distributed to the counties in August and February of each year. One-mill funds are paid out on state aid roads as completed projects are approved by the state highway department.

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

VOTES FOR SILVER FARM AID PLAN

Would Remonetize White Metal at Premium as Bounty for Surplus Export.

Washington—In spite of administration indifference, the house passed a silver remonetization-farm relief bill by a majority that ran well over the two-thirds vote required by procedure under which it was considered. Voting 257 to 112, it sent to the senate the Dies bill directing that silver be accepted at a premium above the world price in exchange for agricultural commodities in which a surplus exists. The metal thus received would be used as backing for new issues of silver certificates.

The debate was punctuated by insistent demands from Republican regulars for a statement of the administration's position on the measure. But the nearest thing to a definite answer they received was a statement by Representative Dies (Democrat of Texas), that Secretary Morgenthau had not opposed the bill in committee.

Under the bill, a board would be established to negotiate sales of agricultural surpluses to foreign buyers, and accept in exchange silver coin or bullion at a price to be fixed by the board, but not to be set higher than 2 per cent above the world price of silver.

A second limitation would fix the extent of the board's sales in one year at a volume at which the excess value of silver over the world price would not exceed $400,000,000. The silver received would be deposited in the treasury, with the latter authorized to issue silver certificates against it.

These would be used to compensate producers of commodities sold under the plan.

At the outset, Dies disclaimed any interest in the question from the point of view of the inflationist or the man from the silver states, and placed himself with the group who were behind the bill as a farm relief measure.

U. S. Will Set Up 12 New Banks.
Washington — President Roosevelt asked congress to set up 12 industrial credit banks which he had been told would safeguard the jobs of 346,000 persons and create work for 378,000 more. Legislation to allow the Federal Reserve system to create the banks, financing them by selling $140,000,000 of stock to the treasury, was introduced in both houses immediately.

Carnera, Baer Fight Set for June 14

RURAL CREDIT RENTS SHOW GOOD INCREASE OVER PREVIOUS YEAR

In spite of the depression, low prices, drought, and grasshopper infestation, the 1933 rental returns on Rural Credit farms show a marked increase over the preceding year, a statement issued by the Rural Credit Department reported.

"Still more gratifying, during the past year over $104,000 of 1932 and prior year's rent was collected. The greater part of the delinquent rent came from the upper Red River Valley district, which was the only section of the state where a near normal crop was harvested," the statement read.

It is the opinion of the officials of the department that should there have been a normal crop throughout the state, the rental income would have exceeded a million dollars.

Collections for the month of January were $28,753, an increase of $14,746 over the same month a year ago.

"ENEMIES HAVE WON BATTLE, NOT THE WAR," SAYS BAUER

New York—"Our enemies for a moment won a partial victory and thus can afford to say that the class war has ended. They think they have put the workers forever beneath the iron heel of dictatorship. They are greatly mistaken. Before long they are going to realize they have won a battle in the class war, but not the war itself."

This is the conclusion to an article by Otto Bauer, printed in the German Social-Democratic "Neue Vorwaerts" of Prague, Czechoslovakia, and sent by wireless to the New York Times.

Meanwhile, the Associated Press reports, placards have appeared thruout Vienna, "We are coming back, you can depend on us." The ability of Socialists to distribute literature and post placards in Vienna indicates that Socialist restance to the government is far from crushed.

Lessons from Conflict

In retrospect, Bauer has none of the cocksureness of the Communists who failed in several central European countries and then insisted that their tactics had nevertheless been right all the time. Instead, he analizes the mistakes of Austrian Social-Democracy during the past few years.

"We made mistakes. Of that there is no doubt. I can admit it more frankly since I am responsible.

"In April, 1932, the Pan-Germans and Nazis demanded a general election; the clericals were in the state of panic, fearing such elections would put the Nazis in power. If we had at this time offered in Parliment a vote against the elections, and promised 'tolerance' to the clerical government, we might have prevented the union of the Heimwehr and the clericals. We did not do so because we feared we would share the fate of our German comrades who also had tolerated a clerical government."

General Strike Too Late

When Dollfuss used force to prevent the reassembling of Parliament after Renner's resignation as Chancellor, Bauer says, "This was the moment when we should have called a general strike. But we shrank from the bloodshed of civil war. We were foolish enough to rely on the promise of Dollfuss to negotiate with us early in April to effect constitutional reforms.

"It is a question whether out mistakes in policy really altered the final result very much. Had we agreed to tolerate the clerical government we would probably have landed where the German Social-Democrats landed. A general strike might well have got the clericals and Nazis together and made Hitler instead of Dollfuss the dictator of Austria.

"We have always tried to steer a middle course between the extreme left Socialism of the Italian and Hungarian Socialists and the almost reactionary bourgeois Socialism of Germany. But our form was also defeated." Bauer then closes with his declaration of faith in the victory of Socialism.

MRS. CHRISTINA PARBST PASSES AWAY MAR. 14

Mrs. Christina Parbst passed away at her home at 933 Knight Ave. N. in this city Wednesday, March 14, at 8:45 p. m. She is survived by five children and twelve grand children, her children are John Parbst of Ridgedale, Canada; Mrs Meiser of the same place; Wm. A. Parbst, Otto C. Parbst, and Mrs. Laura Feregan, all of this city. Mrs. Parbst was born in Koolstad Varmland, Sweden September 29, 1851, and she came to this country in 1888 and moved to St. Paul where she lived for seven years after which she moved to Thief River Falls. She was married in 1883 to Lars Jorgen Parbst in Skien, Norway. She was a resident of Pennington county for 39 years.

The funeral services were held March 17 at the Zion Church at two P. M. Rev. E. L. Tungseth and Rev. J. O. Jacobson officiated at the services.

County Agent Reviews the Wheat Contract Provisions

To remind Pennington county farmers have signed or are planning to sign the wheat reduction contract of obligations they have incurred or will incur, County Agent R. M. Douglass has outlined these obligations as follows:

1. To seed to wheat in 1934 and 1935 not more than 85 per cent nor less than 54 per cent of the annual average acreage seeded in the three to five consecutive years immediately preceding 1933, known as the base period.

2. Signer who plants less than 54 per cent of his acreage in 1934 shall not be subject to the major penalties of the contract but shall have his 1934 payment reduced in proportion to the amount which his 1934 acreage falls short of the minimum requirement. This provision does not apply to farmers located in regions exempted because of unusual weather conditions which prevent planting or who would not plant this year because of regularly established rotation practices.

Note: "Notice of acceptance" accompanying wheat checks tells in columns 10, 11, and 12 the largest and smallest acreages that signer may seed in 1934.

3. To farm the land sown to wheat as wheat land usually is farmed in the locality and not to apply more commercial fertilizer per acre than has been applied in the base period.

4. The contracted acreage of 1934 shall not include land which is waste, gullied or eroded, and shall be the average of that on which wheat is ordinarily seeded on this farm.

5. The contracted acreage shall be posted in a manner to be designated by the Secretary of Agriculture or his representative.

6. The contracted acreage shall not be used for the production of any nationally produced agricultural product for sale, but may be used as follows:

a. For summer fallowing.

b. To plant soil—improving or erosion—preventing crops to be plowed under.

c. To plant permanent hay or pasture crops. No crop removal is permitted in year that chop is planted except by fall pasturing. Land so planted is not eligible as contracted acreage during the second year if used for hay or pasture.

d. To eradicate or control weeds by cultivation, chemical treatment or other effective methods.

e. To plant forest trees for windbreak, woodlot or pulpwood purposes.

f. Allow to lie idle. Weeds should be mowed before they seed.

Signers shall not use other farms which he may own or operate to offset his reduction in wheat acreage on the farm under contract.

If the signer fails to live up to the contract, the Secretary of Agriculture may terminate the contract, discontinue payments and take legal steps to recover payments already made.

FRAZIER BILL WAS SUPPORTED BY SHIPSTEAD SAYS FRAZIER

In a letter to Edward Keating of the "Labor" paper, Senator Frazier clears Senator Shipstead of Minnesota of the charge that he opposed the Frazier bill. In a letter received by Senator Frazier from the Labor paper it was stated that "opponents of Senator Shipstead are telling the farmers of Minnesota that Shipstead refused to support the Frazier bill and actually assisted in blocking it by introducing a substitute of his own." Senator Frazier replies that "Senator Shipstead's devotation to the interests of the farmers cannot be questioned." "It is true that Senator Shipstead introduced a bill dealing with the farm mortgage problem but I do not consider that it was in anyway intended to defeat the "Frazier Bill"

Senator Frazier goes on to say, "Senator Shipstead and I entered the Senate at the same time and in view of the fact that our constituents' problems are very much the same, we have had many occasions to work together. Senator Shipstead has always been in the front-line trenches in the fight for progressive principles and has always stood for worth while farm legislation."

FORD BUILDING BEING ERECTED AT WORLDS FAIR

General contract has been let to the W. E. O'Neal Construction company of Chicago for the construction of the Ford Exposition building at the Chicago World's fair. The building which is to be one of the largest at the 1934 Century of Progress will be situated on an 11-acre tract with a frontage of 100 feet on Lake Michigan. A five acre park on the lake shore is a part of the general project, tho this was not a part of the contract awarded the O'Neal company.

The building which will be 900 feet long and rise 110 feet at its highest point in a huge central rotunda, will require fourteen hundred tons of steel, 700,000 square feet of fire-resistant wall board, 1,600,000 feet of lumber, 5,000 yards of concrete and 160,000 square feet of tile flooring. The entire space reserved for industrial exhibits will be sky-lighted.

Large quantities of chromium metal work will be used in both the interior and exterior embellishments, in line with the conservatively modernistic motif of the architecture.

Construction which has already begun is to be completed by June 1st.

Flowers and Colors

A single flower never contains all three of the primary colors, it is said. Thus a blue and yellow flower shows no red, a red and yellow flower, no blue.

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S PET PROJECT DEFEATED

The proposed furniture factory which the President's wife wanted to see established at Reedsville, West Virginia, to make furniture and supplies for Uncle Sam's Post Offices and furnish decent housing with sufficient ground for a garden, for furniture factory workers, was bitterly opposed by the spokesman for the Keyless Lock Company, which Congressman Lundlow claimed would be forced out of business. It developed that this same Keyless Lock Company was, in the opinion of the American Federation of Labor and other Labor Leaders, not worth saving, its president having had a black record of opposition to all labor and child labor legislation. In the words of Congressman Connery, Chairman of the House Labor Committee, "It is Common knowledge among the representatives of the American Federation of Labor that the gentleman's record is not so hot." But Mrs. Roosevelt's project was defeated by a vote of 110 to 275, Congressmen Shoemaker and Lundeen being the only Minnesota members to vote for the bill.

Changes Made in Football Rules at Rules Conference

Severel changes designed to aid the offensive in football games were recommended today by the National Federation of State High School Athletic Association, in session at Cleveland, Ohio on March 10

Chief of the recommended changes in the 1934 high school gridiron code concerned the forward pass. The association voted to abolish the five yard penality accompanying the second incomplete forward pass in a series of four downs. They decided to allow any number of incomplete passes without penality.

The association also agreed that a rule charge should be instituted allowing passes to originate anywhere behind the line of scrimmage. Previously, the passes had to be at least five yards behind the line would not be ruled a touchback unless it occured on the fourth down, under another recommended change. However, if another second pass over the goal is incomplete the opposing team would receive the ball on its own 20-yard line.

Officials voted the 10 yard "in bounds" line on a football field should be moved in five yads further. They also decided to dispense with the 25 yard penality for clipping, etc.' limiting penalties to 15 yards.

CO'OP CHIEFS AT WASHINGTON TO HOLD MARKET HEARING

N. K. Carnes, general manager of the Central Cooperative association, South St. Paul, W. E. Rumble, attorney for that association and Barney Tersteeg, manager of the Olivia Shipping association of Olivia, Minnesota have been in Washington during the past ten days testifying in support of an amendment to the Packers and Stock Yards Act which has for its purpose the standardization of buying conditions at country concentration points and public markets.

The hearing opened on March 14, before a joint committee of the Senate and House Agricultural committees. The amendment which is supported by all livestock cooperatives thruout the Midwest carries the fight against direct buying of livestock to Congress. In brief it proposes to place Federal supervision and regulation at interior country concentration points. This supervision has existed at public markets since 1921. Since half of the nation's hogs are selling to packer buyers at country buying stations, it is deemed an important step in favor of producers to have the two systems of purchasing on an equal basis.

If the amendment is adopted it will win a battle that has been waged before Corn Belt Legislatures for several years.

BIDS ON $6,00,000 OF HIGHWAY IS BEING CALLED FOR APRIL 3

Bids for highway work totaling approximately $600,000 have been called for April 3, by the Minnesota highway department, according to an announcement by N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner.

Grading, graveling, three bridges, two railway underpasses and a crossing signal are included in the request for bids.

BERGER BILL RECALLS WAR HYSTERIA

The widow of war-time Representative from Wisconsin, Victor L. Berger, has finally received an apology in the form of $9,856.12 from the House of Representatives which some sixteen years ago refused to seat Wisconsin's able and distinguished Socialist and war objector. Members of the House stated that "people were acting irrational" at the time Congress refused to seat the duly elected Representative whom the people of Wisconsin sent to Congress time after time, only to have him turned out of the Halls of Congress. Berger was later vindicated and took his seat in Congress, but the salary due him was never paid until March 1, 1934.

Navy Always on Duty

The navy is always on duty, subject to call toward any part of the world. Its officers are in constant training, not only in the technique of naval operations, but in international law and the customs that govern the intercourse of governments. Its men learn much of foreign lands in their cruises and thereby become better Americans.

Read the following indorsement by the Farmer-Labor Leader:

The book shows the background of most of the controversies which arose over the income tax proposal, the unemployment insurance law. the chain store tax and other measures· It points out the weaknesses of certain groups in both House and Senate, and dissects the political intrigues with considerable skill. All in all, it is an excellent record to be used in the 1934 campaignand everyone interested in the political developmentsin the state should hav a copy for reference purposes.

Capitol News Review

by A. I. Harris

Those who were skeptical of the possible value of the drivers' license law are rapidly being convinced that the measure is equipped with an effertive set of teeth. During the first two weeks that the law was in effect several persons had their licences suspended or revoked for drunken or reckless driving. The courts and enforcement officers are cooperating to the fullest extent to make the new law a success. Every person who now drives without a license is subject to arrest.

The meeting of Mid-West governors at DesMoines definitely established, if such were necessary, that Governor Olson is the spokesman for the Northwest agriculture. He was so chosen to present the case of the farmer before the authorities at Washington. What Washington must realize is that the farmer's economic plight must be solved if we are to return to real prosperity. Prosperity to the nation is impossible with the largest group of its producers in dire economic want.

The action of Conservation Commissioner E. V. Willard in inviting the conservation officials of bordering states and the Province of Manitoba, Canada, for a series of conferences on conservation matters of mutual interest is expected to produce uniform methods in the treatment of common problems. Lack of uniformity both of methods and of laws, has made the problem of law enforcement in boundary waters most difficult.

That seven of the big railway companies doing business in Minnesota have evaded full payment of their gross earnings tax to the state was revealed in detail when court action was started by Harry H. Peterson, Attorney General. Taxes, statutory penalties and interest totalling more than $1,000,000 is sought in the action.

The operotion of the codes in the State of Minnesota has placed the purchasing department of the state in the category of the small consumer, Carl R. Erickson, Commissioner of Purchases, stated at a recent code hearing in Washington. Anticipated expenditures were determined by the comparitively low commodity price levels, by the usual discounts, and other privileges extended to quantity buyers. The Department now finds it difficult, to carry on necessary business with its limited resources.

The leisure time and recreation program, held up during the winter months, has just been inaugurated by the state emergency relief committee with about 700 leaders already appointed and 300 more to follow when personnel is completed. The program will be a statewide as the option of individual counties permits. There are several points of wisdom in starting the recreational activities just at this time. A majority of such activities are best adapted to the outdoors. Moreover, a leasure time program will do much in handling the problem of morale and spirit that in individual cases will arise from the cessation of CWA employment. The whole project enlists the aid and co-operation of local organizations in making the program constructive and socially valuable.

Minnesota farmers are getting a real break in the testing for tuberculous cattle being started this week in 13 counties at the instigation and under the supervision of the state livestock sanitary board. For financial or other reasons these 13 counties have not been able to take advantage of the state area law whereby county, state, and federal governments co-operate to extend the list of fully accredited tuberculosis-free dairy states of which there are only four, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, and Indiana. With the help of CWA, the state and federal governments are now going to test heads in Chippewa, Grant, Houston, Lac Qui Parle, Lyon, Pope Nobles, Pipestone, Rock, Sibley, Stevens, Swift and Yellow Medicine counties with a view not only to protect Minnesota children from infected dairy products but also to maintain the state's eastern dairy market. Social and economic welfare run closely together, and here is a project that serves both in the finest possible way.

To protect sub-contractors and material men, Carl R. Erickson, state commissioner of purchases, has ordered that general contractors doing state work must agree in writing to pay the claims accepted as correct at the time the last check for construction work is issued. In the past several years, sub-contractors and material firms have suffered losses due to unfair practices by some contractors.

MUST WE COMMIT SUICIDE TO SURVIVE?

An exchange carried and editorial last week in which it took to task tha long-haired young men and short-haired old women who are so concerned about the beanties of nature and the protection of human lifa that they are carrying on a militant campaign against billboards and roadside advertising of various kinds.

"These people" our exchanga says, "evidently care nothing about the fact that there are hundreds of paintars that earn a livslihood by painting these billboards and that thsre are carpenters who must build then and so on."

To which we would edd; to say nothing about the casketmakers, the grave diggers, undertakers, the doctors and the lawyers who derive a pert of their living because motorists have their attention distracted by these glaring silent salesmen of national advertisers. And let us not forget, the fact that wrecks will occur also helps to stimulate sn active demend for motor cars thus siding tha msn who are engaged n this industry. When wa think it ovsr, there is really no end to the ramifications of the billboard industry and its sffect upon other industries.

And yet, taking all these things into considerstion we still agree with the zealous zealots of zignless zcenery. We somehow can not believe that it is necessary to abuse nature nor to commit suicide in order to keep a part of our populetion at work. It seems to us that we should be able to provide for a livelihood for our citizens. If we didn't think so we would advocate a first class war. It would be so much more efficient at tearing up and destroying the landscape as well as a lot of human lives and thus provide more work for those thst are left.

MR. CUMMINGS SEEMS TO BE HUNTING A HOLE

And now it appears that Homer Cummings, United States Attorney General spoke too hastily when he volunteered to belp the anti-labor forces in the St. Paul elections by making a sweeping statement to the effect that the Twin Cities under Farmer-Labor ndministrations are "poison spots of crime."

The Twin City boys evidently took his insinuations seriously and started grand jury investigations. The Hennepin county Grand Jury has dispstched two letters to the doughty barrister requesting his cooperation in an investigation, but Mr. Cummings seems to have lost interest in the matter. He doesn't answer.

Tne Twin Cities have their ratio of crime and their ratio would prohably compare very favorably with any other city of the seme size. In this connection a letter in the Minneapolis Journal "What Other People Think" column of March 21, signed by "Ridic" of Plummer is interesting. We quote the following from the letter:

> "I know or a little village where, in the courss of as many months, there have been some fifteen petty robberies, that is, felonious entries into locked business enterprises. In no case has the burglar been apprehended; nor does it appear that very serious efforts have been made by the authorities to catch the msrauder.—— On the same population basis, to approximate the ratio, Minneapolis would have to have between eighty and a hundred robberies daily—"

While all this hullabaloo about the crime in our fair state is being peddled by those who would ruin what they can not rule, it is gratifying to note that the United States Census Bureau lists Minnesota as having one of the lowest crime ratios of any stnte in the Union.

LIEING WITH A HALF TRUTH

A story has been going the rounds in the stste press during the past few weeks which is plainly designed to mislead the taxpayers and the voters. Every 'Big Busisiness" dailies and a lot of their weekly parrots about the state have commented on the story and 'viewed with alarm'.

The story which seems to have origiuated in the Minnesota Taxpayers' association lauds tbe counties and the townships for having shown such a aplendid spirit of retrenchment in their spending and it cites how these subdivisions of government has cut down their budgets during the year. All of which is true, and the smaller subdivisions of government are probably entitled to a great deal of credit for insugurating a new deal for the taxpayers by cutting down on their expenditures.

Having thus given the lesser officials thruout the state a pat on the back, these insincere flatterers next hold up the state government under a Farmer-Labor administration as a 'horrible example' and deplores the 'Increased cost of state government,' citing ths increased mll rate in state taxation as proof of their contention that the administration is spending money hand over fist in a wild orgy or unprecedented extravagance.

An examination of the records however, discloses the propsganda as being not only a little bit tainted with politics. It is true that the atate's mill levy has increased almost 50 per cent. But it also true that the legislaure has spent less money under a Farmer-Labor administration than for many years previous under republican regimes. "Tight Teddy" Christianson vowed when he was campaigning for the office of Governor that he would keep appropriations down to $40,000,000 and to keep his promise he found it necessary to veto the supplementary school aid bill and other legislation that would have lightened the burden on the local taxpayers. In view of the story which is being circulated with such avidity by the "kept press" a little comparison of state spending is interesting. We find that in 1929 under a Republican regime the state tax levy was set to meet antborized state expenditures of $47,205,928 while in 1932 under a Farmer-Labor administration it was fixed to raise $39,431,321. A decrease of $7,774,607.

Some people will try anything once and at least one Republican wheelhorse decided to find out if Mr. Berve meant it when he said that Republicans would not be abla to buy a seat in the Farmer-Labor county convention.

P. S. He found out.
N. B. He couldn't.

Speaking about that "crop of political weeds" and "dumb as well as crooked politicians" in what catag[illegible] would you classify those republicans who try to influence Farmer-Labor officials in the filling of appointive positions with democrats?

DOWN! DOWN! 2,800!

Question: When I had six trumps, headed by Q J, and my partner bid one apade, why wasn't I justified in making a "jump" raise to three spedes? No justice at all!

Answer: The above represents the disasterous results in a game played in our feir city last week. Failure in the understanding of how to count playing tricks was the downfall. Let us analyze the situation.

Declerer opened with one spade, a minimum strength, on the following hand: Spades—A K 10 9 7 5; Hearts—K 4; Dimonds—10 8 2; Clubs 8 5. Partner held: Spades Q J 8 8 4 2; Hearts—5 4; Diamonds—9 7 5; Clubs Q 7. Opponents took seven tricks before bidders got started, as A Q of Hearts lay to the left of Declarer, a finesses being made.

After ths jump raise by partner, Declarer could see 5½ tricks in his hand, so raised to four, as ha could see an easy game in hand.

Where was the joker in responding hend's bid? She didn't count her playing tricks. She had 4 only, which warranted a minimum raise to two spades. Had she held a minimum of 1½ honor tricks, she would heve been justified in making the jump raise. A set of four tricks, vulnerable, doubled and redoubled—2,800. Ons cannot play sound bridga without the ability to count accurately the playing tricks.

HOUSE APPROVES ARMY'S FLYING AIR MAIL

After a bitter political debate on the President's cancellation of air mail contracts and designation of the Army Pilots to fly the air mail planes, the House by a vote of 249 to 81 complied with the President's request to give him authority to do what he had already done. In other words, the House agreed to shoulder the responsibility. The climax in the partisan fight was reached when Congressman Britten (Rep., Illinois) offered a motion to adjourn out of respect for the six army pilots who were killed in the air mail service of their country.

The Liberal Digest

HISTORY OF FARMER-LABOR REVEALS INTERESTING FACTS

Henry G. Telgen

With the approach of the Farmer-Labor state convention to he held at St. Peul on March 27th next, it is of interest to note briefly the progress that the party has made since its organization in August 1918.

There are few political organizations or perties, if any, that have grown es rapidly and so consistently as the Farmer-Labor party of Minnesota has done. True, there have been periods of declins but these have been followed by an increase in voting strength as figues given below will clearly indicate.

The Party's Rapid Growth

Let ua take a look at the party's growth. That is to say, let ns compare the vote cast for Governor during the years since the first candidate David H. Evans in 1918, entered the race as the Farmer-Labor designated candidate of the Non-Partisn League end organized Labor.

The following table shows what the vote for Governor of the three principal parties of Minnesota has been since 1918:

Repnblican	Democrat	F-L	Pct.
1918..166,511	76,838	111,968	31.5
1920..415,805	81,293	281,402	36.1
1922..309,758	79,903	295,479	43.1
1924..405,692	43,353	366,035	44.5
1926..395,779	38,008	268,845	38.
1928..549,857	213,734	227,193	23.
1930..289,528	29,109	473,154	60.
1932..334,081	159,859	522,438	50.9

1928-Year of Weakness

The falling off in party strength in 1926 and 1928 was in the main due to the lack of organization. It can also, in part at least, be attributed to the fact that several important officials elected by the party declined to give aid to their colleaguea on the ticket. This was especially true in 1928.

In 1930, however, the tide turned. The party that our Republican friends had supposed to be well on tha way to dissolution staged a marvelous comeback, electing Floyd B. Olson and Henry Arens Lieutenant Governor. Other candidates of the party made an excellent showing through they fell somewhat behind Olson and Arens.

"Leader" Established In 1930

The weakness in the party in 1930 was still lack of organization. The "Farmer-Labor Leader" had been established in January, 1930, and hundreds of devoted workers had affiliated with the Farmer-Labor Association, but neither the circulation of the "Leader" nor the strength of the Association were sufficient to bring general victory to the party's nominees.

TheFarmer-Labor Association Grows

During 1931 and 1932, however, tha movement grew rapidly. Association locals wera formed in many countles of the state and circulation of the "Leader' grew rapidly. This growth in organization and in tha party's official newspaper was clearly indicated in the greater consistency shown in the vote in tha 1932 election as compared to that of 1930.

That growth can best be illustrated by comparing the vote of party nominees for other state affices with that of the nominees for governor during these two elections. Let ns take for purpose of this comparison, the offices of State Treasurer and Attorney General.

The vote for the three candidates follows:

Governor	473,154	522,438	14
Treasurer	271,286	860,498	32.5
Attorney.	258,581	879,418	47

Must Win in Legislature

As yet the party has not been able to gain control of the State Legislature. Due to the "non-partisan" method of electing legislators, it has not been possible to aecure the election of a majority of Farmer-Laborites In either house. The Sennte was thoroughly reacticnary at both the 1931 and 1933 sessions and prevented the enactment of many measures that the Farmer-Labor Governor desired.

The 1934 Convention'a Task

The important work before the approaching Farmer-Labor convention is to provide a platform that will meet the demands of the times. There must, of course, be no hackward step taken. The exingencies of the time require a further movement toward the left rather than any retrogression on the part of the party organization.

A strong slate of candidates should be named, men worthy to fill the offices tbey are drafted to seek. Tha people today have confidence in the Farmsr-Labor party and will place their approval upon the party's candidates if a united front is presented in the approaching campaign.

THE INN KEEPER SPEAKS

Why yes, I still recall the day.
The sun had reached the west;
My laughing children from their play
Had just come in to rest,
When suddenly a stranger came
And brought a wounded man—
It matters not the home or name
Of this Samaritan.
But I will not forget the hand
That bathed the beaten face;
The things a man will understand
Are charity and grace.
The tilling years have thinned the soil,
My Inn grows dark and rough;
Two coins he left for wine and oil—
And that is wealth enough!

VERY STRANGE BEDFELLOWS

(Labor)

Elibu Root and Alfred E. Smith both condemned the Child Labor Amendment last week. "Powers Eternal," as Byron might say, "such names mingled!"

No one who knows his history is in the least surprised at Root. He has been the attorney of privilege from the first—and his earlist important client was no other than "Boss" Tweed. He was touted many years as Americas greatest lawyer; but if he ever took a case for the people, ths matter has escaped attention. His "greatness" apparently, lay in his remarkable skill at showing Big Business how to evade the law—and get away with it.

Mr. Root is 89 years old; and the opinions expressed in his latest denuncietion of the Child Labor Amendment are oldsr still.

But what explenation can anyone meka of "Al" Smith?

Here is a man who came up from the sidswalks of New York, East Side New York, at that; and his admirers bosated he did not forget his neighbors when hs climbed. He was a champion of reform legislation. Only a few years ago many shrewd observers belived him the most effective liberal in the country. Yet now, he is trying to block a great reform, mora than half accomplished.

WAR WARNING VOICED BY PEOPLE'S LOBBY

(St. Louis County Independent)

Passage of the billion dollar Vinson hill by Congress means war, asserts Sec. Benjamin C. Marsh of the People's Lobby, which is headed by Dr. John Dewey. "The American predatory financial oligarchy, which has looted and is looting the American people, has equally looted the workers in other nations, through grabbing thier natural resourses, controlling their industries and forcing impossible loans upon their governments," says the People's Lobby.

"The Vinson bill and the increased army appropriations are logical corollary to our domestic policy of destroying crops, limiting production of goods and increasing profits, while many millious lack the essntials of a decent life. The near future must bring a new economic policy in America, or see America, conquered hy its enemies within its borders, fighting the battles of these American millionaires against their foreign competitors."

WHO SHOULD PAY FOR THE HIGHWAYS?

St. Cloud Daily Times

Any argument for the reduction of any tax listens pretty good to the fellow who pays it. He isn't concerned whether tha argument is good or bad, if it helps his pocketbook.

This probabily explains why there is so much loose thinking on the subject of the gasoline tax. And this loose thinking isn't wholly unintentional.

"Gasoline," begins an article in the Chicago Journal of Commerce, "is declared to be the most taxed commodity in the United States, with the single exception of tobacco."

The comparison is woefully illogical. Uncle Sam doesn't use the tobacco tax for the benefit of tobacco smokers. But he does spend each year on highways, for the exclusive benefit of motor vehicle owners, a great deal more than he takes from them in taxes.

The man who buys tobacco muat help build highways, besides contributing millions of dollars to tha general cost of government. The man who buys gasoline gets his whols tax back, and more besides, in better roads, which in turn reduces tha wear and tear on his vehicle; saves him more than the tax he pays in increased mileage; asves him time and affords him greater comfort and safety.

The state gasoline tax and license fees generally are poured back into better highways. Even that comes far from meeting the total highway bill of most states. Property owners in most states are taxed and assessed from one-half to two-thirds the annual cost of roads, streets and bridges.

Grave concern is expressed for the "overburdened trucker." But what about the overburdened property owner? Or the fellows who smoke but can't afford tha luxury of even a second-hand car?

"As the govrnment." the Journal of Commerce articla continues, "now has other sources of raising the necessary funds for operation, including the tax on beer, wines, spirits ,etc., it would be in the interests of national recovery, declare automotive officials, to drop this unfair tax on motor vehicles."

In a nutshell, the motor vehicle manufacturer can sell more automobiles, trucks and buses if the cost of running them is reduced and more highways are built. So, instead of having those who use the highways pay for them as they nse them, through gasoline taxes and auto license fees, they want the public to pay for them through property taxes, and taxes on tobacco, beer, cosmetics, movie tickets etc.

And they don't want gasoline to share with tobacco, beer and cosmetics, the cost of schools, unemployment relief, or other governmental functions.

Lindbergh was recently invited to a dinner at one of the large hotels of New York City. The price of the meal was five dollars. Lindbergh refused to eat. He was asked why he declined. He gave this answer: "I was recently in China. Wa landed with our aeroplane at Shanghai. I was told of the famine. Thousands died daily for lack of food, epidemics of disease were carrying off large numbers. Of a large group of physicians who volunteered to go into the stricken region, only eight returned alive. It was necessary to bring medicine to the sick as quickly as possible. I volunteered to take it there in my plane. When I landed the doctors and nursea came to receive the medicine. But the starving peopla rushed to the plane to see if we had anything to eat. They crowded upon my machina and tried to see if they could eat the wings. I managed to get loose, and get away to get more medicine. But I want to say this. I came out of China a changed man. Science is good. It has given me a flying apparatus that has enabled me to fly around the world and defy storms and rough weather. But wa must find somtehing greater than science. We must have a change of heart. Never will I eat five dollar dinnera as long as the wings of my aeroplane [illegible] the teeth marks of hungry people, [illegible] ought [illegible] and the hunger has not been satisfied.—[illegible]sk Ungdom.

Most of the highway bridges have been built. What is now needed is the water to go under them.—Minneapolis Journal.

An exchange carried and editorial last week in which it took to task the long-haired young men and short-haired old women who are so concerned about the beauties of nature and the protection of human life that they are carrying on a militant campaign against billboards and roadside advertising of various kinds.

"These people" our exchange says, "evidently care nothing about the fact that there are hundreds of painters that earn a livelihood by painting these billboards and that there are carpenters who must build then and so on."

To which we would add; to say nothing about the casketmakers, the grave diggers, undertakers, the doctors and the lawyers who derive a part of their living because motorists have their attention distracted by these glaring silent salesmen of national advertisers. And let us not forget, the fact that wrecks will occur also helps to stimulate an active demand for motor cars thus aiding the men who are engaged n this industry. When we think it over, there is really no end to the ramifications of the billboard industry and its effect upon other industries.

And yet, taking all these things into consideration we still agree with the zealous zealots of zignless zcenery. We somehow can not believe that it is necessary to abuse nature nor to commit suicide in order to keep a part of our population at work. It seems to us that we should be able to provide for a livelihood for our citizens. If we didn't think so we would advocate a first class war. It would be so much more efficient at tearing up and destroying the landscape as well as a lot of human lives and thus provide more work for those that are left.

MR. CUMMINGS SEEMS TO BE HUNTING A HOLE

And now it appears that Homer Cummings, United States Attorney General spoke too hastily when he volunteered to help the anti-labor forces in the St. Paul elections by making a sweeping statement to the effect that the Twin Cities under Farmer-Labor administrations are "poison spots of crime."

The Twin City boys evidently took his insinuations seriously and started grand jury investigations. The Hennepin county Grand Jury has dispatched two letters to the doughty barrister requesting his cooperation in an investigation, but Mr. Cummings seems to have lost interest in the matter. He doesn't answer.

The Twin Cities have their ratio of crime and their ratio would probably compare very favorably with any other city of the same size. In this connection a letter in the Minneapolis Journal "What Other People Think" column of March 21, signed by "Ridic" of Plummer is interesting. We quote the following from the letter:

> "I know or a little village where, in the course of as many months, there have been some fifteen petty robberies, that is, felonious entries into locked business enterprises. In no case has the burglar been apprehended; nor does it appear that very serious efforts have been made by the authorities to catch the marauder.—— On the same population basis, to approximate the ratio, Minneapolis would have to have between eighty and a hundred robberies daily—"

While all this hullebaloo about the crime in our fair state is being peddled by those who would ruin what they can not rule, it is gratifying to note that the United States Census Bureau lists Minnesota as having one of the lowest crime ratios of any state in the Union.

LIEING WITH A HALF TRUTH

A story has been going the rounds in the state press during the past few weeks which is plainly designed to mislead the taxpayers and the voters. Every 'Big Business" dailies and a lot of their weekly parrots about the state have commented on the story and 'viewed with alarm'.

The story which seems to have originated in the Minnesota Taxpayers' association lauds the counties and the townships for having shown such a splendid spirit of retrenchment in their spending and it cites how these subdivisions of government has cut down their budgets during the year. All of which is true, and the smaller subdivisions of government are probably entitled to a great deal of credit for inaugurating a new deal for the taxpayers by cutting down on their expenditures.

Having thus given the lesser officials thruout the state a pat on the back, these insincere flatterers next hold up the state government under a Farmer-Labor administration as a 'horrible example' and deplores the 'Increased cost of state government,' citing the increased mill rate in state taxation as proof of their contention that the administration is spending money hand over fist in a wild orgy or unprecedented extravagance.

An examination of the records however, discloses the propaganda as being not only a little bit tainted with politics. It is true that the state's mill levy has increased almost 50 per cent. But it also true that the legislaure has spent less money under a Farmer-Labor administration than for many years previous under republican regimes. "Tight Teddy" Christianson vowed when he was campaigning for the office of Governor that he would keep appropriations down to $40,000,000 and to keep his promise he found it necessary to veto the supplementary school aid bill and other legislation that would have lightened the burden on the local taxpayers. In view of the story which is being circulated with such avidity by the "kept press" a little comparison of state spending is interesting. We find that in 1929 under a Republican regime the state tax levy was set to meet authorized state expenditures of $47,205,928 while in 1932 under a Farmer-Labor administration it was fixed to raise $39,431,321. A decrease of $7,774,607.

Some people will try anything once and at least one Republican wheelhorse decided to find out if Mr. Berve meant it when he said that Republicans would not be able to buy a seat in the Farmer-Labor county convention.

P. S. He found out.
N. B. He couldn't.

Speaking about that "crop of political weeds" and "dumb as well as crooked politicians" in what catag[illegible] would you classify those republicans who try to influence Farmer-Labor officials in the filling of appointive positions with democrats?

"Sprig mud be 'ere," the kids are playing marbles.

DOWN! DOWN! 2,800!

Question: When I had six trumps, headed by Q J, and my partner bid one spade, why wasn't I justified in making a "jump" raise to three spades? No justice at all!

Answer: The above represents the disasterous results in a game played in our fair city last week. Failure in the understanding of how to count playing tricks was the downfall. Let us analyze the situation.

Declarer opened with one spade, a minimum strength, on the following hand: Spades—A K 10 9 7 6; Hearts—K 4; Dimonds—10 8 2; Clubs 6 6. Partner held: Spades Q J 8 6 4 2; Hearts—6 4; Diamonds—9 7 6; Clubs Q 7. Opponents took seven tricks before bidders got started, as A Q of Hearts lay to the left of Declarer, a finesses being made.

After the jump raise by partner, Declarer could see 5½ tricks in his hand, so raised to four, as he could see an easy game in hand.

Where was the joker in responding hand's bid? She didn't count her playing tricks. She had 4 only, which warranted a minimum raise to two spades. Had she held a minimum of 1½ honor tricks, she would have been justified in making the jump raise. A set of four tricks, vulnerable, doubled and redoubled—2,800. One cannot play sound bridge without the ability to count accurately the playing tricks.

ENLISTING BRITISH YOUTH FOR DRY CAUSE

"Crusaders of Youth if the International Order of Good Templars" is the rather lengthy name of the organization of young total abstainers of Britian which recently gathered in Chelsea for its first national meeting.

The need for serious work in the carrying out of educational programs was stressed by Mr. W. Eastwood, superintendent of that department, and by Dr. T. J. Honeyman, internationel superintendent. Dr. Alfred Salter, Member of Parliment, addressed the young people on the question of the moderate drinker, emphasizing the fact that the only safe course is to leave strong drink entirely alone, as there is no safety in "moderata" drinking.

HOUSE APPROVES ARMY'S FLYING AIR MAIL

After a bitter political debate on the President's cancellation of air mail contracts and designation of the Army Pilots to fly the air mail planes, the House by a vote of 249 to 81 complied with the President's request to give him authority to do what he had already done. In other words, the House agreed to shoulder the responsibility. The climax in the partisan fight was reached when Congressman Britten (Rep., Illinois) offered a motion to adjourn out of respect for the six army pilots who were killed in the air mail service of their country.

"VETERANS' DAY" IN SENATE

February 27, 1934, brought renewed hope to World War and Spanish War Veterans when the Senate in quick succession tacked amendments to the Independent Offices Appropriation Bill limiting Spanish War Veterans' cuts to 10 per cent, restoring service connection to "presumptive" World ceses, and restoring pre-economy act retirement pay to emergency of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. The amended bill is now in the hands of the House Appropriation Committee. The House will fight it out next week, after which, on Monday, March 12, Congressman Ernest Lundeen's bonus petition is scheduled to come before the House for a vote.

UNEMPLOYMENT

NEED SEEN FOR PROTECTION OF LABOR UNDER NRA

Senator Wagner on March 1 introduced a new bill to create by legislative act a Labor Board on which Labor is to be represented. The bill includes provisions intended to stiffle the many company-dominated and company-controlled so-called labor unions which Senator Wagner freely admits have grown up under the National Industrial Recovery Act.

INFORMATION BUREAU AT BEMIDJI REBUILDS OFFICE AND FIREPLACE OF STATES

The Tourist Information Bureau at Bemidji in rebuilding their office is contemplating the construction of a fireplace to be known as the Fireplace of the states. One panel of the fireplace is to be known as the Minnesota panel. Here will be placed a stone from each county in the state of Minnesota.

STONES TO RECEIVE ATTENTION IN PENNINGTON COUNTY

The National Reemployment Service has been requested to send a stone that is characteristic or found in the greatest abundance in Pennington county. Along with the stone will go a history of it, who sent it, where it was found, amount of stone of this kind. This stone is to be used in constructing a fireplace in the Tourist Information Bureau at Bemidji.

Suggestions are in order from residents of the county as to what they consider to be the stone most characteristic of Pennington County.

The Liberal Digest

HISTORY OF FARMER-LABOR REVEALS INTERESTING FACTS

Henry G. Teigan

With the approach of the Farmer-Labor state convention to be held at St. Paul on March 27th next, it is of interest to note briefly the progress that the party has made since its organization in August 1918.

There are few political organizations or parties, if any, that have grown as rapidly and so consistently as the Farmer-Labor party of Minnesota has done. True, there have been periods of decline but these have been followed by an increase in voting strength as figues given below will clearly indicate.

The Party's Rapid Growth

Let us take a look at the party's growth. That is to say, let us compare the vote cast for Governor during the years since the first candidate David H. Evans in 1918, entered the race as the Farmer-Labor designated candidate of the Non-Partisan League and organized Labor.

The following table shows what the vote for Governor of the three principal parties of Minnesota has been since 1918:

	Republican	Democrat	F-L	Pct.
1918	166,611	76,838	111,966	31.5
1920	415,805	81,293	281,402	36.1
1922	309,756	79,903	295,479	43.1
1924	406,692	43,353	366,035	44.5
1926	395,779	38,008	266,845	38.
1928	649,857	213,734	227,193	23.
1930	289,528	29,109	473,154	60.
1932	334,081	169,869	622,438	50.9

1928-Year of Weakness

The falling off in party strength in 1926 and 1928 was in the main due to the lack of organization. It can also, in part at least, be attributed to the fact that several important officials elected by the party declined to give aid to their colleagues on the ticket. This was especially true in 1928.

In 1930, however, the tide turned. The party that our Republican friends had supposed to be well on the way to dissolution staged a marvelous comeback, electing Floyd B. Olson and Henry Arens Lieutenant Governor. Other candidates of the party made an excellent showing through they fell somewhat behind Olson and Arens.

"Leader" Established in 1930

The weakness in the party in 1930 was still lack of organization. The "Farmer-Labor Leader" had been established in January, 1930, and hundreds of devoted workers had affiliated with the Farmer-Labor Association, but neither the circulation of the "Leader" nor the strength of the Association were sufficient to bring general victory to the party's nominees.

TheFarmer-Labor Association Grows

During 1931 and 1932, however, the movement grew rapidly. Association locals were formed in many counties of the state and circulation of the "Leader' grew rapidly. This growth in organization and in the party's official newspaper was clearly indicated in the greater consistency shown in the vote in the 1932 election as compared to that of 1930.

That growth can best be illustrated by comparing the vote of party nominees for other state affices with that of the nominees for governor during these two elections. Let us take for purpose of this comparison, the offices of State Treasurer and Attorney General.

The vote for the three candidates follows:

Governor	473,154	622,438	14
Treasurer	271,286	360,498	32.5
Attorney.	256,681	379,418	47

Must Win in Legislature

As yet the party has not been able to gain control of the State Legislature. Due to the "non-partisan" method of electing legislators, it has not been possible to secure the election of a majority of Farmer-Laborites in either house. The Senate was thoroughly reactionary at both the 1931 and 1933 sessions and prevented the enactment of many measures that the Farmer-Labor Governor desired.

The 1934 Convention's Task

The important work before the approaching Farmer-Labor convention is to provide a platform that will meet the demands of the times. There must, of course, be no backward step taken. The exingenies of the time require a further movement toward the left rather than any retrogrossion on the part of the party organization.

A strong slate of candidates should be named, men worthy to fill the offices they are drafted to seek. The people today have confidence in the Farmer-Labor party and will place their approval upon the party's candidates if a united front is presented in the approaching campaign.

THE INN KEEPER SPEAKS

Why yes, I still recall the day.
  The sun had reached the west;
My laughing children from their play
  Had just come in to rest,
When suddenly a stranger came
  And brought a wounded man—
It matters not the home or name
  Of this Samaritan.
But I will not forget the hand
  That bathed the beaten face;
The things a man will understand
  Are charity and grace.
The tilling years have thinned the soil,
  My Inn grows dark and rough;
Two coins he left for wine and oil—
  And that is wealth enough!

From Our Exchanges

VERY STRANGE BEDFELLOWS

(Labor)

Elihu Root and Alfred E. Smith both condemned the Child Labor Amendment last week. "Powers Eternal," as Byron might say, "such names mingled!"

No one who knows his history is in the least surprised at Root. He has been the attorney of privilege from the first—and his earlist important client was no other than "Boss" Tweed. He was touted many years as Americas greatest lawyer; but if he ever took a case for the people, the matter has escaped attention. His "greatness" apparently, lay in his remarkable skill at showing Big Business how to evade the law—and get away with it.

Mr. Root is 89 years old; and the opinions expressed in his latest denunciation of the Child Labor Amendment are older still.

But what explanation can anyone make of "Al" Smith?

Here is a man who came up from the sidewalks of New York, East Side New York, at that; and his admirers boasted he did not forget his neighbors when he climbed. He was a champion of reform legislation. Only a few years ago many shrewd observers belived him the most effective liberal in the country. Yet now, he is trying to block a great reform, more than half accomplished.

WAR WARNING VOICED BY PEOPLE'S LOBBY

(St. Louis County Independent)

Passage of the billion dollar Vinson bill by Congress means war, asserts Sec. Benjamin C. Marsh of the People's Lobby, which is headed by Dr. John Dewey. "The American predatory financial oligarchy, which has looted and is looting the American people, has equally looted the workers in other nations, through grabbing thier natural resourses, controlling their industries and forcing impossible loans upon their governments," says the People's Lobby.

"The Vinson bill and the increased army appropriations are logical corollary to our domestic policy of destroying crops, limiting production of goods and increasing profits, while many millions lack the essentials of a decent life. The near future must bring a new economic policy in America, or see America, conquered by its enemies within its borders, fighting the battles of these American millionaires against their foreign competitors."

WHO SHOULD PAY FOR THE HIGHWAYS?

St. Cloud Daily Times

Any argument for the reduction of any tax listens pretty good to the fellow who pays it. He isn't concerned whether the argument is good or bad, if it helps his pocketbook.

This probably explains why there is so much loose thinking on the subject of the gasoline tax. And this loose thinking isn't wholly unintentional.

"Gasoline," begins an article in the Chicago Journal of Commerce, "is declared to be the most taxed commodity in the United States, with the single exception of tobacco."

The comparison is woefully illogical. Uncle Sam doesn't use the tobacco tax for the benefit of tobacco smokers. But he does spend each year on highways, for the exclusive benefit of motor vehicle owners, a great deal more than he takes from them in taxes.

The man who buys tobacco must help build highways, besides contributing millions of dollars to the general cost of government. The man who buys gasoline gets his whole tax back, and more besides, in better roads, which in turn reduces the wear and tear on his vehicle; saves him more than the tax he pays in increased mileage; saves him time and affords him greater comfort and safety.

The state gasoline tax and license fees generally are poured back into better highways. Even that comes far from meeting the total highway bill of most states. Property owners in most states are taxed and assessed from one-half to two-thirds the annual cost of roads, streets and bridges.

Grave concern is expressed for the "overburdened trucker." But what about the overburdened property owner? Or the fellows who smoke but can't afford the luxury of even a second-hand car?

"As the govrnment." the Journal of Commerce article continues, "now has other sources of raising the necessary funds for operation, including the tax on beer, wines, spirits ,etc., it would be in the interests of national recovery, declare automotive officials, to drop this unfair tax on motor vehicles."

In a nutshell, the motor vehicle manufacturer can sell more automobiles, trucks and buses if the cost of running them is reduced and more highways are built. So, instead of having those who use the highways pay for them as they use them, through gasoline taxes and auto license fees, they want the public to pay for them through property taxes, and taxes on tobacco, beer, cosmetics, movie tickets etc.

And they don't want gasoline to share with tobacco, beer and cosmetics, the cost of schools, unemployment relief, or other governmental functions.

Lindbergh was recently invited to a dinner at one of the large hotels of New York City. The price of the meal was five dollars. Lindbergh refused to eat. He was asked why he declined. He gave this answer: "I was recently in China. We landed with our aeroplane at Shanghai. I was told of the famine. Thousands died daily for lack of food, epidemics of disease were carrying off large numbers. Of a large group of physicians who volunteered to go into the stricken region, only eight returned alive. It was necessary to bring medicine to the sick as quickly as possible. I volunteered to take it there in my plane. When I landed the doctors and nurses came to receive the medicine. But the starving people rushed to the plane to see if we had anything to eat. They crowded upon my machine and tried to see if they could eat the wings. I managed to get loose, and get away to get more medicine. But I want to say this. I came out of China a changed man. Science is good. It has given me a flying apparatus that has enabled me to fly around the world and defy storms and rough weather. But we must find something greater than science. We must have a change of heart. Never will I eat five-dollar dinners as long as the wings of my aeroplane bear the teeth marks of hungry people, [illegible] brought [illegible] and the hunger has not been satisfied.—[illegible]sk Ungdom.

Most of the highway bridges have been built. What is now needed is the water to go under them.—Minneapolis Journal.

COUNTY BOARD PROCEEDINGS

March 13th, 1934

Pursuant to adjournment the Board of County Commissioners met at the office of County Auditor at 10.00 o'clock A. M. Tuesday, February 13th, 1934.

Members present: Lee, Kingborn, Roy Ness and Mandt.

Members absent: None.

The minutes of the Meeting of Feby. 13th, were approved as read.

A delegation from Norden Township appeared before the board regarding grading of C. A. No. 20 on line between Norden and North Townships. Matter laid over for consideration with Road Program.

The matter of providing quarters for the relief and employment offices for this County was taken up. As no space was available in court house it was found necessary to provide for quarters outside the County Court House. Commissioner Ness moved that the county rent the old Bredeson Store building from the Dehlen Agency at $30.00 per month and Auditor be authorized to draw his warrent in payment of rent monthly. Motion seconded by Commissioner Lee and carried.

Commissioner Ness offered a Resolution requesting the Federal Government to establish Thief River Falls as an Air Port of Entry, which was seconded by Commissioner Roy and unanimously carried.

Commissioner Mandt moved that the Emergency Relief Worker be allowed to draw clerk hire warrants for his extra help in the office in an amount not to exceed the $100.00 to be paid by the County under agreement for Poor Relief with the State, and the Auditor be authorized and instructed to issue his warrant covering such claims. Motion seconded by Commissioner Ness and carried.

A delegation from North township presented a petition for County Aid Road.

Commissioner Ness offered the following resolution and moved its adoption:

"BE IT RESOLVED that the following described road is hereby designated as County Aid Roard No. 30:

Beginning at the SW corner of section 14 in township 154, Range 43 (North); thence running north on section line along said Section 14 and section 11, a distance of 1.5 miles and terminating at the Marshall County Line."

Motion for adoption of the foregoing resolution was seconded by Commissioner Lee and carried.

Commissioner Roy offered the following resolution and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, state Aid Road No. 1 from a point 1.5 miles east of the village of St. Hilaire to a point 3.5 miles west of St. Hilaire is in poor condition and badly in need of grading, AND WHEREAS it has been practically impossible for the County Snow Removal Equipment to keep this road open during the past winter, and it has been blocked with snow a large part of the time, owing to the road being too low to enable the snow plow to get rid of the snow from the road, and

WHEREAS this is one of the most important STATE AID ROADS in the County running the entire length of the county and the principal road for carrying traffic to the Village of St. Hilaire, and

WHEREAS the county Road and Bridge Fund of Pennington County is depleted and no funds available for this very necessary work,

BE IT RESOLVED that the Pennington County Board respectfully petitions the State Board of Allotment for a Special Allotment from the State Road and Bridge Fund of $5,000.00 to be used in grading this portion of State Aid Road No. 1 in Pennington County to put it in the proper shape for all year travel, and that we earnestly request the Commissioner of Highways to approve and recommend this Special Allotment to the State Board of Allotment for their approval.

Motion for adoption of the foregoing resolution was seconded by Commissioner Mandt and carried.

Commissioner Roy moved that the Board inspect gravel work being done on County Aid Roads under CWA Program on Wednesday March 14th. Motion seconded by Commissioner Roy and Carried.

Commissioner Roy moved that the County Board meet as committee on roads the latter part of March to look over proposed repairs when the snow and ice goes out of the ditches. Motion seconded by Commissioner Lee and carried.

Commissioner Lee moved that application of O. S. Kirkile for treatment at the University Hospital be approved with transportation for round trip to Minneapolis, and Auditor be authorized and instructed to issue warrant covering transportation for round trip. Motion seconded by Commissioner Mandt and carried.

The following applications for abatement and settlement of taxes were approved:

THIEF RIVER FALLS FORUM

VOLUME 2 . NUMBER 52 OFFICIAL PAPER OF PENNINGTON COUNTY, THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINNESOTA. THURSDAY, MARCH 29, 1934

Senator Naplin Endorsed for State Supreme Court Clerk

Shipstead Is Recommended for Re-election to U.S. Senate

FLOYD B. OLSON ENDORSED FOR RE-ELECTION AS GOV.

Hjalmer Peterson of Askov Is Endorsed for Lieutanent Governor

State Senator Larura E. Naplin received the nominating committee's recommendation for the Farmer-Labor endorsement for the office of clerk of the state supreme court She was given this endorsement only after a bitter struggle during which Senator Teigen's name was given much thought by the committee. Senator Naplin is a resident of this city and has been one of the best party members in the legislature ever since she succeeded her husband, the late Senator Oscar Naplin. It was only natural that she would be sought out for some other office because of her fine record according to leaders in this district.

Other recommendations made by the nominating committee are: Senator George H. Lommen of Eveleth for Lieutenent Governor, John T. Lyous of Le Center as the Farmer-Labor candidate for state auditor, Gevernor Floyd B. Olson, for re-election, Attorney General Harry H. Peterson for another term, A. H. Kleffman of Hibbing for state treasurer, lieutenent governor K. K. Solberg for secretary of state, United States Senator Hendrick Shipstead for reelection.

The resolutions committee gave the following resolutions to the convention which were adopted: Government ownership of air mail. Direct election of federal judges, Repeal of the economy act, payment of the soldier's bonus, giving the women a share in major appointments and a place on the state ticket. The convention also adopted a resolution which censors the state departments which do not permit their employees to take part in political activities.

The platform committee agreed on the following planks which were presented to the convention for their approval: Favoring co-operative marketing association fostered by the state and coordinated thru a state exchange; for Public ownership of markets; for the Frazier bill and the Swank Thomas price fixing bill; for the 30-hour week and unemployment insurance; for state health and accident insurance; for maintainance of educational standards, and no teachers' pay cuts; for abolition of compulsory military drill; for higher income taxes in the higher brackets, and higher inheritance taxes; for a capital levy on large fortunes.

Congressmen Shoemaker launched another bitter attact on Senator Shipstead in asking the convention for their endorsement for United States Senator; the speach was fairly well taken by the convention but Shipstead's endorsement was virtually cinched though.

Governor Olson, in his convention address, told that he was not a liberal but that he was a Radical. He asked that elgislative candidates be allowed to run on party tickets instead of running without party designation because he said, "everyone knows that party lineups exist, except perhaps some members of our legislature". He further stated "we are going to enact laws to carry out our principles, but we must put capable people in charge to carry them out. We must have a high order of public service—higher than any other organizations have had in the past." When choosing men, he said, we must choose men who have the "ability to serve".

If the government owns factories which make instruments of war, and shipyards as it should, then why not all those industries which deal in the processing of resources into the necessitie of life, coal, iron, and so on," Governor Olson asks.

Governor Olson in his address predicted a clean sweep of the entire state for the Farmer-Labor party for the various offices.

The veterans branch of the Farmer-Labor party met Tuesday night and endorsed Dewey W. Johnson for the office of warehouse commissioner and J. T. Lyous for state auditor.

Red Lake Falls Invincible In Invitational Debate at High School Last Saturday

Winning every verbal scrimmage they engaged in, the Red Lake Falls debate team composed of Lillian Kirby and Edman Johnson, last Saturday night won the invitational debate tournament held in the Lincoin high school auditorium.

Fourteen teams from Karlstad, Warren, Crookston, Red Lake Falls, Lancaster and Thief River Falls took part in the tournament which was followed with great interest by both the visitors and those taking part. This type of debate, eliminative in form, is modeled after college debating circles, and is being introduced into high schools to give the strudenta an added amount of practice in competition.

The Thief River Falls team, composed of Stella Myrom and David Beltcher was eliminate in the semifinals by Karlstad and in turn lost to Red Lake Falls in the final debate. The tournament was held under the direction of Arnold E. Carlson, local debate coach.

Lutheran Churches Hold Joint Services in Aud. On Good Friday, Mar. 30

"The Crucified Christ" will be the theme of the joint Lutheran Good Friday services to be held in the Municipal Auditorium on March 30, at 1 o'clock, according to an announcement by Rev. R. Fjelstad, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran Church.

On the program will be the sermonettes, "Christ, Our Justification," by Rev. E. L. Sjogren of the Angustana Lutheran church; "Christ, Our Sanctification," by Rev. E. L. Tungseth of the Zion Lutheran church; and "Christ, Our Redemption," by Rev. Fjelstad.

Each sermonette will be followed by a song selection from each of the churches participating.

Olson Names Montague To Succeed Judge Watts

James E. Montague of Crookston was appointed district judge in the fourteenth judicial district on Tuesday by Governor Floyd B. Olson. Mr. Montague succeeds Judge William Watts of Crookston who is retirring April 1.

Mr. Montague, 57 years old and a native of Minnesota, was born in Shieldville, near Fairbault, in Rice county. He married and has two sons, James E. Jr. Virginia attorney, and William H., law student at the U of Minnesota. He is a brother of K. Montague of Duluth, former assistant state attorney general, and has practiced law in Crookston for 29 years, of which he served 12 years as county attorney of Polk county.

Organization of 4-H Clubs Underway Under CWA Leader Teachers

County 4-H Club leaders are doing their utmost to contact all the boys and girls in the rural communities to give all of them an equal opportunity to belong to clubs and get in on the instruction and recreational projects being taught by CWA leader teachers, according to Miss Edna Hovie, county agent R. M. Douglass' assistant.

Club organization meetings are to be held at Hazel, March 22; West Sanders, March 28; St. Hilaire, March 29; Polk Centre, April 4; and East Sanders on April 6.

Work to be carried on by the 4-H clubs will consist in three parts of; Dramatic work in preparation for County One Act Play Contest, recreational work and instructions in parlimentary proceedure, handicraft and music, and a new project on couservation of wild life. The wild life project is being received very favorably by rural boys and girls, according to Miss Hovie.

HOG REDUCTION CONTRACTS ARE COMPLETE NOW

To Receive Applications Until April 10th County Agent Douglass Says

Completion of hog reduction contracts totalling 138 was announced this week by county agent R. M. Douglass. However this does not mean that we will not accept more applications, Mr. Douglass says, as applicants map register until April 10th.

In an effort to speed up payment for cutting production, the community committee's will begin going over the applications on Monday, April 2. Any grievence or dissatisfaction should be registered with his committee, according to the county agent. The County Allotment Committee will then go over the contracts and act as the final court of appeal, making all adjustments and settling all questions that may arise. Following this check-up the contracts will be sent to Wasington.

Payment will be made in three installments: first, $2 per head on 75 per cent of the production during 1932 and 1933; second, $1 per head in the fall; and the balance next winter.

The county allotment committee is composed of Ed. Hieren of Silverton township, Hans Anton of this city and Anton Johnson of Highlanding.

Only Uncanceled United States Airmail Contract is Held in Northern Minnesota

There is at least one airmail contract that has not been canceled in the United States and the holder of that contract is a Minnesota man by the name of Pete Klimek. This young pilot flies the mail from Baudette, Minnesota to Penasse, Minnesota, a settlement of 450 population which is located in the peninsula that cuts into Canada on the northern boundry of the state. It takes Mr. Klimek approximately three-quarters of an hour to fly the 75 miles to this small outlying town it would take nearly two days to traverse this same distance with a dog team which is the only other way that it can be reached during the winter.

Kilmek, with his co-pilot, George Lorr, has maintained his schedule for the past three years which calls for three trips a week. The wholesale cancelation of airmail contracts did not bother him very much, the only thing he said he has to worry about is whether or not muskellunge fishing would be any good.

The company which has three planes and two pilots, is owned and managed by Mr. Klimek, who is the president as well as one of the pilots of the company.

March Tax Settlement of $119,674.73 Distributed

March tax settlements totaling $119,674.73 were mailed out Tuesday to schools and town treasurers according to H. L. Fowler, Pennington county auditor. This is a great increase over last year when the settlements were $55,633.90 and is accounted for, according to Mr. Fowler by state laws that brought in heavy payments of delinquent taxes.

Thief River Falls receives $18,577.93 and the local school district $22, 359.93

LOCAL GROCERS' ASS'N. FORMED TUESDAY NIGHT

Offices For Ensuing Year Are Named by Nominating Committee

Tuesday night a group of the local grocery men met in the Civic and Commerce room of the auditorium and organized the Thief River Falls Retail Grocers Association. Mr. Davis of the Nash-Finch Wholesale Grocery Company from Minneapolis gave a very interesting talk explaining the value of such an organization to the grocery business in Thief River Falls.

W. L. Carlisle, manager of the local Nash-Finch branch, was elected temporary chairman of the meeting and John Ward was elected temporary secretary. A nominating committee composed of Alfred Bredeson, Wm. Parbst, L. DeCremer, C. G. Hilland, and Carl Christofferson was named to nominate officers for the coming year.

The following men were named by the nominating committee: Alfred Bredeson, president; Carl Christofferson, vice-president; John Ward, secretary; Wm. Parbst, treasurer; Omer Williams, E. L. Rolland, C. G. Hillard, A. M. Magnuson, Ottis Wold, L. DeCremer, H. Rhodegaard and J. O. Olund were named as the board of directors. These names were then submitted to the asembly for their vote; all were elected as recommended by the committee.

Fourteen grocers signed with the intention of joining the association but more are expected to sign at the next meeting to be held April 11th in th same rooms.

Lunch and beer was served after the meeting was dismissed by the Nash-Finch Company, followed by a number of short talks given by members, at the suggestion of Omer Williams.

RWA TO REPLACE CWA IN NEW SET UP ON APRIL 1

All Families Will be Budgeted According to Relief Needs

The National Reemployment service announces the new Relief Work Administration which will take the place of the CWA on April 1, their function will be that of placing workers in the position for which they are best fitted. Persons to be employed will be selected by the local Federal Relief office and certified to the National Reemployment Service.

Upon application by a family or representative to the relief worker will be sent out to the home to make an investigation. After the investigation a budget will be drawn up for the family according to their needs which will be based upon the number of persons, other sources of income, etc. The name of the worker will then be placed upon a certified list which will be sent by the Federal Relief Worker to the National Reemployment Service. The local R. W. A. Engineer will have in the meantime drawn up a series of projects to provide places for these people to work. He will then request a certain number of workers from the National Service to do this particular job.

Each person working under RWA will work a number of hours that is required for him to meet his budgeted needs. Therefore, a single man will work a certain number of hours and a married man with four children will work an amount of hours additioual in accordance with his greater needs. No person employed on a relief work project shall be allowed to work more than thirty hours per week nor may they work more than a maximum of eight hours in any one day.

The RWA office provides a place for people to work, pays them transfers them and if necessary discharges them. The National Reemploymen Service has only one funtion, namely that of providing a person in a position for which he is fittey by training experience, or education, upon request for a worker of that type by the RWA.

Under theRWA men will be placed according to qualifications only. It is essential, therefore, that if a person desires to work in the trade for which he is best fitted and has registered for some other work only because there was a greater amount thereof, he should come into the National Reemployment Service office and have the necessary corrections made.

Adult School Closed This Week; Additional Classes Added April 2

Two government civil service classes in shorthand and typewriting, (Junior and Senior) will be conducted. The Junior class will be conducted three times each week and the Senior class twice.

Mr. Bye stated that their seemed to be a genuine demand for penmanship and commercial arithmetic and that these classes also would be added.

Anyone interested in enrolling in these classe should register at the office of the superintendent of schools at the high school.

CONCORDIA CHOIR OF MOORHEAD TO SING HERE APR. 6

Organization on Tour of Three Northwest States

The Concordia Choir of Moorhead, Minnesota that appears here on the 6th of April at the Municipal auditorium under the direction of Prof. H. W. Monson, is this year making a tour of Minnesota, North Dakota, and Montana. Among the places visited this year will be Thief River Falls and Crookston, Minnesota, Grand Forks, Devils Lake, Minot, Williston, Dickinson, Bismarck, Valley City, Jamestown, North Dakota, and Culbertson, Glendive, and other points in Montana. The trip is made in private busses and the members of the choir are usually guests of local friends during their stay in various communities.

The tour last year took the choir through South Dakota, Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota, culminating with a triumphal appearance with the Minneapolis Symphony on Sunday afternoon, April 2. All along the route the critics were profuse in their praise of the marvelous intonation precision, and general perfection of this organization. The Albert Lea Journal speaks of the "maze of harmony" and "tremendous effects."

AUTO AND STYLE SHOW SETS NEW ALL TIME RECORD

2500 Attend Final Day; From Within Radius of 150 Miles

With over 2500 people jammed into the auditorium for the drawing on the Plymouth car given away at midnight last Saturday, the Seventh Annual Auto and Style Show sponsored by the American Legion came to a close.

The record attendence at the show was marked by visitors from within a radius of 150 miles. The fine exhibits also marked a record in the history of the show, which was supported by a choice program of speakers and a clean high grade variety of vaudeville. General Supervision of the show, O. C. Paulson voiced his appreciation, in behalf of the American Legion, to the general public for the cooperation given the organization in sponsoring this annual event.

Miss Alma Savig, employee of the Palm Garden cafe, held the winning ticket on the Plymouth prize drawing held following the dance and full length vaudeville program Saturday night. Florence E. Reinmuth's Rythum Revue, presenting the vaudeville program scored impressively with a well trained cast in snappy fashioned costumes. MacGowan and Mack, roller skating artists, and Gale Brancel and her trained dogs presented additional acts on the Saturday night program with Don Fitzloff presiding as master of ceremonies.

The Style Show displayed the latest models in spring attire including coats, suits, swagger and sport cloths, and afternoon and evening dresses stocked by local dealers. Geo. Hardy and his Purple Aces furnished the musical accompaniment for the show.

Carl Weberg of Hazel held the winning ticket for the ten dollar merchandise prize.

Women Asked to Register At NRS for Available Jobs

The National Reemployment Office yesterday issued a bulletin asking women who are interested in domestic work, stenographic, bookkeeping, and sales work, to register immediatly.

Ten placements have been made during the latter part of March, according to Miss Erma Fredricks, who states that there is already a call for domestic helpers in connection with spring house cleaning. This office wants the women to register, she said, because we anticipate a great number of openings in this ad surrounding communities in connection with spring business and housecleaning.

Placement of Workers by Private Employers Shows Marked Increase-- Dreng Bjornaraa

The placement of workers on jobs with private employers is increasing steadily each week according to information submitted by Dreng Bjornaraa, state director, National Reemployment Service. On March 17, was a total of 150,287 unemployed men and women registered in the 88 N.R.S. offices in this state. Since the first of the year more than 50,000 registrants have come to the employment office to add additional information regarding their past experience to the end that the may be placed on the job for which they are best fitted. Partly because of the interest in the Federal Work Program in this state the unemployed in unusually large numbers have registered. Complete experience records of these applicants have been secured with the result that the Service is especially well equipped to furnish highly qualified applicants to a diversity of work openings. The employer may cousnlt the files of the Reemployment Service for persons most qualified. An opportunity is thereby presented the private employer to secure only the best of help which will improve the efficiency of his organization. At the same time, the employee will be offered, as the demand arises, the type of work which he enjoys must and at which he is most efficient. The Service is offered free to employer and employee alike, and it is gratifying to note the response which has been forthcoming in many parts of the state.

VETERAN'S AID BILL IS VETOED

President Fears Budget Would Be Jeopardized by Raising Benefits $83,000,000.

Washington — President Roosevelt wrote a veto message for the independent offices supply bill, carrying the disputed veterans' benefit amendment.

The President was known to believe that the veterans' benefit liberalization, amounting to approximately $83,000,000, would jeopardize the budget.

Congress approved the house program restoring about $242,000,000 to war veterans and federal employes as against $333,000,000 voted by the senate and sent the much-buffeted independent offices bill to the White House.

Acting first, the senate accepted the less liberal house provisions of pay by 59 to 19 and then concurred in the smaller house veterans' appropriations by 48 to 39.

However, a slight change was made in the house bill to assure that no combat World war cases would be affected adversely. Speeded to the other side of the capitol, the clarifying clause was quickly agreed to and the bill made ready for presidential action.

The measure carried vast sums for all the government independent agencies like the Interstate commerce and trade commissions, in addition to the $242,000,000 of increases for veterans and federal workers.

A house clause restored about 29,000 World war veterans to the rolls at 75 per cent of their former benefits, without review of their cases to determine whether their disabilities were service-connected.

It was indicated the President opposed this provision on the ground it would put back on the rolls many misconduct cases—disabilities brought about by the veterans' own misbehavior.

Air Mail Bill Gets Final Action.

Washington—The house approved the administration's temporary air mail bill, completing congressional action on the measure. It was sent to the White House. In final form, the bill authorizes the postmaster general to use army airplanes and equipment for mail carrying; requires that the planes be equipped for "safe" day and night flying and the pilots trained in the use of the equipment; allows payment of expenses incurred by men used in the mail service; permit the replacement and repair of planes lost or damaged in mail service and directs the postmaster general to tell congress on the first day of its next session how much it costs to have the army carry the mails.

$1,000,000 Raised by Birthday Balls.

Washington — Approximately $1,000,000 was raised for the Warm Springs, Ga., foundation for infantile paralysis through the President birthday parties, Colonel Henry L. Doherty, chairman of the national committee for the balls, said financial reports from more than 4,000 communities in which the benefit dances were held were now being audited. The fund will be turned over to Mr. Roosevelt personally.

Girl Hangs from Bridge by Fingers.

Concord, Mass.—Death roared past Lillian Hansen, 13-year-old schoolgirl, a mile-a-minute as she clung by her finger-tips to the end of a railroad tie 20 feet above the swollen Concord river. She was caught in the middle of the bridge and saved herself by hanging to the end of a tie, as a fast train roared by.

$120,000 for Upper River Is Approved.

Washington—Allocation of $120,000 for maintenance operations in the Mississippi river between the Illinois river and Minneapolis was approved by the war department. The chief of engineers also announced approval of a $57,777.50 contract for dredging near Genoa and Lynxville, Wis.

17-Foot Lens for Telescope Poured.

Corning, N. Y.—The glass reflector for the world's largest telescope, by means of which scientists hope to wring new secrets from distant spaces of the universe, was placed in an oven to be cooled for 10 months. The huge 17-foot disk weighs 40,000 pounds.

Grasshopper Fund Measure Is Signed

Washington — President Roosevelt signed the agricultural appropriation bill which contained a fund of $2,340,000 for eradication of grasshoppers in drouth-ridden states. The money will be expended largely in eight central and northwestern states.

Portable Radios for Los Angeles Cops

Los Angeles—Authorities plan to issue portable radio receivers to foot patrolmen in the near future. The sets are worn on a Sam Browne belt with an earphone attached to the cap, the whole weighing less than three pounds.

MINNESOTA FIRE SUFFERERS' RELIEF BILL TO GET ACTION

Since the House Committee on Claims recently reported favorably the Minnesota Fire relief bill, a delegation has been sent to Washington from Minnesota to urge immediate action on the bill. The Minnesota Congressional delegation met on Saturday, March 17, to discuss plans for pushing this bill, which is for the relief of citizens who suffered from loss by railroad fires in northern Minnesota in 1918.

NRA MAKES BETTER TRAINED EMPLOYEES NECESSARY

More than 300 national codes for various kinds of business have been drawn up by employers and approved by the National Recovery Administration. In all of them standards are set up with regard to the price to be charged for a product, the amount which an employer can produce, the maximum hours of work for his employees and the rate per hour which different classes of workmen are to be paid for their services.

Generally speaking, all of this tends to put employers on the same basis in their competition with each other—with the exception of one thing, and that is the efficiency of their working force from the manager down to the ordinary laborer. It is this efficiency which will determine the quality of the product, the amount that is produced in a given time and the unit cost of the product.

For this reason employers, as never before, are becoming deeply interested in the selection, induction, training promotion and retention of the most capable force of employees they can possibly secure.

The emphasis they are laying upon efficiency means that as never before a man must have had special training for an occupation either in some school before he goes to work or after he enters upon employment. Recognizing this, Dunwoody Institute is anticipating an increased enrollment in day, part time and evening classes from both rural and urban Minnesota and from other states in the coming years.

CONFLICT IN TRUCK LAWS EXPLAINED BY R. R. COM.

Considerable confusion has arisen in Minnesota and adjacent states because there are two seperate and distinct laws in this state affecting motor transportation of freight. One of these laws is the license registration law, which is administered by the Secretary of State. The other is Chapter 170, the contract truck law, composed of Frank W. Matson, C. J. Laurisch, and Knud Wefald.

Under the license registration law, a "for hire" trucker may select as his situs, or base of operations a point other than his place of residence and carry on a trucking business within a 35-mile zone from this point with nothing but an "X" license plate, issued by the Secretary of State.

But under Chapter 170, a trucker cannot change his of operations in order to avoid taking out a permit and carrying insurance, for instance, a resident of Litchfield cannot haul goods for hire between that city and St. Paul, without a permit from the Railroad and Warehouse Commission. If he lived midway between these cities, he could do hauling for hire from St. Paul to Litchfield, or from Litchfield to St. Paul without such permit, his "X" license plate from the Secretary of State alone entitling him to the use of the highways between those two points. But under the contract truck law, he cannot pretend that his base of operations is at any other point than his actual home.

GAS PUMPS ORDERED TWENTY FEET BACK FROM STATE ROADS

Gasoline pumps and other devices for servicing motor vehicles along state trunk roads outside of municipalities must be set at least twenty feet from the edge of the highway right-of-way, according to a ruling by the Highway department.

This order was issued as a safety measure to keep cars off the highways while being serviced, according to a highway bulletin. The department seeks first to prevent the erection of any new filling stations too close to the roadways, and also to obtain relief in cases where exsisting structures constitute a menace to safty. Authority for such action is provided in state laws.

"The department is asking the voluntary co-operation of filling station owners in this matter because the parking of motor vehicles on highways for servicing is a serious danger to traffic," said Commissioner N. W. Elsberg. "We hope that it will be unnecessary to take court action."

MINNESOTA GAS, OIL COMPANIES GET LOANS FROM "CO-OP" BANK

Minnesota gas and oil cooperatives are among clients of the St. Paul Bank for Cooperatives, according to information covering operations of the bank up to March 1, and just released at Farm Credit headquarters in St. Paul. Two such cooperatives have been granted loans for $6,000, the balance of the $73,300 allowed in this state by the bank having gone to 7 Minnesota creameries.

According to information gathered by the cooperative bank division of the Farm Credit Administration in Washington, Minnesota leads all states in the Union in the matter of and Iowa second and third respectivly. Such cooperatves, numbering about 600 throughout the whole country, report business of over 35 million dollars in 1933. It is estimated that in all, there are about 350,000 farmer-members in these organizations.

In addition to these Minnesota loans the St. Paul Bank for Co-operatives has granted 3 grain loans in North Dakota for a total of $26,500, and 9 dairy loans in Wisconsin for a total of $190,900. Its loans allowed up to March 1 totaled $290,700.

MEDICAL SHORT COURSE AT UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

A short course in medicine and surgery devoted primarily to the subject of cancer but taking up other subjects, will be held on the University of Minnesota campus March 26 and 27 through cooperative efforts of the Medical School, Minnesota State Medical association and the General Extension Divison of the University. It is for the benefit of general practitioners in Minnesota.

Monday morning and evening and Tuesday morning will be devoted to the study of cancer. Afternoon meetings on both days will take up other subjects. There will be thirty-four half- hour practical demonstrations by members of the clinical staff of the medical school. Clinics, demonstration and lectures will take place in the amphitheater of the Eustis unit at University Hospital. The entire working time of the two days will be occupied by the course.

Dr. R. R. Price, director of the General Division has announced that the short course will be conducted by a committee of the medical faculty made up of Drs. E. T. Herman, J. C. Litzenberg, William A. O'Brian, N. O. Pearse, Leo G. Rigler and Owen H. Wangensteen.

A A A WILL FURNISH FARMERS ACCOUNT BOOKS

Every Minnesota farmer who signed a reduction contract on wheat, tobacco, or corn and hogs soon will be furnished a farm record book, the keeping of which will help him to prove compliance with his contract, according to Andrew Boss, in charge of the production control campaign in Minnesota.

Minnesota has been promised a quota of more than 100,000 of these books by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. They will be distributed free of charge to signers of reduction contracts through county production control associations.

This book contains forms for keeping records of the supplies of basic commodities on hand at the beginning and end each year; the acreage of crops planted and quantity of each harvested; the value of commodities bought and sold; the method of crop disposal and similar information covering the production, purchase and disposal of livestock and livestock products.

"This gigantic project in farm bookkeeping will be the greatest movement of its kind that the world has ever seen," says Andrew Boss, University Farm, who is in charge of the production control campaign in Minnesota.

"Though farmers have long been urged to keep business records and though the value of such records in better farm operation has been fully demonstrated, comparatively few farmers have made even a beginning. Now the AAA reduction campaigns give them an added incentive for keeping records.

"While these record books do not provide for an entirey adequate record system, they will give the figures needed to prove compliance with reduction contracts and no doubt will lead many farmers to adopt farm record systems for general farm management purposes."

ENCOURAGMENT NOTED IN FOOD STORAGE STOCKS

Storage stocks of food products in the United States on March 1 this year indicates some encouragement for markets on agricultural products, says the weekly market bulletin issued by the Central Co-Operative Association of South St. Paul Meat stocks generally show gains over a year ago, but they were mostly in line or slightly less than the five year average for that date.

Total stocks of pork in storage at 735,903,000 lbs. were 20 per cent more than a year ago but 8 per cent less than the five year average. Beef stocks at 65,308,000 lbs. showed 80 per cent gain over a year ago, but were slightly less than the five year average. Frozen mutton and lamb stocks were 9 per cent greater than a year ago, but showed a subtantial decrease from the five year average.

Other competitive foods manifested a similar trend. Frozen poultry held in storage houses of the United States on March 4 totaled 101,790,000 lbs. or 14 per cent more than a year ago. Compared with the five year average, however, poultry stocks were about the same. Total stocks of eggs were 1,225,000 cases or 7 per cent less than a year ago and 25 per cent less than the five year average. Storage stocks of creamery butter however, manifested a big gain. The March 1 total at 36,842,000 lbs. was 220 per cent greater than a year ago and 61 per cent greater than the five year average.

In the case of meat stocks, the Mar. 1 report is more optimistic than it has been for many months. It reflects decreased slaughter of meat animals as well as improved consumption demand.

U. STUDENTS WILL GET PART TIME EMPLOYMENT

With the opening of the spring term at the University of Minnesota, 2050 students enrolled in 33 Minnesota colleges will receive payment for part-time employment from the federal and state relief funds. This will entail a total dispursement of $40,712.00 each month for student relief in this state. Of this amount $10,000 per month is drawn from the state relief funds.

Since December, 1933, a plan of Student Aid has been funtioning in Minnesota under the joint authority of the Federal Emergency Administration and the State Executive Council. On Feb. 2nd, this plan was supplemented by an additional grant of federal funds. The original plan is retained intact, but allowance is given for each college to emply additional studens under a new federal quota.

An analysis of the work being done by relief students in 21 colleges, the University excluded, shows a variation of employment. The major types of work are in order of dominance. janitor service, clerical work, professionel assistants, library work, dormitory service and maintenance of grounds. Of the 600 students represented in the analysis 205 freshmen, 152 Sophomores, 132 Juniors, 111 Seniors. Ninty-nine of these are new students.

The administration of students relief is under the college authorities with the Emergency Educational Division exercising supervisory jurisdiction over the project.

LABOR TO STRESS HOUSING IN FIRST RULE, LONDON COUNTY

London—Holding the municipal reigns of London for the first time in history, with a majority in the county council of 14 members, the Labor party has announced that its major job will be to provide decent housing for the present slum-dwellers of the city.

The Labor majority of 14 replaces a former Conservative majority of 42 members. The Liberal party has been wiped out altogether as a factor in municipal politics, since it did not win a single seat.

Within four days of the announcement by Herbert Morrison, Labor leader of his party's London slum-clearance program, the Conservative national government shook the dust off a housing program for the entire country, which will give new homes to over a million people.

New Orleans Hit by Tornado; 20 Hurt

New Orleans—A tornado struck the edge of the city, leveling 80 houses in the suburban Gentilly district. Many persons were taken to the hospital, but none were known to have been killed.

Boy Finds $50,000 U.S. Bonds on Dump

Philadelphia — A 12-year-old boy, playing on a dump in suburban Upper Darby, has found between $50,000 and $100,000 in U. S. government bonds, it was announced by police here.

Minnesota communities interested in obtaining highway improvements and in keeping highway workers off of local relief roll can help achieve these ends by asking congress to appropiate additional funds for road construction, N. E. Elsberg, state highway commisioner, said today.

"The $10,600,000 granted for highway purposes late in 1933 will all be used up by the close of the present summer," Mr. Elsberg said. "Then there will be a precipitous drop in highway employment throughout the state, and road construction will come to a standstill. This situation will be even more serious because of the approaching close of CWA activities.

"As there is very little state money left for construction after meeting bond charges and providing for maintenance of the enlarged trunk system, Minnesota needs Federal aid. Highway work has proved its effectiveness as a means of providing employment and at the same time giving the public solid value for the money spent.

"Congress is considering proposals for making a new appropriation for highway work in the various states, and its final action will depend on whether public sentiment is expressed for or against such an appropriation, If communities wish to see money spent on Minnesota highway construction. They urge their congressmen to support the necessary legislation."

"Entered as second-class matter, April 27, 1932, at the post office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, under Act of March 3, 1879."

WE CELEBRATE OUR SECOND BIRTHDAY

With next weeks issue the Forum will round out the second year of its existence. They have been two hectic years. We entered the business at that time believing that the majority of newspapermen were guided by high ethics and lofty ideals of right and justice. We felt rather proud of the fact that we were so fortunate that we were so fortunate that we could enter into, and work in such a profession. We believed it, dedicated to community service, the national welfare and the betterment of the human race. We were a great deal like an exurberant ready to bounce all over them in an effort to further what we believed to be the common aim.

What a rude awakening we have had. We're an old dog now.

We have met some of the finest men that ever drew breath, in the newspaper profession; men who are all that we believed they should be and more. But we have met in the newspaper profession the lowest, most contemptable dregs of humanity. Men with neither ethics nor principle and sell their talent for a lousy job and a hollow community prestige. Lower than the illegal surgeon, for he takes only one human life, they assassinate the characters of both the living and the unborn; lower than the shyster lawyer, for while he sells out his client they sell out entire commonwealths. Prating about community service while they rob the community blind. Filling editorial columns with highsounding phrases about ethics and cooperation while secretly resorting to the most contemptable cut-throat tactics to eliminate their own competition. Dragging other people's family skeletons across their newscolumns while consigning to the wastebasket news that pertain to government and enterprise and of interest to every taxpayer and citizen.

But, we are not sorry for our choice of professions, for it has its recompense. We have some wonderful friends, and the more we see of those ill-will we have provoked, the more we appreciate the frinds that we have made. Some of the business men of the city have supported us excently with their advertising and we hope that our friends will show their appreciation by giving them their business in return.

Twelve hundred people have subscribed to the Forum in these two short years and it is gratifying to know that 90 per cent of them are renewing as their subscriptions expire.

But the greatest of all recompense is the expressions of goodwill and confidense which we get from the hundreds of men and women; farmers and workingmen whose interests we battle for and whose interest must be paramount if the commonwealth is to survive.

Without that confidence and good-will we could not go on; with it we cannot fail.

That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute a new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."

MR. CRAVENS AND THE BUREAU'S RATING

It is to be deplored that some of the newspapers in the state that claim to be Farmer-Labor papers should be so easily misled by the propaganda of the "kept press" in regard to the Farmer-Labor Educational Bureau and its scoring of the legislators. The fact that these papers are owned and controlled or at least owe their existence to support by office holders probabily explains this.

Fay Cravens, member of the House and publisher of the Mille Lacs Times, seems to feel that he was unjustly treated in the Bureau's scoring. He clains to be a goods Farmer-Laborite. He also cleims to know nothing about the Bureau, saying that it is an unauthorized organized organization. If Mr. Cravens is half as good a Farmer-Laborite as he claims to be he would know that the Bureau is specifically authorized and set up by the Farmer-Labor Association's constitution, in section two of article eight of that instrument.

The writer does not claim to agree 100 per cent with the rating as arrived at by the Bureau, nevertheless we do maintain that it is a fairly accurate criterion of the value of the various members. On the 16 roll calls which we used in scoring the members of the House in "The Minnesota Kaleidoscope of 1933" Mr. Cravens scores 81¼ per cent and we frankly admit the we feel it to be all that he is entitled to and more. We say more because while Mr. Cravens was a valuable member and voted fairly consistently with the Farmer-Labor forces, the fact that he took militant stand against one or two strictly Farmer-Labor measures detracts from his value far more than his vote against them would indicate.

Mr. Cravens is an effective debater and a hard worker, but the fact that there are times when he apparently feels that he is bigger than the party that elected him detracts from his value.

The lesson which the whole controversy teaches, is that editors must not be officeholders and officeholders must not be editors, nor allowed to dictate the policies of the perty's newspaper. Obviously there will come times when the interests of the officeholders are not the interests of the party. The rank and file should therefore distinguish sharply between those papers that are controlled and operated by and for the association and those that are mouthpieces of individuals.

We recall hanging on to mother's apron strings on a shopping trip thru the fish market of Oslo, Norway while we were quite small. The mackeral season was at its height and fish mongers are fully as verbose as reputed. We remember being quite appalled.

The memory was vividly brought to mind by King Leer's recent contribution to the 'Times,' even the oder.

Those cities which rushed into the airport game under the CWA and leased or purchased land now find themselves holding the sack. The government has stopped all work on airports and no explanations are forthcoming as to whether or not it will be resumed. The city of Morris is fortunate that it has incurred no other expense than the cost of a little surveying. —Morris Tribune.

INDUSTRY HAS ONE MORE CHANCE
Stephen Messenger

After nine months of trying to induce, persuade, cajole, bluff bludgeon and drive American industrialists into employing more of their humbler fellow-citizens, President Roosevelt and Recovery Administrator Johnson decided last week to see of the "Old Guard" can yet work work itself successfully into the harness of the "New Deal."

After a frank inventory of NRA accomplishments and a survey of its possibilities the administration decided to see what industry could do itself.

Industry's success with its first venture of "organized individualism" is to be measured by what it can do to take up the slack in unemployment. Its first job is to reduce hours of work to tha end that more men and women may be drawn from relief rolls back into gainful private employment. If industry fails in this venture, whatever the reason, it is the view that it had just as well forget pricefixing, anti-trust law relief and all other objectives of industrial self-government.

Industry is to be given one more chance. Wheather it is the final one, or not, ramains to be seen.

The money paid out for interest on bonds and warrents in Pennington county in two years would build one of the finest courthouses in Minnesota. That is something for the taxpayers to think about.

The city of Thief River Falls issued $300,000 in bonds to finance its paving. The interest over the twenty years will amount to 175,000. That means an interest burden of almost 60 per cent on that one project. And that's another thing the taxpayers might give a little thought.

If the interest in public debts was eliminated, it would mean that from 30 to 40 per cent of the taxes now being levied could be eliminated, or could be used for constructive purposes.

It would also mean that the millions now being held out of taxation and out of business thru tax-exempt securities would be released to be used in private business enterprises, thus bringing the interest rate to the business men and the farmers and homeowners down to two or three per cent. And it would not require an interest law to do it. Supply and demand would take care of it.

THE FALL OF SOCIALIST VIENNA
The Challenge

Every school child is taught that when the Mohammedan Turks besieged Vienna in the 15th century the very continuance of western civitization was menaced by the "horrible Turk." Every man, women and child today must soon realize that the forces in this case called Christian enrolled under the banner of Fascism to whom the Socialist city of Vienna fell in February 1934 are a new kind of barbarians carrying more threat to the best that civilized life has accomplished than the Turk ever did.

The city that fell before cannon fire was not a walled feudal city ruled by the petty feudal lords of a dark and superstitious period who had little to distinguish them from the Asiatic tribesmen without the walls. The city that fell was the most advanced in all the world in the level of culture and happiness of the mass of its people who were its workers.

It was ruled proudly by the leaders freely chosen by the overwhelming majority of its people. The chief of those leaders was a man termed "the most civilized men in Europe." These murder bands to whom it fell do not come from another and backward continent but like their brthers the Nazis of Germany, were recruited from the more ignorant and brutalized groups that could be found in the same nation.

Civilization will never again be menaced from roving bands of savage barbarians without its limits. The real menace is Fascism and the fascist force now contending for power to destroy within every nation. These forces can only grow as they are watered with the subsidies of the great owners of wealth and privilege. To destroy Fascism it is necessary to dry up the source of the corruption power of immense private wealth which will countenance or commit any crime to continue its power.

GENEROUS BANKERS
Union Advocate

How well the bankers entered into the spirit of President Roosevelt's recovery program is revealed in the report just issued by the Senate committee on banking which has been investigating banks and bankers. Their report covers the priod from June 30, 1932, to June 30, 1933.

Ten bankers received annual salaries of $100,000 or during that period, and 370 received $25,000 or more. H. C. McEldowney, of the Union Trust company of Pittsburgh, received $165,000 that year. His present salary is $120,000. W. W. Aldrich, of the Chase National bank of New York, received $175,000. Aldrich succeeded A. H. Wiggan, whose salary during 1931-1932 was $250,000. Gordon Rentschler, president of the National City bank of New York, was handed $130,550. Others in this class were Charles S. McCain, Chase National bank, $130,528; George W. Davidson, Central Hanover bank, $100,000; Percy H. Johnston, Chemical Bank and Trust, $125,000; Charles H. Sabin, Guaranty Trust, $100,919; Walter E. Frew, Corn Exchange bank, $102,882; W. C. Potter, Guaranty Trust, $101,068, and Harvey D. Gibson, Manufacturers' Trust bank, 125,000.

It should not be assumed that only the bank presidents were in on the big money while millions of humble people were in dire want. Not at all. The Chase National bank reported seven other officers receiving from $50,000 to $90,000 each and 63 vice presidents who were paid salaries from $11,500 to $45,000 per annum. The Philadelphia National bank paid three officers salaries ranging from $39,320 to $96,674, and fifteen others were given from $13,750 to $24,570. The National City bank also paid six officers from $50,000 to 75,000 a year, and 28 other ranging from $10,000 to $40,000.

It will be recalled that tha bankers were the very first ones to demand wage cuts following the 1929 stock market crash. They were the ones who instituted the wage-slashing orgy which swept the nation like a blight and threw millions of workers into the bread lines. But while they were demanding that Labor be depressed and starved, they apparently took good care of themselves.

And after all—that is just another one of those good old banker customs.

STATE TAX LEVY REDUCED
Farmer-Labor Leader

Minnesota state tax levies hava been reduced seven and three-quarter million dollars since 1929 when Republicans were in power. Yet G.O.P. spokesmen loudly cry that "state taxes under the Farmer-Labor administration have increased 118 per cen." That is untrue. Those who have originated the canard knew it to be false when the started the report. Here are the facts; not propaganda, but facts:

State Tax Levies
1932 . . . . . . 39,431,321—Farmer-Labor
1929 . . . . . . $47,20[illegible]—Republican
$ [illegible],774,607

The 1929 levy was payable in 1930 and the 1932 levy was payable in 1933. The decrease of seven and three quarter million dollars came about under the present Farmer-Labor administration.

The Liberal Digest

PLANNED CONSUMPTION AND PRODUCTION
By
Emil Rieve, President of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

The following speech was delivered during the sessions of the Committee on Correspondence and Action of the Continental Congress March 3 and 4.

To the average man, the economic policies of the country today often seem to be facing two ways at once. We have advertised to the four corners of the world the amazing technological developments in production processes that our nation has achieved. Every school book features the immense wealth of our farms, mines, forests, and rivers. We this year, concentrated our efforts as a Nation on the tremendous effort to limit production of all kinds. At the same time we have attempted to develop more liberal policies of relieving the distress of the millions of workers who are hungry and cold amid all this plenty.

We know that this is the richest country in the world; we have greater natural resources and greater ability to produce than any other Nation. The real difficulty we face as a people is not that we produce too much or too little but that our organization of the system of production and consumption is at fault.

The AAA and the NRA are emergencies of government set up to prevent the industrial and agricultural systems of the country from coming to a stop altogether. The theory back of the new governmental policies, is, or should be, that it is only possible to produce freely when the nation is able to consume what it produces. As matters now stand, it is dangerous to produce more than can be consumed when over-production occurs, financial panic is created and instead of using up our surplus, we quickly begin to consume even less than we did before, thus making matters still worse.

In the NRA we have for the first time in American industry, the beginnings of a National control. It should now be plain to every American that either the NRA set up or one like it, has become a permanent part of our economic life. We can improve, alter, modify, or revise this particular government machine but of controlled production has come to stay. To turn away from this policy now would be to invite certain disaster.

I am not saying that the NRA as now operates is a success; but it has brought about a considerable measure of economic recovery and is a step in the right direction. What must we do to accoplish a wider measure of recovery. First of all, we must break the vicious circle of economic error which has created a senseless condition where men starve in the mist of pleanty. Consumption must be increased so that men can produce. But to increase consumption we must so control production that the process is not merely for profit but is primarily to serve human needs.

The value of special control depends upon the group in society which is doing the controlling. The control of government in America for a hundred years now, has been in the hands of those who really do not seek increased production and consumption but are interested only in increased profits. If the NRA is dominated by the elements of plenty but in an economy of scarcity, it will hopelessly fail. The control of agricultural and industrial progress must be placed in the hands of those who will, at all times, serve the interest of the masses and not interests which hava created the chaotic conditions from which the country is seeking to emerge. No price control system can be made to work in this country until fundamental abuses in the financial setup of the productive system of the country are eliminated. As a matter of fact, no system of control will work unless it constantly extends greater benefits to an ever widening number of citizens. Agriculture cannot recover until it is no longer left at the mercy of a purely predatory financial system and control of industry will not be effective unless the political institutions of the country are also controlled by representatives of the people rather than the representatives of special privilege.

Industry under the NRA has been expected to adopt a policy of taking only small profits while producing the greatest possible volume of goods This is a sound social policy and no doubt could be effective if it were really applied. But in the nature of the system we live under, it is not possible to expect industry to operate on the basis of restricted profits unless compulsion is applied.

Self government of industry by employers as contemplated by the NIRA is not sufficient to produce the economic results which the Administration hoped that the act would yield. The results were not attained because the method of self government proposed by the NRA is not democratic. Unless workers employed in industry are obliged to assume their full share of responsibility for the regulation of industry, together with employers, you will not have real self government nor will you have the proper direction in the whole effort to achieve national recovery.

Labor is vitally concerned to get this country away from the destructive economic policies which force our nation to fall back on restriction in production in order to enable people to consume. We realized the shortcomings of a course of this kind but when in the midst of a catastrophe, you do not deliberate on the niceties of economic theory.

The nation must revise its whole plan of action in this chrisis so as to restore purchasing power, increase consumption and stimulate economic activity. Industry must be so regulated that it is able to operate with a real assurance that it will be able to distribute its products to the vast millions who are in dire need of the things that industry produces. Control of the productive machinery of tha country must be so planned as to assure capacity use of all facilities and thus make possible the re-employment of all those willing and able to work.

NO CHAPEL HOLDS MY CHRIST

No chapel holds my Christ, this Easter morn,
Within it crumbling walls, gray-hued and dim;
But where the beauty of the day unfolds
Upon a green hill's lifted rim,
I shall find him.

Others will kneel, their flickering tapers lit,
Where rises chant and prayer of early mass,
While I am waiting near the quiet trees,
Where Daises burn their hearts away in grass.
There He will pass.

For creed and ritual are too mean to bind
Fast to their narrow ways the Risen One!
Vainly man strives with net of words to catch.
To some scheduled way of priest or nun,
God's glorious Son.

His church—broad spaces of the thrilling sky;
His alter—place—all hearts that grope through gloom
To find the light: O will we never learn,
His spirit is too vast for any room,
Or sealed tomb?

GOOD FRIDAY THOUGHT

A rough-diamond sort of charactor in the college town was so far gone that blood transfusion was necessary. A student offered himself; he grew pale and weak as the blood was drawn from his veins but to the sufferer the life-blood of another brought new life and strength.

Last year a Chicago service club lost one of its most useful and beloved members. As he lay dying, blood transfusion was suggested. A member of that luncheon club volunteered. He was not called on but he was ready.

If eyes gleam and hearts quicken over the story of today's young men who are willing ot give a little of their life blood for a friend, shall we not be far more profoundly stirred when a Young Man of long ago gave all for His enemies?

"Pardon me for breathing," seems to be the password of a certain "Protective association" in this town.

"Two-bit" polititians got a bad jolt at the county Farmer-Labor convention. "Honerable" intentions were necessary before one could get in as a delegate. Much to the sorrow of some of our dear "friends" a dollar wasn't enough to prove "honorable intentions.

—o—

If dollars could by anything what would have happened to our orderly convention.

The capitalistic element of Thief River Falls is trying to put the Forum out out of business. Where can I find myself a nice fat capitalist? All those that I know are self-styled ones.

—o—

Did you ever know that every time some one refers to the Forum as a radical paper, that's one more "feather being put in our cap." —Look up the word if you don't believe me.

—o—

The Editor is gone. Therefore there will be no censure on this stuff this week.

—o—

Oh boy, were we "mad". Our own "scoop" was made to wait before he could get into the Coroner's inquest last week by the HON. Paul Lundgren, county attorney, while our esteemed Mr. "Bill" Dahlquist was roaming around inside.

—o—

Pray, does the County Attorney call the coroners jury?

Columbus thought the world was round and the people thought he was crazy. I know it's "flat" and no one disagrees with me.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

"TIME TO UNTIE"

The noted prohibition lecturer, J. B. Finch, in the old days made an address on the subject: "Time to Untie," and that address is just as timely today as it was when it was given. One thing he said was: "The time has come for a union of all good men and women to say the government must stop the ravages and outrages of the alcoholic liquor trada and the prohibitionists must refuse to wait a single year longer without a struggle to make it this year. The principles of the reform are right and agitation must arouse public attention and hasten the day of victory. There is no more important issue demanding the attention of the American people. The liquor lords are absolute political autocats and dictate or try to dictate the nominations of both Democratic and Republican parties. For prohibitionists to remain idle and allow the liquor lords to fasten the chains of their control on this country is to betray the highest and holiest interests of the people. The man or woman who cries, "Wait," "Go slow," is an enemy of God and humanity.

New City Directory Delivered Last Week

Polk's 1934-35 Thief River Falls City Directory, a nifty little volume with a lot of local data, is now being delivered to subscribers. There are 170 pages, and the listings total 2,688. Persons under eighteen are not listed, it is explained.

The publishers found 157 varieties of business and professional enterprises in operation here, some represented by one concern each and some by several concerns each. Beer listings and beer ads appear in the directory after a long absence.

Features of the directory are a householders' guide indentifying tenant-owned homes; an obituary and removal list, with one-line obituaries of adults deceased since last edition, and a record of removals to other cities; names of city and county officers; story of Thief River Falls; and and a name list distinguishing between married and single persons, householders roomers, and employers and employee.

The publishers said that the usual distribution of the newest Thief River Falls City Directory to free Directory Libraries in other cities will be made.

The "first citizen" of this city is Brigde Aakhus, of 112 St. Paul Ave. S. and the last is Joseph J. Zimmer, of 422 La Bree Ave. N. The surnames include Bang and Boom, Fast and Overland, and Rad and Silk. It may be noted that Mr. Bugge runs a taxicab business.

Auditorium Bills Taken Up By the City Concil Tuesday

Meeting Tuesday night the City council went through routine business authorizing certain payments on tha auditorium and granting a building permit to Edward Hill.

A payment of $800 was approved to the General Neon Company for the ornamental lighting chandeliers in the main auditorium. The general plumbing bill for $142.04 was authorized as was A. Holmgren's bill of $154.35 for paint used by the CWA project of painting the basement of the new building. The council authorized the installation of two lavatorys and a toilet in the dressing rooms in connection with the auditorium stage. Bert Norby, general contractor for the construction of the building, was allowed $4203.07 of the balance due him for the auditorium contract he fullfilled February 18.

Edward Hill's building permit anthorized tha construction of a residence at an estimated cost of $4,000, on lots 8 and 9, in block 12, between fifth and sixth street on Main ave.

The dry-cleaning ordinance was given its second reading and John Weiner was granted a beer license.

Make Applications For Seed Loans Now, Says Douglass

County agent R. M. Douglass announced yesterday that farmers who will want seed loans should come to his office and make out their applications now. It will take some time for the seed loans to go through, Mr. Douglass said, and the farmer should act now to avoid being held up during spring planting.

When making an application according to the county agent, the farmer should know how much seed he will need and the number of acres he will plant. It is also necessary this year to sign a crop mortgage in addition to a crop lien, he said.

Capitol News Review
by A. I. Harris

The fact that Senator Schall's charges pertaining to CWA workers having to join ths Farmar-Labor party and paying a fee of $2.00 before getting a job has been proven utterly falsa is in itself of no great moment. On tha face of it, tha charges are ridiculous and made out of wholecloth. It is worthy of reflection, however, that a person occuping so important a position of public trust as does the senator should be so amazingly careless with the truth.

Those who are criticizing the three per cent voluntary salary contribution of Farmer-Labor office holders to the Farmer Labor association for campaign purposes are talking a littla fast. A school child knows where campaign funds coma from. Is it better that these funds come from the rank and file office holder as a voluntary contribution than it is that they coma from trusts and corporations and others who expect some service from government in return. One of the evils of our American government is that the moneyed interests are able to gain control through campaign contributions.

With dry winds instead of rain and practically no sub-soil moisture remaining after three summers of precipatation far below normal, the immediate future looks dark for the farmers and business men of west central Minnesota, Vince Day, secretary to the governor, reports after a tour in that district. Conditions there Mr. Day said, are even worse than have been pictured. Relief in the form of feed for livestock, in inadequate and slow in arriving. Something has to be done to save that region from complete ruin, in Mr. Day's opinion.

One of the remarkable things about the CWA is that, despite its temporary, emergency nature, it accomplished work of a long-range, worthwhile character. It was recognized from the beginning that CWA projects were of value to the community in supplying needed employment and in accomplishing tangible, constructive improvements in many varied lines. Now, after analysis of the work, thougtful men recognize that CWA has built for the future while filling a temporary need. The latest tribute to intelligent administration of the relief program comes from G. H. Herrold, city engineer for the St. Paul planning board, when he says that information gathered by CWA workers as to traffic, housing conditions, and recreation activities will be used for the next ten years in making planning decisions in St. Paul. It is significant to note that these projects were of the type which drew the most fire from CWA critics early in the winter as "unnecessary, futile work designed only to furnish time-killers for the needy people."

The U. of M. Band started on their tour of tha northwest next week and will play engagements at Bemidji on April 3rd and at Crookston on April 4th. Gordon Johnson a member of the band, who was visiting at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnson, departed yesterday for Minneapolis where he will join the band.

The Minnesota
Kaleidoscope of 1933

Gives you first hand information of the doings of the 48th session of the legislature of Minnesota.

Read the following indorsement by the Farmer-Labor Leader:

The book shows the background of most of the controversies which arose over the income tax proposal, the unemployment insurance law. the chain store tax and other measures. It points out the weaknesses of certain groups in both House and Senate, and dissects the political intrigues with considerable skill. All in all, it is an excellent record to be used in the 1934 campaignand everyone interested in the political developmentsin the state should hav a copy for reference purposes.

THIEF RIVER FALLS FORUM

VOLUME TWO NUMBER 53 OFFICIAL PAPER OF PENNINGTON COUNTY, THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINNESOTA. THURSDAY, APRIL 5, 1934

CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT CONV. AT ERSKINE SAT.

Spirited Competition for the Party Endorsement Looms

The full story of the state Farmer-Labor Convention and the text of the platform will be found on the in side pages of this issue.

The ninth Congressional District Farmer-Labor Convention will be held Saturday April 7 at noon in Erskine in the high school auditorium. Delegates numbering more than 500 will attend the convention of which 34 will be from Pennington county. Fifteen counties will be represented with delegates in proportion to the number of votes cast et the last general election for Governor Olson. For every 100 votes cast there will be one delegate seated. ExSenator Lendby of Swift, Roscau county is the chairman and H. O. Berve of Thief River Falls is the secretary of the ninth district organization.

The meeting promises to be exciting as there are now about ten possible candidates for congress from this district, among them are A. C. Townley, former president of the Non-Partisan Leegue; Senator Bridgeman of Bemidji, Senator Buckler of Crookston; Elmer Holm, state representative, Dilworth; Leonard Hauske of Ada; Verner Nelson of Roseau; Louis Enstrom of Roseau. Delegates are more than likely tocome prepared to cast their vote for some predetermined candidate and because of this a "dark horse" might be trotted out in order to form some sort of a compromise. Among those mentioned as possible dark horses are Mrs. Laura E. Naplin and Thomas Vollum of Erskine. Sen. Naplin has been already endorsed for a state office but there is resentment among many Farmer-Laborites in the district who feel that they were not they were not treated right by the state convention when the best prospective congressional candidates in the district was taken away.

EASTER SUNDAY SERVICES WERE WELL ATTENDED

Snow Greets Easter Parade as Throngs Attend Church Services

The Lenten season was brought to a glorious finale Good Friday when the Auditorium of this city was crowded to the doors for the joint services Friday afternoon and with the churches crowded Easter Sunday.

Altho there was quite a heavy snowfall Easter Sunday the Easter spirit was not dampened in the souls of many who felt it ebsolutely necessary to grace the dey with their finest.

The Good Friday theme, "The Crucified Christ," was ably expounded by the speakers of the program on which the following spoke: Rev. R. M. Fjelstad, Rev. E. L. Tungseth and Rev. H. L. Sjorgren pointing out that the only way to freedom from sin and redemption is through Jesus Christ.

Hyms by the andience and selections by a ladies quartet from the Augustana church, a trio from the Zion church and a male quartet from the Trinity church with Mrs. Mildred Engen Hamilton serving as eccompanist, furnished the music for the program.

Borgen Players to Give Ten Act Play Apr. 11

The Borgen Players, a vaudeville show troupe who have been playing at the Sons of Norway hall every Wednesday night during the past winter are still playing to capacity crowds according to Mr. Borgan, manager of the troupe.

Mr. and Mrs. Borgan state that they will present several more plays here before starting on their tour of the northern part of the state sometime in May, with their tent theatre. Wednesday April 11th, they will present a special show consisting of ten acts of vandeville which are sure to be enjoyed by all.

The players have made their home in Thief River Falls during the past winter and have made hundreds of friends throughout the community and, they say, it will be with many regrets that they leave here in May.

Farmer-Labor Meeting in Star Twp. Sun. Afternoon

There will be a Fermer-Labor meeting in the District 59 school house in Star township next Sunday afternoon, April 8th, at two o'clock.

A discussion of the Fermer-Labor organization and the newly adopted Farmer-Labor pletform will be given by R. M. Aalbu, editor of the Forum.

Safety Education to Be Given in Schools

Working under joint supervision of the stote department of education end the state CWA safety division, D. B. Catlin of Minneapolis was in Thief River Falls last week conferring with superintendent of schools, Morris Bye in connection with a statewide safety educational survey being conducted with CWA funds.

The purpose of the survey, Mr. Catlin said, is to gather information from school authorities which will form the basis of a comprehensive curriculum of safty education for the use in schools throughout the stote.

"We are learning many new things in safety education by visiting the schools," Mr. Catlin said. "Several phases of safety education are tought in the Thief River Falls schools in e most unique and effective menner."

Following the survey, experts in the state CWA safety division, under the direction of A. V. Rohweder, divisional head, together with the department of education, will compile the results, with other safety education information at their disposal, so that the state department mey draw up a complete safety curriculum, including motor vehicle operation, industrial safety, and safety in the home.

Supporting the proposal for a uniform safety curriculum are the American Legion, Minnesota Police Association, Minnesota Safety Council, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Minnesota Stote Automobile Association, and numerous other organizations.

County Office Seekers Take Time in Filing

Filings for county offices continued at a slow pace with only three new candidates to toss their hats into the fight during the past week. One person, Gilbert Reiersgaard of Thief River Falls, filed for county sheriff, and two, Elroy Johnson of St. Hilaire and Judith Lockrem of Sunders, filed for county superintendent of schools.

Miss Lockrem is the daughter of the former county commissioner A. K. Lockrem and she has been a rural school teacher since 1930. She is a graduate of the local high school and teachers training department of the local branch. Mr. Johnson is a graduate of Moorhead Teachers college of the class of 1928 and he has been teaching in St. Hilaire for the past five years.

NRS FUNCTIONING ALTHOUGH CWA IS ABANDONED

Donald Snyder Warns About Seeking Employment Out of State

Donald Snyder, district maneger of the NRS, wishes to call to the attention of the people of the surrounding territory that the NRS is still functioning in the same manner as it was intended when first started es a placement bureau for public and private employment.

As the NRS wes originally intended for a medium thru which the employer and employee could contact and not intended es a subdivision of the CWA as it has been used, it is only natural that many people should get the impression that the NRS would cease to funtion when the CWA was called off, ecording the Mr. Snyder. This is not the case as the CWA duties which was performed by this office was only an expansion of the function of the NRS, he says.

During the past few deys Don Snyder and Irma Fredricks have been working on private placements thruout the various other county offices in this district.

Mr. Synder states that persons should be discouraged from going out of the stote seeking employment. Those who had any intensions of going to get work on the Fort Peck Dam Project at Glasgow, Montona, need not hake eny further plans as word has been received here that all labor has already been hired for this job from the state of Montana.

REPUBLICANS TO CONVENE HERE FRI., APRIL 6

Delegates To Be Chosen For Purpose of Endorsing Candidates

The Republicans will hold their county convention tomorrow, Friday, in the court rooms of the court house at two o'clock. County chairman Theodore Quale announced that he sent out the call for the meeting early this week so there should be a good representation present.

The convention was called, says Mr. Quale, to choose delegates to the stote convention which will be held in Minneapolis Friday, April 13th. Six delegates and six alternates will be chosen; the delegates will go for the purpose of endorsing candidates for the various state offices; the candidates will then be asked to file for office in the spring primaries.

Frisbie Asks Constructive Work By R.W.A

A meeting has been called by H. I. Frisbie, district CWA engineer, of ell county engineers in this district for Friday morning at 10 o'clock in Thief River Falls. This includes the county engineers from Thief River Fells, Bemidji, Bagley, Hallock, Baudette, Mahnomen, Ada, Crookston, Red Lake Falls and Rosean.

Sven Norling, State Water Conservation Engineer will be at this meeting to explain what the state is planning to do in water and forest conservation projects.

Mr. Frisbie requests thet all engineers come prepared to tell just whet has been done by the CWA and the emount of money needed to complete the projects already started; he also asks that the county engineers be prepered with data es what conservation work could be done in each of their counties.

Fish Spearing Prohibited By Order of Gov. Olson

In order to protect wall-eyed pike and pickerel during the spawning season from undue depletion of this species during the spearing season, Governor Olson issued a proclamation prohibiting the taking of any fish whatsoever by speering. This proclamation will go out of effect May 14th in the southern zone and Mey 19th in the northern zone. There are however exceptions to this they being the taking of fish for which seasons have been provided by lew end the taking of rough fish in lakes and streams under reguler issued contracts.

John Barzen left for Minneapolis Tuesday where he will shop and be accompanied back by his sister Margaret the leter part of the week.

Howard Davidson Offers a Suggestion as to How the City Could Easily be Beautified

Howard Davidson, manager of the local National Reeployment office let it be known to the general public today that he believes the city of Thief River Falls could be beautified to a great degree by taking some of the unemployed men off the market. His plan calls for a general clean up of all privately owned as well as publicly owned property by local men. There is, says Mr. Davidson, a super-abundance of labor which can be obtained in the city and these men would all be very happy to do work by which they could help defey the epenses of keeping their families.

There is no question in the minds of the various people with whom Mr. Davidson has elready spoken, about the value and the necessity of such a clean up beautifying program that he has in mind. The most radical suggestion mede to date has been that all those who have not as yet built curbings eround their front boulevards should now do so with the available labor. Shrubbery and flowers could be planted in the vacant lots in the business section of the city and shrubbery and flowers should be planted in the city parks. Mr. Davidson gave some very constructive thought to the construction ofn civic to the construction of a civic block. In this block there would be the municipal auditorium, a new court house to be constructed where the present court house now stands and the site occupied by the Fiterman building, a park constructed between the auditorium and the proposed new building, and the west half of the block In this block there would be the recreational center to be constructed either now or at some date in the future.

Mr. Davidson says that up to now the people of Thief River Falls have thought of a recreation center as being a place where people could hold a dance and have basket ball games. That he goes on to say, is not the true meaning of recreation center but it must be a place where people can hold events thruout the year in all phases of recreational activity.

Another idea advanced by Mr. Davidson at this chalk tolk is that the city should ebendon the swimming pool at Tindolph perk and establish in lieu thereof a concrete pool on the islend just south of Barzens mill. This he says would meke en ideal location for a swimming pool not only because water can be easily run thrugh from above the dam but also because the island in question has a degrading appearance, not at all pleasing to the public being as it is, so close to the municipal powed plent.

All those who are in sympathy with the ideas advanced are asked by Mr. Davidson ot get in touch with him and the cooperation will be appreciated. This is just a dream but any suggestions which will help it to materialize will be appreciated saya the originator.

CRIPPLES WILL RECEIVE FREE CONSULTATION

Medical and Vocational Consultation to be Given In September

An opportunity for medical examination and vocational consultotion will be offered the crippled and deformed persons of this district at a clinic to be held next September. Arrangements for this clinic were made at a special meeting in Thief River Falls at the High School last Thursday evening. The meeting was attended by local club women, school representatives, physicians and Christmas Seal workers. The clinic will be financed by Christmas Seal funds.

State representatives of the organizations active in work for the physically handicapped persons were in attendance at the meeting. The state visitors were: Miss Marguerite Breen, Mrs. Harlow-Hanson, Rodney Peterson and Harry J. Peterson.

The following committee was eppointed to take care of arrangements for the clinic: Eunice Lindgren, school nurse, Dr. B. C. Bernard, Supt. Oakland Park Sanitorium, Mrs. Qualle, Mrs. Chas. Froats, County Supt. of schools, A. C. Matheson, Mrs. Thelma Holm Erickson, all of Thief River Falls and Mrs. Geo. W. Christie and Erba Pouliot of Red Lake Falls.

An effort will be made to round up every cripple child and edult in this district so that they mey have the opportunity for examination.

Mr. Johnson reported on the opportunity the clinic offers his department to reach handicapped persons and advise them on vocational training and placement and also to arrange for transportation for crippled children.

CONCORDIA COLLEGE CHORUS WHICH WILL APPEAR IN CONCERT HERE FRIDAY EVENING

CONCORDIA CHOIR TO GIVE CONCERT HERE FRI. EVE.

Eleanor Harris is Member of Much Lauded College Singers

The Concordia College Choir, which eppears here Friday evening at the Municipal Auditorium, hes as one of its members Miss Eleanor Harris daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Herris of this city. The Choir is known throughtout the United States as one of the best amateur groups on the road and its concerts have been well attended at every place they heve appeared.

The Concordia Choir will present a variety of programs that will enable anyone to find the utmost enjoyment by ettending the concert. The director, Professor H. W. Monson, himself a prolific composer of high standing thruout the country, has chosen a group of compositions from the best in choral literature that will displey the various excellencies of the organization to the best advantage. The severe, classical contrapenital style of church music will be represented by Bach's motet for two choirs, "The Spirit Also Helpeth Us" and by Brahm's motet for five voices "A Crown of Grace." A beautiful Spanish folk song, "Holy Night," will display the ability of the choir in the intimate delicacy of soft harmonies where the smallest variation from pitch will mar the perfection of the whole. In Albert Snow's "Benedictus" for light part chorus and Prof. Monson's own "A Mighty Fortress" the choir will give rein to the tremendous power that lies in a well-balanced group of trained human voices. The climax of the program will come on the tremendous "Hosianna" be Gustav Schrech, a composition considered in Germany as being the most perfect A Capella chorus ever written. This composition requires an eight-part chorus with a well trained quartet in addition and is designed to give an impression of the overwhelming effect of the Heavenly host singing their "Hosiannas" before the throne of God.

BUILDING LOAN ASS'N. FORMED WED., APRIL 4

To Grant Loans on Construction and Remodeling of Homes and Property.

The First Federal Saving and Loans Association of Thief River Falls was granted a cherter this week by the Savings and Loan division of the Home Loan Bank Board in Weshington.

Share subscribers of the local organization held a meeting Wednesday at the office of Stonton R. Dahlen and elected the following officers: Paul Lundgren, president; Dr. O. F. Mellby, vice-president; Stanton Dahlen, secretary-treasurer; Roy Lambert, director; A. E. Mattsen, director.

The organization work being nearly completed the association expects to be functioning by May first. The fixtures of the defunct Citizens State bank of Red Lake Falls have been purchased and the offices and equipment will be installed in the Dahlen office. The organization will conduct an active share subscription campaign for the four classes of shares that the charter provides The four types of shares are: Fully paid income share; Accumulative share; Installment thrift share; and Optional Payment share.

Funds obtained by this organization will be used for the construction of new homes, for the remodelling of homes, for refinancing of mortgages not in default; a loan up to fifty per cent of the cost will be allowed on these projects.

The Federal government will give assistance appopriations matching the sums paid by the share holders. Interest rates have not ben set but will be next week following a conference with Secretary McGregor of the Crookston Association.

Farmer-Laborites Close Convention at 4 A.M. Thurs.

Adopts Platform Demanding Drastic Economic Changes

"I Am Not a Liberal, I Am What I Want to be— A Radical"; Olson

SHIPSTEAD IS INDORSED BY A TWO TO ONE VOTE

Paul A. Harris is Elected to the Vice-Chairmanship of the Association

700 weary but enthusiastic delegates seperated at 4 o'clock Thursday morning after the most heated and most successful Farmer-Labor state convention in the history of the movement. Among its accomplishments were the adoption of a platform wherein the association swings decidedly to the left, declaring for the establishment of the cooperative commonwealth; the choosing of a strong state ticket with which to go to the voters in the coming campaign; the endorsement of United States Senator Henrik Shipstead for reelection by a two to one vote after a lengthy and hectic debate; and the election of officers of the association.

A. C. Welch Calls Convention to Order

State Chairman, A. C. Welch opened the convention at ten o'clock Tuesday morning and after a short opening address introduced Mayor Mahoney of St. Paul who formally welcomed the delegates to the Saintly City, assuring them smilingly that in spite of reports to the contrary they would be accorded full police protection. "We are confronted with a radical change in our government that has taken place in the last two years," Mayor Mahoney said, citing state and federal changes in laws regulating industry and agriculture. "In this transaction period we must be careful of the steps taken, for one false step may wreck the whole movement."

Williams Gives Stirring Address

Howard Y. Williams, candidate for congress in the Farmer-Labor primaries two years ago, and secretary of the League for Industrial Democracy, who has been organizing Farmer-Labor parties in adjacent states gave a stirring address wherein he called upon the convention to declare itself in understandable terms on issues affecting the lives of the farmers and workers. He told of his work in other states and of Farmer-Labor parties in those states now in various stages of organization. He became chairman of the platform committee and was in a large degree instrumental in framing the clearout demands of the instrument brought out by that committee.

Lommen Elected Convention Chairman

State Senator Lommen of Eveleth was elected convention chairman and proved to be an exeptionally able presiding officer. W. J. McGaughren, who was elected vice-chairman and had to take the gavel when Senator Lommen's voice broke down on the second day had more trouble keeping the convention orderly and laid himself open to criticism from the floor upon several occasions. Frank Starkey was elected convention secretary and conducted his work with his usual ability. The standing committees were named and went immediately to work while platform planks and resolutions galore were introduced and fired in at them.

Movement is a Crusade Says Olson

Governor Olson, whose address was broadcast received a tremendous ovation as he advanced to the microphone at about two o'clock Tuesday afternoon. He had his speech written but soon deviated from the written text as he warmed up to his subject and only referred to it again once or twice and then only because it had already been released to the press and he felt that he should follow somewhat the released text. The Farmer-Labor movement is a crusade, he said and urged that we keep it so. "I am not a Liberal, I am what I want to be," he said, "I am a radical." He characterized the Republican party as a 'corpse' and brought the convention to its feet with a burst of cheers as he pointed out the dismal failure "rugged individualism" and "the law of the jungle" has made of our social and economic system declaring unequivocally for the cooperative commonwealth, dedicated to service instead of to profit.

Harry H. Peterson Speaks

Attorney General Harry H. Peterson received a spontaneous ovation when he was introduced. He gave a fine talk on the activities of his department and discussed the work his department had done in connection with the recent hearings before the Supreme Courts of the United States and of the State of Minnesota on the Mortgage Moratorium act and the state Income Tax law.

Shoemaker Attacks Shipstead

Congressman Shoemaker was given the floor for 45 minutes launching a vitriolic broadside against the record of Senator Henrik Shipstead, among other things declaring that Shipstead has been absent on 1,000 roll calls since taking his seat in the United States Senate, and that he had been paid a wage by the Non Partisan League while campaigning for office. He also declared that he had been furnished with a driver and a car which also had been paid by the league. The effectiveness of his remarks were dulled considerably however when Brudin of Glenwood pointed out later on that the Senator had been cinfined to John Hopkins hospital in Baltimore, Maryland for four and a half months seriusly ill and later had spent several months on an island in Lake of the Woods recuperating from his illness, all during a time when the Congess was in session and that his absence from roll-calls was therefore unavoidable. Mr. Brundin also called attention to the fact that Shipstead was a man in his prime, in robust health when he entered the Senate and was a gray haired veteran when he campaigned for his second term. "Shipstead has given all but his life for the people of Minnesota," Mr. Brundin said.

Thos. Vollom speaking on behalf of Shipstead said that he was the man who drove the car with Shipstead in the campaign referred to by Shoemaker and if the driver was to be paid he had some money coming for he had never been paid a nickle nor did he expect any. The car belonged to the league he said and had gone many a mile before Shipstead and he took it, and traveled many more miles while they used it.

When the question of endorsing Shipstead came up there was very little doubt of the result. Shipstead was endorsed with what we would judge to be a two to one vote on the question of "no indorsement" or indorsement of Shipstead". Shoemaker had asked that there be no indorsement made and that Shipstead and himself be allowed to fight it out in the primary. He announced after the vote had been taken that he will stay in the fight and attack Shipstead on his record, leaving it to the people to decide in the primary who should be the party's choice for the U. S. senate. He has already filed for the office.

Committee Make Reports

The standing committees worked all night. The resolutions committee being the first to report. Among the resolutions adopted were:

Protest against more than one member of a household getting a job in any one state department.

For indorsement only of candidates agreeing to campaign through the party organization.

Insistence that no one be appointed to a state position unless he has the indorsement of his Farmer-Labor local.

Against compulsory military drill.

For the Wagner labor union bill.

For release of Mooney and Billings.

For funds to complete the nine-foot channel in the Mississippi.

For veterans club charters in the party organization.

For permitting the rural credit bureau to extend credit to worthy and needy mortgagors.

Constitution is Amended

The association constitution was amended to provide a change in the representation at state conventions as follows:

Two delegates at large from each county (one at large under the former rules) and one for each 1,000 votes or major fraction cast for the Farmer-Labor candidate for governor in the last general election. The three large counties, Hennepin, Ramsey and St. Louis, are deprived of their 'at large' delegates and will be represented by one delegate for each 1,000 votes of major fraction.

The division of membership fees was changed to provide 25 cents to the state, 50 cents to the county and 25 cents to the local organization.

The State Central Committee was instructed to appoint a legislative committee of five members which will supervise the drawing and introduction of the bills covering platform planks in the legislature and which will be charged with appearing before the various committees in behalf of party measures, guiding them thru the legislature.

Recommendations

The Legislature committee's report said:

We recommend that a higher inheritance tax be levied and that a tax be levied on gifts of money, goods or property to individuals and corporations othes than for philanthropic purposes.

"We recommend that the State Legislature pass a bill amending the present law to the intent that the several townships in the state may receive their portion of the gasolina tax for town road improvements without having to much such funds from township funds.

"We recommend that the Legislature enact suitable legislation to revise the Accident and Liability Insurance code of Minnesota so as to safeguard the right of policyholders.

"We recommend that the Legislature enact suitable laws to provide for the public ownership and operation of monopolized industry and including state-owned insurance.

"We recommend that the state legislature support any measure which will secure the necessary funds and make possible the building and operation of a state Psycopathic hospital.

"We hereby indorse the state regulation and supervision of livestock weighing, grading and marketing at all concentration points throughout the state and recommend that a bill be introduced and passed in the next Legislature.

"We recommend that if there is to be liquor business carried on, that the government and municipalities monopolize all profits.

"We recommend that the Legislature pass and revise our educational and tax laws so as to provide adequate and equal opportunities for every child in the state.

"We demand the establishment of a central bank in Minnesota to be owned and operated by the state.

"We favor public ownership of light and power plants and legislation which will permit district systems tying together existing municipally owned power plants to furnish electric service to farmers and country residents at reasonable rates.

"We oppose any legislation promoting any kind of state police or constabulary system.

"We recommend that all corporations doing business in Minnesota be required to file a list annually of their stockholders with the State Tax commission, and that all foreign corporations file a biennial report of the capital invested in this state and be required to pay thereon the tax now provided by law for such purposes.

"We recommend that the Legislature memorialize Congress to pass necessary legislation making the issuance of tax-exempt bonds illegal and prohibited."

Nominations

The work of naming the state ticket was left to the closing hours of the convention. Governor Olson was given the indorsement of the convention with a rising vote, as was Attorney General Harry H. Peterson and Lieutenant Governor K. K. Solberg for secretary of state.

Representative Peterson's name was offered as a substitute for the name of George Lommen, the nomination commitee's indorsee for the office of lieutenant governor. State Senator Emil Regnier, of Marshall, and Thos. Vollum of Erskine, were also nominated from the floor. In the run-off Representative Peterson received 356 votes and Senator Lommen 160. On Lommen's motion the vote was made unanimous for Mr. Peterson.

Another contest developed on the naming of a candidate for state treasurer. A. H. Kleffman, who ran for this office two years ago and came within few thousand of beating the republican nominee, was the choice of the nominating committee. However, Mrs. Mildred B. Loomer, of Hibbing, was placed in nomination, but Mr. Kleffman was declared the choice of the convention by a very decisive viva voce vote.

The convention went into its third indorsement struggle with the nomination by the committee of John T. Lyons of Le Center who had been indorsed by the Farmer-Labor Veterans clubs for state auditor.

Representative Harold Atwood of Winona, also a war veteran, was placed in nomination from the floor by County Attorney Otto Baudlar of Mower county, who moved to substitute Atwood's name on the proposed unanimous ballot. He asked "for a war veteran who can go out and beat Staff King," Republicn incumbent.

After bitter debate the motion to substitute Atwood's name on the proposed ballot was lost. A rising vote was taken. Atwood subsequently moved that the nomination of Lyons be made unanimous.

A four-cornered fight broke out when the committee indorsement of Representative D. W. Johnson of Minneapolis for railroad and warehouse commissioner was presented.

Immediately the names of Speaker Charles Munn of Osseo, Thomas Vollum of Erskine and J. L. Peterson of Proctor, president Capital superintendent, were placed in nomination from the floor.

On the first ballot the vote was Munn 235, Vollum 130, Johnson 158, and Peterson 47. The roll was called by counties: Speaker Munn, although leading, failed to obtain a majority.

The convention then voted to declare Munn elected but, on a motion to reconsider, reversed itself and decided to take a new ballot on the two high candidates, Munn and Johnson.

The results of this ballot gave Munn 359, Johnson 223.

Naplin is Endorsed for Clerk of Supreme Court

The convention of Women's Farmer-Labor clubs was held on Monday and Senator Laura E. Naplin was given the unanimous endorsement of that body for clerk of Supreme Court with instructions to its delegates to present her name to the convention on the following day.

The nominating committee was unanimous in its choice in this matter and she was recommended to the convention as its choice for the last office to be filled on the state ticket. The name of Henry G. Teigan was placed in nomination from the floor however, and a spirited contest arose altho there seemed to be no doubt from the first that Naplin would get the indorsement by an overwhelming majority. Several seconding speeches were made for each candidate, Miss Myrtle Cain, Mrs. Arthur LeSeur and other women as well as Paul Harris and R. M. Aalbn of this city speaking in behalf of Mrs. Naplin. A. C. Townley seconding the nomination of Henry Teigan stated that the women were newcomers to the movement and brought the ire of the women delegates present upon his head. One of them addressing the delegates, taking him to task severely. On a rising vote, Naplin received the endorsement by an overwhelming majority. Mr. Teigan moved to make the choice unanimous and there being no objection it was so ordered.

Harris Elected Vice-Chairman

A. C. Welch was reelected state chairman of the Farmer-Labor association and Paul A. Harris of this city placed in nomination by Mrs. DeMoreof Duluth was elected vice-chairman. Miss Irene Welby who has officiated as temporary secretary of the association since the resignation of Frank Starkey who became a member of the state Industrial commission, was elected secretary by acclamation when Howard Y. Williams who had also been placed in nomination graciously withdrew in her favor.

Mrs. Naplin is the first woman to be endosed for state office by the Farmer-Labor association and Miss Welby is the first woman to become its secretary.

STATE IS NEARING ITS GOAL IN ITS FIGHT AGAINST T. B.

The saving of eastern markets to Minnesota dairymen seems assured as Minnesota counties hasten to order bovine t. b. tests, says the Minnesota Farm Bureau. Settling of the controversial problems of wiping out tuberculosis in cattle seemed assured on March 15 when all but three counties of the state had started action to wipe out the plague, it was learned at the office of Dr. Charles E. Cotton, secretary of the State Livestock Sanitary Board.

On that date, 71 counties had been officially designated as accredited areas, tests had been made or ordered in 13 and only Lac Qui Parle, Yellow Medicine and Chippewa had not taken affirmative action. The closing of eastern markets to dairy products from untested areas and the availability of CWA funds for carrying on the tests have greatly stimulated the t. b. eradication work, Farm Bureau officials said.

In his long fight to free Minnesota dairy herds from tuberculosis Dr. Cotton has had the support of all of the state's major farm co-operative organizations. The anti-testing agitation, which cost the taxpayers of Iowa more than $125,000 during the cow test "war" of two years ago, was rendered comparatively harmless in Minnesota by the support given Dr. Cotton by the state's co-operative groups.

Endorsement of the cow testing campaign was given recently by Gov. Floyd B. Olson. He urged counties to act now in order to take advantage of CWA funds. These funds will not be available after May 1, says Dr. Cotton.

Size of Baby Elephants

Average elephant calves are about three feet tall at birth. The adult elephant is sparsely provided with body hair, but a new born elephant may have an abundant coat of short gray fur which may last for about five years. Usually there is but one calf at birth although twins have been known to be born.

UNEMPLOYMENT AND OLD AGE PENSIONS ARE CONSIDERED

The most important legislation now before Congress is the Lundeen Workers' Unemployment and Social Insurance legislation. This is all inclusive and national in its scope. If followed out, it will do more to bring general happiness and contentment to our people than all other legislation introduced in the 73rd Congress combined. This hill provides for unemployment and part-time employment insurance, adequate old age pensions, accident insurance, illness insurance and maternity benefits. European countries years ago adopted unemployment, old age and social insurance legislation far in advance of any laws enacted here. "I call upon all good citizens everywhere to communicate with their Representatives in the House and Senate to the end that they may vote for this program of social insurance legislation," Congressman Lundeen said.

"It is well known that the aged and unemployed are hetter cared for hy Europe than by America. If anyone doubts this, the Department of Labor will furnish information on the subject. America is the best country in the world in which to live for those who have money. It is not so happy a haven for those who are penniless, destitute, hungry and poverty-stricken. We have been too indifferent. We must cast aside this indifference and see that the great American heart beats for all and not just for a few" Lundeen stated.

DAIRYMEN WILL BE OFFERED REDUCTION PROGRAM, APR 6

A dairy reduction program which contemplated the payment of at least $165,000,000 to the United States has been announced by Secretary Wallace and Chester C. Davis, Administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment Act. Minnesota farmers may receive from $8,600,000 to $17,000,000 of this fund, depending upon the number who sign contracts and the extent to which they reduce their production.

This program will be submitted to dairy leaders at a series of regional conferences, the first of which will be held at University Farm. St. Paul, April 6 and 7. As the result of these conferences, the program may be modified or even rejected, if it appears that any large groups of dairymen are opposed to its principal provisions.

If this plan should be adopted as proposed, each dairyman would be permitted to enter into an agreement with the Agriculture Adjustment Administration, whereby he would reduce his quantity of milk or butterfat marketed in 1934, 10 to 20 per cent below the average quantity marketed in 1932 and 1933. Methods of reducing production would he left to the dairyman's own choice.

For each pound of hutterfat reduced, the producer would receive an adjustment payment of 40 cents. In terms of milk of average butterfat content, this payment would amount to about $1.50 per hundredweight. He would also receive the benefit of any increase in market price which might result from the curtailment of dairy production.

In addition of the above fund to buy milk for undernourished children; to transfer cows from areas of surplus dairy production to districts in the south where many families have lived for years without enough dairy products in their diets; and to speed up state-federal campaigns already in progress to detect tuberculousis cows and remove them from herds.

The administration would finance the reduction program and perhaps also the supplementary programs by levying a processing tax on dairy products manufactured and fluid milk sold. At the beginning this tax would be levied at the rate of one cent per pound of butterfat, but it would be gradually increased until it reached five cents per pound.

IF THIS BE SOCIALISM, MAKE THE MOST OF IT!

Hardly had the last thunderous "yea" on the adoption of the Farmer-Labor platform died down in the St Psul auditorium, when the corridors and tha lobby of ths huilding and the adjacent streets resounded with the hawking of the newsboys as they plied Twin City dailies announcing to the world in screaming headlines that the "Farmer-Labor Party Swings Left," Farmer-Labor Declares for Co-operative Commonwealth," "Farmer-Laborites Adopt Socialism," etc.

Did they expect us to do otherwise?

We resent the implication that we should temporize with a decaying social and economic order.

We resent the inference that we should apologize for chaos, starvation, destitution, misery and stalking pestilence always ready to pounce upcn the undernourished, the clothingless and the unsheltered.

To what depths of perdition have men fallen, that we ahould be expected to longer tolerate unemployment, foreclosures, evictions, and ever lengthening relief lines?

Where is the much touted "Great American Heart" that fed the starving Armenians; udministered to suffering Germans, our erstwhile foes; and spread its bounty for forlorn and wartorn Belgium and France, that we should longer tolerate want in the midst of plenty?

Whera is our love of liberty; the patriotism in which our poets have gloried, that it should ba assumed wa would bow our heads to the yoke of Fascism, and never utter a protest?

Yes, we are radical, for Webster ssys that a radical is one who goes to the root, and we refuse to dabble with palliatives that stagger the misery and prolong the agony. We want to rebuild, while we atill have strenth to rebuild. We want to remold this glorious empire, ere outraged and desperate millions destroy the heritage that has been baptized in the blood of putriots, and pssed on to us by toiling pioneers.

The chains of Fascism have been forged and even now are being laid npon an nnsuspecting people. Sops in the form of processing taxes are heing thrown to our farmers to entice them into a regimentation whereunder they will receive their orders from a "Brain Trust" in Washington, the sole function of county allotment committees being to sea that each man is crushed equally under the Dictator's heel.

Anti-trust laws have been scrapped, and industry is being organized for the industrialists, into an economic empire of the financiers, governed by codes in the writing of which neither farmers, nor workers, nor consumers have been consulted nor considered. All to bc enforced by an army if necessary, which the Secretary of War recently stated is "A nation within a nution, ready to cope with riots and labor troubles."

Secretary Wallace in a pamphlet entitled "America Must Choose" states that voluntary regimentation has failed and that forced regimentation will be necessary.

Industrial codes become law as fsst as they are written and receive the President's signature, without further approval of Congress. The power of lowmaking has already been relegated to the President. IT IS FASCISM!

Is that what yon want, fermera, workers, professional men and independent businessmen?

"Regimented opinion' is inevitable," aays Mr. Wallace, and thus voices the first intimation that we may expect suppression of the press thet refuses to be regimented in it opinions, if such becomes necessary in this high-handed attempt to force Fascism upon a protesting nation.

"There ia greater danger to this country from Fascism than from Communism" said Governor Olson in his keynote address to the Farmer-Lahor convantion, and the American citizen need only to compare the recent trends of government with the Fascism of Mussolini to know where we are headed. Further the governor said:

> "I am sure that the very distinguished President of the United States, who is himself a Jeffersonian, will faat realize the danger of such a move on the pert of the party which he represents and that in due time the centralization of power in the federal government which is proceeding so repidly will be broken up and passed hack to the atate."

We are at the crossroads now. We must choose between Faacism and the Co-operative Commonwealth. There is no middle course. If we desire Fascism, we have but to let things take their course and we will have it soon enough. The powers of industry and finance want it and whether the president wants it or not, his hand will be forced unless the people make their demand for the Co-operative Commonwealth known in unmistakable terma in the forthcoming elections. Democratic self-government is at stake. What will be your answer?

Last week Governor Olson appointed James E. Montague of Crookston to succeed Judge William Watts, who tendered his reaignation.

While we are frankly disappointed, feeling as we do, that Mr. Berve of this city would huve been an excellent choice for this office, we do know that the governor has chosen a man of nbility and high standing in his profession. We are sure that the governor from his position is the best judge in the matter.

We extend our compliments to Judge Montague. He has been appointed to his position by the greatest governor the state of Minnesota ever had. We feel sure that he will always he found among those members of the judiciary, all too few in the past, who are facing to the future, interpreting and administering the law in the interests of the common man, the producer. The function of the courts must be to further the greatest good for the greatest number. Doing that it can do no better.

The slogan of the old parties is to be "Suve the State from Socialism" in the forthcoming campaign, according to reports from various republican and democratic "indignation meetings" being held thuout tha state.

If past performance is any criterion, we would asy "Save the State from the Saviors."

The St. Panl Dispatch says that the Farmer-Labor platform means Fascism and that Olson wants to hs a Hitler. They remind us of a story of a young "snatcher" who grabbed a woman's purse and started away with it on tha run. When she ran after him shonting "Stop thief!" he pointed down the street and also shouted "Stop thief!" A policeman on the corner seeing him point and hearing the commotion tore away down tha street in the direction the purse snatcher was pointing and ths latter dncked into an alley and made his get-away.

It's an nld gag and the voters of Minnesota are not likely to be misled by it.

Just as ths plumber has an instument for "listening in" to aid nim in detecting the location of tns leak in waterpipes, so we all nave an instrument calleu brain, which if properly used enables us to locate tns leaks in our nnancial system, the principal one of which is usury. It is tnese leaks that have causen this and all other nepressions before it. The leak of usury, delivering wealth into the vaults of Wall Street has become so huge that it is draining our whole financial system dry. Tns more interest-bearing monay our government issues, tne greater becomes ths leak. The fact that we are not coping with this ruinous situation would tend to show that ws are either "plumb" crazy as a people or we are not using our brains. If our government is a government of the people, for the people and by the people, the situation can be remedied by us.

Does the government still belong to the people, or have we lost our original equity?

It is not many years ago that relief, or what was mis-namsd public charity, carried with it the condescending sniffs of those better situated. This crusl and stupid attituds has changed in very recent years to a higner concept of social responsibility. The new attituqe is well expressed in a letter of instructions just sent out to county workars by the division nf the stags emergency relief committee. It says, in part, "this office will not tolerate an unsympathetic attituos toward relief clients. The applicant may be unreasonaole, he may be overly psrsistent; no may be outrageous in his demands. Regardless of his approacn anu nis attitune, our workers must maintain a reasoning attituds, a calm temperament, and a disposition to assist and help the clients This assistance need not always be in the terms of dollars and cents, but it must genuinely human."

What's the difference if some hold back vegetables, others milk, others taxes and others coal? If one is wrong, why not all?

If labor and farmers should keep on working in ths interesta of all the peopls until their grievances are adjusted why should not money keep working until its grievances are adjusted?

The tragedy of our economic system is the recognition that some having the power to distribute wealth can withhold its distribution, remain living in luxury whils the masses, minus the power,—which includes the aged, the babies, the orphans, the afflicted, the destitute and the millions of the middls class—must stay and live in the midst of increasing misery and wretchedness.

ONE YEAR'S FAILURE OF THE "NEW DEAL"

Speach over Radio at Luncheon of Continental Congress Meeting, Arlington Hotel, Washington, D. C. Saturday, March 3rd by BENJAMIN C. MARSH, Executive Secretary, People's Lohby, Washington D. C.

A year ago ths American people swapped office holders, the hungry for the starving.

He drove the money changers out of the Temple of Wall Street, and they are now at home in Washington, The President threw awey his duty to take over the benking business, when he declared a hanking moratorium, and ever since the bankers have been throwing wrenches in tha works.

Instead of prosecuting violaters of law, the President has promoted hardboiled business executives to control of the N. R. A.

The whole purpose of the world-old "new deal" is to protect property holders big and little, and to skin the producers.

Any person with the brains, not of Harvard or Columbia, but of ordinary common sense, knew a year ago thet the only way to increase the consuming power of the American people waa to redistrihute the national income prooerly through taxation, to squeeze about $150,000,000,000 of water ont of the capitalization of corporations, transfer taxes from buildings and other products of labor to land values, and so cut down prices of land about two-thirds, cut deht and interest rates at least a third, and have the government take over natural resources and natural monopolies, paying the owner only for values they had created.

The Government should also have promptly taken over the pnrchase, processing and sale to consumers, of all basic farm products. Nothing short of this could honestly be called a "new deal."

Instead of these first essential stops to economic justice and hence prosperity, the Administration has bribed every essential property interest by some sort of bonus, or hand out, at the expense of consumers.

It has fed a lot of starving people, but it has made the semi-starving pay for tha food.

It has tried to reduce consumption, so as to keep up and increase rent, interest and profits—most of which go to less than one-tenth of the people.

Washington is today an economic insana asylum, with a smiling superintendent who doesn't know what it is all about.

Ths Secretary of Agriculture and the Agriculture Adjustment Administration are trying to limit production of cotton, though we could nse three million bales mora of cotton ,a large part of the carry over—to make mattresses for children and adults who lie out the night on rages and boards and for clothes, if peopls could buy.

America conld consume, if Americans got what they produce, or would like to, all the milk, eggs, fruits, and vegetables we can prodnce, and can't export under a decent tariff law. Americans are hlghbrow enough to prefer food, clothes, mattresses and sheets, to corn bread and aowbelly, rags, and board to sleep on.

The program of the Secretary of Agriculture helps speculators in farm lands, not working farmers, nor consumers.

Labor has been coded, but not employed. Not a aingle code requires enough wages to meet the increased cost of living which tha administration is trying to bring about, most of them are not over two-thirds enough.

The Public Works Administration is a beatiful scheme to give a little employment, and billions of graft to land speculators, the valne of whose holdings is increased saveral times the cost thereof.

The House, under the complete control of the administration has passed a vicious revenue bill which increases taxes on a few of the wealthy, but reduces them on others.

An honest government would raise at least four and a half billion dollars more by taxes this year, upon concentrated wealth and income.

This Administration is borowing from the rich instead, and issuing countless billions of dollars of additional tax-exempt bonds, the interest and principal to be paid hy the poor.

This is what Wilson did to win the war to protest Morgan's investments; this is what Roosevelt is doing to win the fake war against poverty.

A government can raise as much by taxing the rich individuals and corporations, as by borrowing from them. A government can be made to do thia hy an outraged people.

During Morgan's World war ,you couldn't protest against the fukers in Washington, if you have any manhood you will do it now.

We shall have unemployment and suffering until accesa to land and natural resources is made free.

Question: I made a bid of ona diamond vulnerable and my partner made a forcing takeout of two spades. I hold 4½ honor tricks. What should I do?

Answer: Your partner's forcing takeout shows you ordinarily 3½ honor tricks. He counts on your having at least 2½ honor tricks with a very favorable distribution, since you are vulnerable. Your combined hands therefore shows at least 7½ honor tricks. A jump takeout in another suit will show your partner unusual strength—generally about 4½ to 5½ honor tricks. A small slam is a certainty. Your future combined bidding should now indicate whether you have a big slam. If your bid of spades was on a four-card suit, your suits evenly distributed, no other biddabla suit, you will likely be able to nse the four-fivs notrump convention which will be explained in next week's issue.

HIGH COST OF WAR
(St. Paul Daily Newa)

Figures and statistics are, ordinarly, dry and uninteresting; the exception being those included by Pres. Nicholas Murray Butler of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace in his report to the endowment's trustees on the work of the division of intercourse and education.

The figures show that the World war cost 30,000,000 lives and $400,000,000,000 in property and that with that amount of money:

> Homes worth $2,500, furnished with 1,000 worth nf furniture, located nn five acres of land worth $100 an acre, could have been provided for every family in the United States, Canada, Australia, England Wales, Ireland, Scotland, France, Belgium, Germany, Russia.
> In addition, $5,000,000 libraries and $10,000,000 universities could have been built in each city of mors than 20,000 population in the same countries.
> Further a fund could have been set aside which at 5 per cent interest would provide, permanently, for $1,000 annual salaries for 125,000 teachers and 125,000 nurses.
> And there still would have been a balance of more than $75,000,000,000.

The world today is paying the price for the waste and carnage of 1914-1918 in international economic bankruptcy and physical suffering.

When statesmen attain that state of mental edvancement which permits of their recognition of the advantages of wordwide peace instead of conflict then the lot of the individual will be bettered beyond conception. If ths $400,000,000,000 which was spent for war had been for peacetime pursuits there would be no need today for the CWA, PWA, RWA,HOLC and myriad other crypically-initialed governmental agencies the purpose of which is to bring relief to the millions for whom the world was made safe- presumably.

THE OTHER SIDE OF IT.
(St. Lonls Co. Independent).

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for president at ths last election, has unearthed what he calls the "Forgotten man." He mada a trip through the cotton growing belt of Arkansas recently and found the tenant farmers in a deplorable state, dus to the taking out of production of one-third of the cotton growing lands. This writer made a trip through the cotton belt of Missouri and Arkansas a few years ago and wa can appreciate the condition that Mr. Thomas found. A part of these states known as the "Black Belt" has land that is very fine for cotton growing. Other parts of the state of Arkansas are not so good for this ataple but a lot of it, especially the river lands in the eastern half are planted to this staple.

These lands are owned in large acreage groups. The owner leases a few acres to a negro family. The only equipment the negro needs is a mule. The planter grub stakes the negro; i. e. he established a credit for him at the local store in the village. When the crop is harvested they settle up. Usually the negro is in debt but that's discounted when the contract was made. The negro is happy and tha planter is satisfied. That's the way much of the cotton has been raised since the Civil War broke up the master and slave compact.

Tha AAA has brought about the abandoning of one-third of the cotton lands and that means that one-third of these negroes have been set out on a limh without any means of subsistence. The findings of Mr. Thomas are deplorable. Summing it all up he says, "We have read in history books of the cruelties of the British before the revolution, and of other cruelties that seemed unpardonable, bnt I know of nothing comparable with the system under which these people live."—The Diamond Drill.

CRAZY METHODS
Union Advocate

Last year the federal government paid out millions of dollars to slaughter beby pigs because there were too many pigs. Millions were peid to the cotton growers to destroy millions of pounds of cotton because there was too much cotton. And now another crazy proposal has been mada to further stabilize production on the basis of starvation.

It appears there is too much milk to feed the thousands of hungry babies and children. So Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture has advised the farmers of America to feed less milk-producing food to their dairy cows. And another master mind in Washington, ons C. C. Davis of the agricultural adjustment administration, proposes to put a "processing tax" on dairy products to curtail production. He also proposes to set aside $5,000,000 to feed the hungry babies and another $5,000,000 to buy scrub or culled cows to be sent to the poor white trash in the eouth, the starving share-croppers and tenant farmers who have been legislated out of a livelihood through ths cotton destroying policies of the AAA.

Slaughtering several million baby pigs did not benefit the farmers. Turning under every third row of cotton did not maks overalls, shirts or othsr clothing more available to those who need clothing. But it did throw hundreds of thousands of shara croppers into poverty and pauperism. Feeding less feed to dairy cows, culling nonproductiva cows from the dairy herds and sending them down south, imposing high processing taxes on dairy products—nona of these crazy methods can solve or will solve the problem of over-production and under-consumption.

When the wheels of industry turn with manpower at living wages, then there will be no surplus, because there will be purchasing power to absorb the products of tha farm. Labor cannot afford to pay a higher price for ths products of agriculture until the wages of labor are reased in due proportion. And the man in the breadline cannot buy until he is taken from the breadline and given a job at a decent wage.

Some day these fool economists will recognize the fact that overprodnction in a nation of hungry people is an absolnte impossibility. Thers can be no overproduction nf food, fuel nr clothing as long as there are millions in want nf the necessities of life. And there never will ba a ablance between production and consumption until every worker has his purchasing power returned to him through a legitimate job which pays a wage to austain tha American standard of living.

Farmer-Labor Platform

Adopted at the State Convention March 27 and 28 1934

PREAMBLE

The Farmer-Labor party of Minnesota recognizes that the United States has the most wonderful resources, great factories, machinery of production, steam power and electric power and millions of capable workers and farmers ready and able to produce food, clothing and shelter in great abundance for all. At this time when all of us could live in prosperity and happiness we find that there are millions of working men and women in poverty, want and degradation and that there are also hundreds of thousands of farmers, business and profesional people who have become poverty-tricken and bankrupt and millions of people in all walks of life are compelled to eat the bread of charity. Palliative measures will continue to fail. Only a complete reorganization of our social structure into a co-operative commonwealth will bring economic security and prevent a prolonged period of further suffering among the people.

We, therefore, declare that capitalism has failed and immediate steps must be taken by the people to abolish capitalism in a peaceful and lawful manner and that a new sane and just society must be established; a system where all the natural resources, machinery of production, transportation and comunication shall all be owned by the government and operated democratically for the benefit of all the people and not for the benefit of the few.

In order to bring about this cooperative commonwealth and also for the purpose of adopting legislation for the immediate relief of the people, the farmer-labor party adopts as its platform the following proposals:

AGRICULTURE— Adequate legislation to insure security of tenure on the land for those who farm it. To this end we further demand that Congress pass the Frazier Bill for refinancing agricultural loans and the Swank-Thomas Bill or other legislation to give agriculture a price based upon the cost of production.

Exemption from taxation of homesteads in the city and on the farms to the value of $4,000.00.

Legislation extending the present moratorium two years from the date of expiration and that no action may be brought within the two years on any obligation secured by a mortgage.

MARKETING— The greatest problem of the farmer being to find markets for their products, we advocate building and maintaining adequate co-operative marketing and purchasing agencies in all the large industrial centers of the state, to be correlated by some state supervised central head.

INDUSTRIAL PROGRAM— To protect our citizens from exploitation thru industrial profits, we demand public ownership of all mines, waterpower, transportation, and communication, banks, packing plants, factories and all public utilities. Provided, that this shall not apply to bona-fide co-operatively owned and operated enterprises.

MONEY AND BANKING— Nationalization of banking with government monopoly of money and credit operated without profit.

Until we attain nationalization of banking, we advocate the establishment of a central state bank of deposit, to be wholly owned by the state of Minnesota.

That the bank act as the fiscal agent for the state in all matters.

Tht it be the only legal depository in Minnesota for all state funds or the funds of any subdivision of the state.

That it be permitted to purchase the securities of the U. S. government, the state of Minnesota, and other securities designated by law.

That it be permitted to loan money to correspondent state banks and that it not be permitted to loan money to private enterprises.

That the deposits or loans to the Minnesota state banks be a prefered claim.

And that the deposits in the bank of Minnesota be guaranteed by the state.

The issue of money is a governmental function and all money should be issued directly by the government and made a legal tender in payment of all debts.

All money permitted by law to be iesued against the gold now in the United States treasury should be put in circulation by the payment of all government bonds due, or soon to become due, and for all public works constructed.

We declare our opposition to the issuance of interest-bearing bonds by the government.

MUNITIONS— We demand passage of the resolution now before the United States Senate calling for investigation of the munitious industry and we demand that the government take over such plants and operate them.

POWER POLICY— We pledge the people to submit an amendment to the construction to permit establishment of the Ontario system of power development in the state. We will permit municipally owned power plants to sell power freely outside their limits.

EMPLOYMENT— The state to take over sufficient idle industrial plants to furnish employment for idle citizens and to distribute the products to the needy.

The immediate passage of a Minnesota construction act with full power to regulate hours and wages and carry on useful public projects.

SOCIAL INSURANCE— That all insurance including workmen's compensation, unemployment, accident, sickness, maternity, old age pension, fire, cyclone, hail and life insurance be taken over by the state and operated without profit.

CONSERVATION— An intelligent and comprehensive plan for the conservation of the natural moisture of the state with arrangements made to retain the greatest possible benefits of the snow and rainfall of the state and restoration as far as practicable of the lake and river levels, and the encouragement of similar projects in the adjacent states. Also that state lands containing pest be withdrawn from sale.

REFORESTATION— Reforestation to restore and protect the timber wealth and to prevent and retard erosion.

ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY— Ratification of the treaty with Canada affecting the construction of the St. Lawrence-Great Lakes waterway.

EDUCATION— Fullest educational opportunities for all, with security of tenure and freedom of expression to teachers. Textbooks to be published by the state and free to all the students. Military training at all educational institutions supported wholly or in part by state funds to be optional.

TAXATION— Restoration of unearned wealth to the community and state by graduated taxes effectively administered on large incomes, gifts and inheritances.

SOLDIERS BONUS— Immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus by treasury notes, and repeal of the national Economy Act.

TAX EXEMPT SECURITIES— We oppose the issuance of tax exempt securities.

ELECTIONS— All candidates for the state legislature to be elected with party designation.

CONSUMERS COOPERATIVES— The powers of government to allow consumers to freely organize on a co-operative basis, unrestricted by discriminatory laws.

LEADERS CITE BIG BUSINESS UPTURN

Jesse Jones, Myron C. Taylor and Alfred P. Sloan all Report Gains.

New York—The conviction that the country is definitely emerging from the depression was spread upon the record by heads of two of the country's biggest industrial units, and by the chief of the government's most powerful financing agency.

Myron C. Teylor, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, told stockholders at their annual meeting in Hoboken that revival was no longer a matter of opinion, but a fact.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors corporation, while critical of some aspects of the recovery program, said in his annual report to stockholders industrial recovery is under way with an irresistible force.

Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, in an interview in Washington, pointed to the now definite expectation that the RFC will run $500,000,000 under budget estimates for the fiscal year ending in June, as clear evidence of better conditions.

Jones said bankers now were trying to make loans, money could be borrowed through normal channels more easily, and demands for government support was less than anticipated. He said he looked for further business pickup after congress adjourned.

The statements of these three chieftains of business and finance were viewed in Wall street as distinctly significant at this time, inasmuch as April is often the month in which the peek of the spring business upturn is reached.

In the meantime, the movement to raise wages, and where possible reduce working hours, is spreading. Prices in some lines, notably steel and automobiles, are rising. Business observers point out a slow rise in prices may prompt more active consumer buying, similar to that which took place before the NRA blanket code went into effect last summer. Sharp, sudden increases such as might cause a buyers' strike, it is expected, will be avoided.

Insull Arrested, Will Be Returned.

Instabul, Turkey—Indications point to the fact that Samuel Insull has finally been collared by the United States government, after a long and exciting chase.

Turkish officias announced his arrest, as the steel arm of the strong Kemalist regime blocked the passage of the steamer Meiotis opposite the mouth of the famous Golden Horn, and the held the ship's lone passenger a virtual prisoner while the government awaited the receipt of documents from Washington.

Insull is wanted in Chicago to stand trial for the collapse of his vast business enterprise.

Martin Insull, his brother, who fled to Canada, returned to Chicago where he posted a $50,000 bond in connection with the charges against him of embezzling $344,000 and $20,000 from treasuries of the Middlewest Utilities Company and the Mississippi Valley utilities Investment Company.

Germany Agrees to Token Payment.

Washington—The German government agreed to make a token payment of approximately $1,250,000 on its debt of approximately $50,000,000 due the United States treasury. Payments due were on account of mixed claims payments and interest, and the costs of the American army of occupation in Germany, which were postponed by the Hoover moratorium agreement of 1930.

Corn Loan Period Is Pushed Ahead.

Washington—The time for making corn loans in ten states has been extended from April 1 to May 1, the Commodity Credit corporation announced at Washington. States in which this applies are Colorado, Illinoise, Indiena, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Minnesota, Nebraska, Ohio and South Dakota.

Girl Asleep 2 Years Has 29th Birthday

Chicago—To Patricia Maguire of Oak Park the fact that her twenty-ninth birthday arrived had no significance. Miss Maguire remained in the grip of a form of sleeping sickness which since February 21, 1932, has kept her bedridden in a stupor.

Sales Tax Starts in West Virginia.

Charleston, W. Va.—Two cents out of every dollar spent in West Virginia for the next 15 months will go to the state as a consumers' sales tax. The pennies will be collected by merchants to provide $6,500,000 for the schools.

So. Dak. Coal Mines to Remain Closed

Pierre, S. D.—Charles Brady of Buffalo, state coal mine commissioner, said here that the state-owned mine at Haynes, N. D., and the leased mine at Firesteel will remain closed

Olso Tax Sustained by Supreme Court

Washington—The Washington state tax of 15 cents a pound on oleomargarine was sustained by the Supreme Court. Its validity was challenged by the firm of A. Magnano Company of Seattle.

Many Named Washington

There are 28 cities or towns, 32 counties and one state within the United States bearing the name Washington.

The state, up to this writing has realized over a half a million dollars from liquor tax. The proceeds from this tax are to be used in carrying out Governor Olson's $5,000,000 relief bill program. This probably is disappointing to some of the opponents of the relief measure, who predicted that the liquor tax would not be of sufficient amount to carry the relief law.

Canada Likes Birds

Ten bird sanctuaries in Canada shelter more than 100,000 birds, including nesting eiders, puffins, black ducks, shorebirds, gulls, and terns.

Hibbing—The Minneapolis hockey team won the third straight game and the title in the playoff for the Central League championship here by a score of 4 to 3.

St. Paul—Time for obtaining federal loans on sealed corn stored and sealed in farm cribs has been extended by the Commodities Credit Corporation to May 1.

St. Paul—April first was the deadline for purchasing car and drivers' licenses in Minnesota and heavy penalties will be levied on all those operating a car without them.

Lake Crystal—Through aid extended by the debt adjustment board of Blue Earth county, several farmers and their families will be able to remain on their farms for another year.

Owatonna—Mrs. Katherine Pike, 80-year-old recluse who died here March 10, left an estate valued at $240,000. She had lived in self-imposed poverty here for 30 years, coming from New York after her husband died.

St. Paul—Through an emergency plan advocated by Gov. Floyd B. Olson, Minnesota will advance seed grain, feed and gasoline fuel to thousands of farmers in the drouth regions of the state so there will be no delay in spring planting of crops.

Minneapolis—A total of $8,309,707 was paid to northwest farmers in February in compensation for reducing wheat acreage in 1934, while the entire payment since the plan went into effect has amounted to $14,043,318, the Federal Reserve bank says in its monthly review.

Ortonville—Shipments of feed for drought relief in Big Stone county have been coming in in greater quantities during the past week. Within a two-day period, 27 carloads of grain and hay were received and distributed to the drought stricken farmers throughout the county.

Detroit Lakes—Pleading guilty to charges of burglary in connection with theft of 200 bushels of grain from the farm of John Olond, near here, Herbert Wall, of Hamden township, was sentenced by District Judge Roeser to serve one to five years in Stillwater penitentiary.

St. Paul—John Dillinger, escaped desperado, shot it out with police who attempted to capture him in an apartment here. Machine-gun bullets whistled past the law as the gangster made his escape. John Hamilton, veteran member of the gang and a woman companion were with the outlaw.

Fort Snelling—In an effort to continue the unemployment relief work of the CCC (civil conservation camps) in Minnesota this summer, 3,100 new men will be enrolled during the two weeks period beginning April 1, authorities in charge of the work at Fort Snelling announced. These 3,100 men will take the places of those who are retiring from the camps.

Minneapolis—The local chapter of the Izaak Walton league reproduced in miniature, at the Sportmen's show, their bass pond where last year the largest number of fingerlings were raised in the history of the local league. Two hundred thousand, eight hundred bass were taken from the pond in 1933, half of which were planted in lakes outside Hennepin county.

Minneapolis—Police received hundreds of telephone calls on April 1st in regard to a form hanging from one of the railroad bridges over the Mississippi river. Squad cars, fire trucks, ambulances and the morgue wagon rushed to the scene to find that a prankster had stuffed a suit with straw and hung it from the bridge. Due to ice and snow it was impossible to remove it and calls continued to pour in all day from passing motorists.

Hastings—Judge Albert Schaller, a member of the Minnesota bar for more than half a century, former justice of the Minnesota Supreme Court and a state senator for more than 20 years, died here at the age of 78 years. Active in democratic circles of this state throughout his career, Judge Schaller was a resident of Minnesota since this section was still a northwest territory. Born in Chicago, he came with his parents to Hastings on July 4, 1856. Judge Schaller grew up in Hastings, attended school there and later received training in France and Germany. He was a graduate of the St. Louis Law School, and was admitted to the bar in Minnesota in 1879. That same year he began public service, first as Dakota county attorney. Later he became Hastings city attorney, and subsequently was sent to the state senate 20 consecutive terms.

Minneapolis—Ten young men, University of Minnesota students who have been living comfortably on $25 a month apiece without being obliged to do any housework, are looking forward to the coming of warm weather when they expect to cut about 10 per cent from their expenses. The 10 students are the residents of the first men's co-operative cottage at the university, a private enterprise that has no connection with the university management, and has no rules except those of the university householders organization.

St. Paul—Minnesota's new state income tax was upheld by the Minnesota Supreme Court in a unanimous decision which rejects all the arguments raised against its constitutionality. The decision ends lengthy debate as to validity of the law, and makes the new tax immediately due. Taxpayers who have not yet filed a return under the new law have until April 15 in which to make a return and pay the first half of the tax.

Duluth—Plans for the establishment of a subsistance homestead project near Duluth were announced in Washington by Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes. The Federal Subsistance Homesteads Corporation will extend a loan of $104,000. Fifty-two individual homesteads of 5 to 10 acres each will be included in the project, which will be located approximately seven miles from the center of Duluth, near the highway to Virginia.

Minneapolis — More than 3,000 names to petitions asking presidential clemency for Wilbur B. Foshay and Henry H. Henley, convicted of using the mails to defraud, have been obtained so far, friends said. Another petition circulated among persons who lost investments in the Foshay enterprises has been signed by owners of $100,000 worth of stock. Foshay and Henley are under sentence up to 15 years in federal prison. They must surrender in two weeks.

St. Paul—A campaign for enforcement of the state drivers' license law, in which the state highway department and all Minnesota police officers have been asked to co-operate, will start April 1, Gil Carmichael, director of the license bureau, said. Although more than 800,000 licenses have been issued, between 200,000 and 300,000 drivers still are without licenses. According to the law, which became effective March 1, driving without a license is a misdemeanor punishable by a 90-day jail sentence or a fine of $100.

First Diamonds

Diamonds were discovered first in South Africa in 1867.

Silver Lake—All rural mail routes of Silver Lake will be consolidated after April 1.

Duluth—Three thousand persons attended the Duluth Symphony Orchestra's first concert of the season.

Kiester—A permanent Kiester township committee to supervise signing of corn-hog reduction loan contracts was made at a meeting here.

Lester Prairie—The six-footed hog, owned by Arnold Klaistermeier here, gave birth to 10 pigs. Three of the little porkers also have extra legs.

Anoka—A crew of ten CWA workers is at work on the Anoka armory, completely redecorating the interior, installing a new heating unit and making improvements.

Minneapolis—The annual automobile show at the auditorium attracted visitors from 13 states. Approximately 1500 new cars were ordered from dealers represented at the show.

Minneapolis—Minneapolis' new postoffice will be completed in July, more than three months ahead of schedule, Postmaster W. C. Robertson announced following a conference with contractors' representatives.

Mound—Our Lady of the Lake Catholic church will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of its founding at a special midsummer ceremony July 8, the Rev. Francis Jeger, who held first mass in the church in 1909, announced.

Minneapolis — More than seven-eighths of the Minnesota corn-hog farmers who were expected to sign corn-hog contracts and co-operate with the government in its crop reduction program, have done so, a compilation of records by Professor Andrew Bose, in charge of the state campaign, reveals.

The amount has grown since 1923, being dividend checks issued to depositors of closed banks whom the banking department has been unable to locate.

Bayport—Dennis W. Byrne, 44, publisher of the Bayport Herald, and Karl K. Krieeel, 25, editor, were killed when their automobile ran down an embankment here. Byrne had taken over management of the Herald March 1. Before that he operated the Herald-Standard at Wabasha and a weekly publication at Shakopee.

Minneapolis—The northwest during February showed gains in the prices paid the farmer for his products and in the business done by city department and country stores, the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank said in its preliminary summary of business and agricultural conditions in the Ninth Federal Reserve District.

Rochester—Court action in connection with Rochester's municipal election recently appears likely following charges of tampering with a ballot box in one precinct. Frank G. Newhouse, defeated by Burt Elliott Eaton, incumbent, for the municipal judgeship, conferred with Heyes Dansingburg, Olmsted county attorney, concerning the alleged irregularities.

Bemidji—Government agents raided several towns in this vicinity which, under an old treaty, barred sale of intoxicants on Indian territory. Eight men were arrested and charged with possession of liquor for sale in half a dozen raids at Walker and LaPorte. Towns in the dry territory also are Hackensack, Backus, Remer, Longville, Dear River, Akeley, Cass Lake, Federal Dam and Boy River.

Stillwater—Characterizing Minnesota as one of the easiest states in the union in which to stage a successful kidnaping, John J. Sullivan, warden of Stillwater penitentiary, offered the new state crime commission a method of combatting crimes of abduction. The warden's talk was the feature of the opening session of the new crime commission, named by the State Bar Association, in the house chamber of the state capitol in St. Paul.

Moorhead—A threatened war between Minnesota and North Dakota over the matter of truck regulations between the two states, seems averted following hearings at Fargo and Moorhead attended by representatives of the railroad and warehouse commissions of the two states. Frank W. Matson and Knud Wefald, Minnesota commissioners, announced that reports of the war were exaggerated and that the difficulties are on the way to being ironed out.

St. Paul—Farmers in 43 Minnesota counties have received about 1,350 carloads of feed grains from the federal relief administration and will get some 300 more, T. A. Forsberg, state drouth relief director, said. Of the total about 1,000 cars consist of grain distributed on orders from Washington and paid for from the original appropriation of last December. Minnesota was alloted around 1,100 cars under this grant and the remaining 100 cars will be ordered out for shipment at once.

Willmar—Aroused over the torture robbery of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pecka, aged residents of Lake Lillian, citizens of Lake Lillian township approved a reward of $100 for information of the robber at the annual township election. Breaking down the door of the 5-year-old couple's farm home in the dead of night, the invader fired several times to intimidate his victims, built a fire on the floor to bring Mr. and Mrs. Pecka out of hiding in the attic and slugged them into unconsciousness when they revealed only $5.

St. Cloud—The largest collection of delinquent taxes in recent years was reported by the office of County Auditor Nicholas Thomey. The total amount collected was $84,481.98, and taxes were paid as far back as 1914.

St. Paul—Minnesota's new state income tax was upheld by the Minnesota Supreme Court in a unanimous decision which rejects all the arguments raised against its constitutionality. The decision ends lengthy debate as to validity of the law, and makes the new tax immediately due. Taxpayers who have not yet filed a return under the new law have until April 15 in which to make a return and pay the first half of the tax.

Duluth—Plans for the establishment of a subsistence homestead project near Duluth were announced in Washington by Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes. The Federal Subsistence Homesteads Corporation will extend a loan of $104,000. Fifty-two individual homesteads of 5 to 10 acres each will be included in the project, which will be located approximately seven miles from the center of Duluth, near the highway to Virginia.

Minneapolis — More than 3,000 names to petitions asking presidential clemency for Wilbur B. Foshey and Henry H. Henley, convicted of using the mails to defraud, have been obtained so far, friends said. Another petition circulated among persons who lost investments in the Foshay enterprises has been signed by owners of $100,000 worth of stock. Foshay and Henley are under sentence up to 15 years in federal prison. They must surrender in two weeks.

St. Paul—A campaign for enforcement of the state drivers' license law, in which the state highway department and all Minnesota police officers have been asked to co-operate, will start April 1, Gil Carmichael, director of the license bureau, said. Although more than 800,000 licenses have been issued, between 200,000 and 300,000 drivers still are without licenses. According to the law, which became effective March 1, driving without a license is a misdemeanor punishable by a 90-day jail sentence or a fine of $100.

First Diamonds

Diamonds were discovered first in South Africa in 1867.

Silver Lake—All rural mail routes of Silver Lake will be consolidated after April 1.

Duluth—Three thousand persons attended the Duluth Symphony Orchestra's first concert of the season.

Kiester—A permanent Kiester township committee to supervise signing of corn-hog reduction loan contracts was made at a meeting here.

Lester Prairie—The six-footed hog, owned by Arnold Klaistermeier here, gave birth to 10 pigs. Three of the little porkers also have extra legs.

Anoka—A crew of ten CWA workers is at work on the Anoka armory, completely redecorating the interior, installing a new heating unit and making improvements.

Minneapolis—The annual automobile show at the auditorium attracted visitors from 13 states. Approximately 1500 new cars were ordered from dealers represented at the show.

Minneapolis—Minneapolis' new postoffice will be completed in July, more than three months ahead of schedule, Postmaster W. C. Robertson announced following a conference with contractors' representatives.

Mound—Our Lady of the Lake Catholic church will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of its founding at a special midsummer ceremony July 8, the Rev. Francis Jager, who held first mass in the church in 1909, announced.

Minneapolis — More than seven-eighths of the Minnesota corn-hog farmers who were expected to sign corn-hog contracts and co-operate with the government in its crop reduction program, have done so, a compilation of records by Professor Andrew Boss, in charge of the state campaign, reveals.

St. Paul—The state banking department is holding $158,880.45 in trust waiting for several thousand depositors of closed state banks in Minnesota to call for it. The amount has grown since 1923, being dividend checks issued to depositors of closed banks whom the banking department has been unable to locate.

Bayport—Dennis W. Byrne, 44, publisher of the Bayport Herald, and Karl K. Kriesel, 26, editor, were killed when their automobile ran down an embankment here. Byrne had taken over management of the Herald March 1. Before that he operated the Herald-Standard at Wabasha and a weekly publication at Shakopee.

Minneapolis—The northwest during February showed gains in the prices paid the farmer for his products and in the busines done by city department and country stores, the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank said in its preliminary summary of business and agricultural conditions in the Ninth Federal Reserve District.

Rochester—Court action in connection with Rochester's municipal election recently appears likely following charges of tampering with a ballot box in one precinct. Frank G. Newhouse, defeated by Burt Elliott Eaton, incumbent, for the municipal judgeship, conferred with Hayes Dansingburg, Olmsted county attorney, concerning the alleged irregularities.

Bemidji—Government agents raided several towns in this vicinity which, under an old treaty, barred sale of intoxicants on Indian territory. Eight men were arrested and charged with possession of liquor for sale in half a dozen raids at Walker and LaPorte. Towns in the dry territory also are Hackensack, Backus, Remer, Longville, Deer River, Akeley, Cass Lake, Federal Dam and Boy River.

Stillwater—Characterizing Minnesota as one of the easiest states in the union in which to stage a successful kidnaping, John J. Sullivan, warden of Stillwater penitentiary, offered the new state crime commission a method of combatting crimes of abduction. The warden's talk was the feature of the opening session of the new crime commission, named by the State Bar Association, in the house chamber of the state capitol in St. Paul.

Moorhead—A threatened war between Minnesota and North Dakota over the matter of truck regulations between the two states, seems averted following hearings at Fargo and Moorhead attended by representatives of the railroad and warehouse commissions of the two states. Frank W. Matson and Knud Wefald, Minnesota commissioners, announced that reports of the war were exaggerated and that the difficulties are on the way to being ironed out.

St. Paul—Farmers in 43 Minnesota counties have received about 1,350 carloads of feed grains from the federal relief administration and will get some 300 more, T. A. Forsberg, state drouth relief director, said. Of the total about 1,000 cars consist of grain distributed on orders from Washington and paid for from the original appropriation of last December. Minnesota was alloted around 1,100 cars under this grant and the remaining 100 cars will be ordered out for shipment at once.

Willmar—Aroused over the torture robbery of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pecka, aged residents of Lake Lillian, citizens of Lake Lillian township approved a reward of $100 for information of the robber at the annual township election. Breaking down the door of the 5-year-old couple's farm home in the dead of night, the invader fired several times to intimidate his victims, built a fire on the floor to bring Mr. and Mrs. Pecka out of hiding in the attic and slugged them into unconsciousness when they revealed only $5.

Administration Meets Major Defeat on Waterway Project

Passage of the Lundeen motion to bring the so-called "bonus bill" before the House; victory of the bill itself in the House; Senate on veterans and federal employees' amendements to the Independent Office Appropriation Bill; unanimous report of the House Labor Committee for the Connery Thirty-Hour Week Bill, to which the Administration is opposed; and defeat of the St. Lawrence Waterway Tready—all within the space of a few days, were clear indications that the Roosevelt Administration is being forced to loosen its strangle-hold on the large Democratic majority in Congress. The catch-phrase, "This is an emergency," which whipped members into line last session, no longer casts its spell over members of Congress.

No Minnesota Representative spoke against the Adjusted Service Certificate Bill on March 12 except Republican Theodore Christianson. The other eight voted for the bill and for the Lundeen motion to bring the bill before the House. Senate action has not yet been determined, but veterans of America are offering their Senators plenty of suggestions by letter and wire.

The Minnesota Kaleidoscope of 1933

Gives you first hand information of the doings of the 48th session of the legislature of Minnesota.

Read the following indorsement by the Farmer-Labor Leader:

The book shows the background of most of the controversies which arose over the income tax proposal, the unemployment insurance law. the chain store tax and other measures It points out the weaknesses of certain groups in both House and Senate, and dissects the political intrigues with considerable skill. All in all; it is an excellent record to be used in the 1934 campaign and everyone interested in the political developments in the state should hav a copy for reference purposes.

The Tree of Jesse

The tree of Jesse is a tree representing the genealogy of Christ from the root of Jesse, used in churches in the Middle ages as a decoration of windows or walls or in the form of large branched candlesticks. Sometimes the tree is represented as rising from the body of Jesse, who is shown recumbent.

FRISBIE ASKS CONSTRUCTIVE WORKS BE TAKEN UP BY RWA

A breathing spell was granted to CWA and the PWA last Thursday which was welcomed by all administ.a tion heads as they have never been quite able to reconcile the engineering and relief viewpoints and it has left them up in the air on a number of occasions says Mr. Frisbie. The PWA ruling regarding skilled labor (if not obtainable from relief roles to be employed by political subdivision) is one of those occasions according to Mr. Frisbie as some of the cities and counties are financially a.e to do so and others are not.

Engineers from all over the country have been requested to submit projects for flood control, soil erosion, water and power developments. The experience has been, says Mr. Frisbie, that those who have worth while project and who have gone out and fought for them, have, in the long run, been successful. These projects are what we are now fighting for in the state of Minnesotn and in our water diversion plan in northwestern Minnesota. Public backing is necessary and our next move, says the district engineer, is to go out and sell the idea to the public and once the feasibility and the practical nature of the program is understood by the public there will be no stopping.

The big incentive for this program has been employment and approximately 16 million unemployed individuals crystallized a single demand for work which we gave them in an emergency but that work was basically inefficient. This is not what the unemployed worker wanted and his attitude will eventuelly prevail in the determination of the governments's program and it will swing from relief work to constructive employment. The source of that employment will be determined by engineers; our data should be complied, our projects formulated when the swing is completed says Frisbie.

Pennington County Students Win Honors at NW School

Exellent records were made by students from Pennington county in scholarship and extra curricular activities during the school year which closed on March 29. Special recognition was given students for outstanding achievements at the awards assembly and other meetings held during Commencement week. Students making outstanding records who received recognition last week were listed by Acting Superintendent T. M. McCall as follows:

Pearl Hansen, Thief River Falls, class basketball; Laura Hensen, Thief River Falls, Caleb Dorr scholarship for junior girl showing greatest progress and with highest scholastic standing; Morris Engelstad, Thief River Falls, won a gold "A" for work in debating, and was elected by his class as assistant business manager for the 1935 school annual. Harold Nebben of Goodridge won first prize in the extemporaneous speaking contest. James Weckwerth, Hazel, tied for first honors in scholastic standing among the freshman boys. Clarence Weckwerth, Hazel, a veteran in basketball and football, won the coveted LaVoi-Widseth gold medal awarded annually to the sport man with the highest scholastic standing.

CAMPAIGN STARTED AGAINST DRIVING WITHOUT LICENSE

A state-wide campeign for the enforcement of the drivers license law is now under way, according to a bulletin from the state highway department. All peace officer have been asked to cooperate in enforcing the measure.

More than 800,000 licenses have been issned, bnt it is estimated that there are still many thousands of drivers who have neglected to apply for their driver permits.

About 3,000 licenses are being held by the drivers license bureau of the highway department in St. Paul because applications were improperly made out, and those persons who made application but have not received their licenses should communicate immediately with the bureau.

Every driver must have an individual license, and must carry it with him at all times. Thos who drive without license are subject to a fin. or a jail sentence.

THE BURDEN OF THE SALES TAX

"A one per cent tax on retail sales, axempting food, such as that now levied in New York state, means taking $2.74 per $1,000 from the thousand-dollar-a-year laborer and 8 cents per $1,000 from the multi-millionaire. This means that the former is paying a sales tax in this state that is 34 times heavier proportionately than that which the latter is paying.

"Tha discrepancy in the burden of the sales tax becomes much more marked when food is included. The burden of a sales tax that includes food is 60 times heavier on each dollar of the scrubwoman's wages than on each dollar of tha multi-millionaire's income." —from Where the Sales Tax Falls, by Mabel L. Walker.

MINNESOTA LEADS NATION IN ROAD WORK COMPLETION

Minnesota leads all other states in the Union in amount of state road work which has been completed with the emergency allotment of Federal highway funds made available last fall.

This is shown in reports of the U. S. Bureau of Public roads at Washington received by N. W. Elsberg, Minnesota highway commissioner, says a highway department bulletin.

The Washington report also shows that Minnesota ranks first in the nation in the number of individual projects which have been finished. Minnesota has completed $1,901,000 of the work begun last year with emergency Federal highway funds. It has finished 86 seperete projects. Utah ranks next to Minnesota in amount of work completed, its figure being $1,375,000, but this money was concentrated on only 32 projects.

Minnesota received a Federal allotment of $10,600,000 last fall for 1933 and 1934 road construction to aid employment. About $5,600,000 of this was obligated on projects before the close of 1933, and most of the balance is now under contract. By May 10, the highway depertment will heve 90 pe cent of its Federal funds under contract or obligated, Mr. Elsberg said.

"Practically all of the Federal allotment will be spent by early fall," he explained. "After that highway construction on the state trunk system will be almost at a standstill unless eddiional aid is received from the Federal government.

Sjogren Honored at Celebration by His Congregation

What was announced to be a Lenton service at the Augustana Lutheran Church, turned out to be a surprise reception, the occasion being the birthday anniversary of the Pastor, Rev. H. L. Sjogren

The congregation had gathered in large numbers and after the brief Lenton meditation all were invited to the beautifully decorated church bassment where the good ladies had prepered a delightful lunch. Appropriete words of appreciation for the faithful work of the Pastor were given by Rev. Hermen Larson, Pres. of the Red River District, and by Mr. J. Johanson, who on behalf of the congregation presented the honored guest with a purse.

Good will and the spirit of warm friendliness existing between the Pastor and his people were menifest throughout the evening.

Crater In Lake Seen From Air

A new crater formed in the old lake bed on White island, off the coast of New Zealand, has been discovered by an aviation party. A large column of sulphurous smoke was issuing from it, the action of which was as violent as in the old crater, which has been active for several years. The island has undergone great change since the disastrous eruption in 1914, which caused the loss of a number of lives. What appeared from the air to be molten sulphur could be seen pouring over the ledge of the old landing and discoloring the sea for a great distance. The large gannet rockery, once busy, was deserted. The aviators report it was impossible to fly directly over the island owing to the sulphurous smoke. White island is 40 miles from Opotiki, New Zealand.

BIDS FOR FIRE ENGINE CALLED FOR BY COUNCIL

Assessor and Deputy Named at Meeting of City Council Tuesday Eve.

The city council, last Tuesday evening issued a call for bids on a new fire truck and also appointed an assessor for the coming two years A. M. Senstad was named assessor and was given the authority to appoint a deputy which he did later in the evening, naming George Werstlein. Both the assessor and his deputy will receive $300 each for the coming year when real estate and personal property will be checked.

Specifications for several alternative proposals on the bid for the fire truck were to be drawn up by W. W. Viebaha, city engineer. It was indicated by L. Hanson, fire chief, that the Firemen's Relief association may buy up city warrents to aid in the financing of the purchase, and the county auditor, Fowler, said that the county may be able to take up the county warrents, which are held by the city, sometime in June.

A permit was approved for Dr. L. R. Twete to remodel the store building that he now has his office in, and another building permit was granted to P. Jacobson to remodel his dwelling on fourth street and Arnold avenue, at an approximate cost of $400.

The amendment changing the ordinance that regulates the sale hours of soft drinks so that the sale would have no restrictions, was given its third and final reading as was the dry cleaners license ordinance.

The Thronson Motor Company was given permission to install a pump and gasoline tank next to its quarters on Knight Ave. and Third street.

Final payment on contracts for the auditorium equipment were authorized to the National School Equipment Company for the sum of $648.50 and to the Johnson Service company for the amount of $105.00. A band committee composed of W. L. Carlisle, chairman; S. P. Orwall; P. G. Pederson and Mr. Myhrum was named by P. O. Myhrum, council president.

ENGINEERS MEET HERE; DISCUSSED RWA PROJ. FRI.

Sven Nordling of State Water Conservation Dept. Talks On Diversion

At a meeting of the County Highway Engineers of District No. 3 called by the District Engineer and held in Thief River Falls on Friday April 6th: Mr. Sven Nordling, State Engineer, in charge of water and stream control to re-establish normal water levels in our lakes and streams advised the immediate re-sumbmission of projects on water control in ditches, streams lakes for District No. 3 and Koochiching Co., and also advised the formation of a project calling for a survey of the feasibility of diverting the flood waters from the Little Fork and Big Fork rivers into the Red Lake.

The strategic placing of Tripod timber dams to impond rainfall and snow waters in ditches so as to allow gradual seepage into the subsurface soils was recommended. These dams, built at the request of property owners, would be provided with automatic gates to control the flood peaks, and would be so constructed to enable removal of complete sections under extreme flood conditions.

Such a system of dams would make use of the ditches as an ideal storage reservoir to draw upon as necessity required. It would be of uncalcuable value to agricultural and timber land to return the subsurface water and would make possible reforestration in vast areas and prevent forest destruction by eliminating peat fires on thousands of acres in the Northwest part of the state.

According to Mr. Frisbie camps could be provided in many sections for efficiently carrying on of the work and used in connection with reforestation and would materially assist in the Federal and State Emergency Relief Program.

H. I. Frisbie states that under the new set up of RWA no person shall be employed in work divisions of less than fifty-four hours a month for unskilled labor or thirty hours a month for other labor. He further states that no labor will work less

65th Legislative Farmer-Labor Convention Sunday

The 65th Legislative convention called for next Sunday, April 15, at Oklee, Minnesota, according to H. Halland, secretary of the Pennington County Farmer-Labor Association. The 65th legislative district embraces three counties; Pennington, Red Lake, and Clearwater.

The convention is called for the purpose of endorsing candidates for state representatives and for state senator.

County Board Swamped With Applications For County Aid on Roads

Various parts of the county sent delegates to the county board meeting asking for additional county aid on roads and for new roads. County aid road work took up most of the time of the board for the first two days that they were in session and they were unable to get to the deciding of which road work should be undertaken with the limited funds that are available.

There is about $9000 for construction this year and the delegates asked for about 60½ miles of construction and a new bridge across the Red Lake river at Kratka, according to Mr. Fowler, county auditor. $5000 more is available but this was granted to the county from the state for the graveling of County Aid road number 24 for a five mile stretch east of Highlanding.

Roads asked for by the delegation include three sections in Silverton, three in Highlanding, three in Kratka and one each in Black River, Smiley North, and Rocksbury and also a number of small pieces of work.

Nelson Files For State Sen. From 65th District

L. A. Nelson, chairman of the Pennington County Bureau since its organization since its inception has filed as a candidate for State Senator of the 65th district according to a story in today's issue of the Thief River Falls Times. In conversation with a Forum representative yesterday Mr. Nelson stated that he has been urged by many of his friends to file, but would wait until after the 65th district Farmer-Labor convention had been held.

Employment Increase Noted by State NRS

A marked increase in the number of placements of workers with private employers is noted in the March report for the National Reemployment Service in Minnesota, issued today by Dreng Bjornaraa, State Director, St. Paul. These placements numbered 3,508 in March as compared with 1,543 the previous month and 1,919 in January. A total of 1,039 was made during the week ending March 31. The National Reemployment Service operates 88 offices outside of Hennepin and Ramsey counties and the city of Duluth.

In addition to the 3,508 persons put on jobs with private employers, 1,579 were placed on PWA projects, 6,542 with the CWA, and 5,839 with the RWA, making a total of 17,468 placements during March. This compares with a total of 11,488 in February and 23,326 in January. The RWA placements were made during the last two weeks of March in the counties of the drought area.

Placements on RWA projects were made by the National Reemployment Service from lists of relief registrants certified by the local relief offices.

The number of persons whose applications were in the active files of the National Reemployment Service April 1 was150,928. This included also those assigned to RWA work. This figure represents the number of persons who had signified to their local offices that they were actually look-

Minneapolis' Jobless Men Protest Against CWA Action- Say RWA is Forced Labor

More than 5,000 unemployed who formerly had jobs under CWA demonstrated at the meeting of the Board of Public Welfare Tuesday morning against the abolishing of CWA and the attempted establishment instead of RWA.

What has caused practically every outburst in the city hall, the failure or the refusal of I. S. Joseph to bend a little in meeting representatives of the unemployed, once again nearly precipitated serious trouble Tuesday morning.

Over the protest of the Central Labor Union and organizations of the unemployed the Welfare Board has for some months pursued a policy of barring the general public from its meetings. It has insisted that only a certain number of representatives of organizations might attend meetings.

It was the insistence of the letter of this rule that provoked trouble Tuesday.

Thousands of workers suddenly tobogganed from the CWA to the relief line, if they could get on, held meetings and appointed one representative from each CWA project to appear before the Welfare Board Tuesday morning and present demands. There were 23 in all.

Maintaining all were members of the United Relief Workers Association, Joseph who was presiding at the Board meeting refused admission to the 23. Who is there to deny that their request of one man to represent each CWA project was a most just and moderate one? That is, who is there except Joseph?

W. J. McGaughren, Farmer-Labor member of the Board, had recommended to Joseph that he open the doors and let in not only the committee but whomever the room would hold to hear read a report that Joseph and Kjorlaug were presenting. Joseph refused to yield. A policeman entered and informed the Board that the throng outside were giving the Board five minutes to let the committee in.

Joseph was adamant. Five minutes passed and the door crashed and the committee and the throng flowed in as the Welfare Board members exited hurriedly. It was only because the Police showed far more brains and courtesy than Joseph did that more serious trouble was averted.

Under RWA the rules are that only those on the relief shall obtain jobs, and then for not more than 24 hours a week, and if investigators decide a worker and his family can exsist on less work, they get less. Against this forced labor all workers are protesting. It is a deadly blow at standards of living for all who toil.

Sen. R. T. Buckler of Crookston Gets 9th Dist. F-L Endorsement for Congress

Strong Townley Faction Defeated After Three Hours of Balloting

All Candidates for Nomination Pledge Themselves to Support Endorsee

F-L., PLATFORM ENDORSED

Bridgeman of Bemidji Elected Chairman 2 Years; Berve Secretary

500 delegates, representatives from all of the fifteen counties comprising the ninth congressional district, gathered at the high school auditorium at Erskine last Saturday and battled valiently for almost seven hours to decide on the Farmer-Labor endorsee for Congressman. State Senator R. T. Buckler of Crookston secured the endorsement, but only after seven consecutive ballots had been cast and he had gained support in a greater degree than did A. C. Townley who held a commanding lead on the first ballot. However as the various "favorite sons" fell by the wayside he strengthened to stand with 311 votes to Townley's 278 on the final ballot.

Senator Bridgeman of Beltrami was selected convention chairman and H. O. Berve of this city convention secretary. A dispute arose over the seating of delegates from Becker and Otter Tail counties, when "rumper" delegations from these counties made their appearance and demanded that they be seated because they claimed to be Farmer-Laborites having voted the Farmer-Labor ticket at the last general election. The chairman appointed one delegate from each county to act as a credential committee to act onthe matter. After due deliberation they reported, recommending that all bona-fide members of the Farmer-Labor association be seated as delegates. The recommendation was opposed on the ground that all counties had held their county conventions and elected and instructed their delegates to this convention and that these instructions represented the majority view in such counties. The seating of other than accredited delegates would there fore tend to upset the wishes of the majorities as expressed in instructed delegations. The report was amended to the end that only accredited delegates should be seated and was passed.

Inter-Regional Debate Won by Grand Rapids From Lancaster Tues.

An inter-regional debate was held in the high school auditorium Tuesday night between Lancaster high school, champion of region 8, and Grand Rapids high school champ in region 7; in which meet Grand Rapids came out with first place. The question was. "resolved: That the U. S. should adopt the essential features of the British System of Radio Control and Operation," with Grand Rapids upholding the negative side of the question. Members of the winning team in the order in which they spoke were Mary Walters, Marion Latz, and Elmer Madsen. Lancaster, which upheld the affirmative, was represented by Dorothy Smith, Lucile Holmquist and Katherine Peterson.

Judge of the contest was Franklin H. Knower of the University of Minnesota.

Large Deisel Being Overhauled This Wk

The large diesel unit in the municipal power and light plant is receiving a general overhauling at this time while the spring freshet is ample to supply the city's electrical needs thru water power, Mr. Legvold, Superintendent of Water and Light stated yesterday.

The engine was shut down last Thursday and at this time the work of rejuvenating it and putting it in condition for another year's work is progressing rapidly. The unit was found to be in a good general condition, Mr. Legvold stated.

The water level has been fickle and drops somewhat in the early hours of the day the engineers state, but gains again each night as the days ditch flow reaches the river. The level is still over a foot below the crest of the dam.

WORKMENS ASS'N HEAR TALK BY C.W.A. ORGANIZER

Tells Men That They Should Organize and Demand Fed. Relief

A regular meeting of the Workman's Protective Association was held Monday night in the court house. Mr. Cartwright, an organizer of the Clearwater county CWA Protective Association was the principal speaker on the program during the discussion he pointed out that the Clearwater group was organized to seek additional CWA work for the members of their organization and to protest against reduction of CWA projects. Mr. Cartwright also gave information regarding the new relief plan the RWA and how is would effect the relief workers.

At an invitation by the chairman of the local group R. M. Aalbu gave some new light on the subject of relief when he asked whether or not the group had plans as to the future of their group; since they had not, Mr. Aalbu suggested that they support the Farmer-Labor platform as a means to the end of securing themselves for the future. He pointed out that no matter if they receive relief for the rest of their lives for a means of exsistance or not that even-

ENDORSED FOR CONGRESS

STATE SENATOR R. T. BUCKLER

TOOL SHEDS ARE BEING BUILT BY BRIDGE CREW

Sixty Men to be Hired Soon Through Local N. R. S. Office

Work on the new bridge to be constructed across the Red Lake river in this city was started during the week with the construction of the tool house and offices, under the supervision of the Minneapolis Bridge Company superintendent, S. Michalsky.

About sixty men will receive work through the NRS during the next few weeks on the basis of three five hour shifts a day according to Mr. Michalsky. Hours will be between 5 A. M. and 8 P. M. says the superintendent.

Condemnation proceedings are filed against 27 property owners on both sides of the river in order to secure the sites. Judge Brattland is expected to appoint three disinterested parties soon, to decide the amount of damage that the owners are to be allowed.

ALLOTS MILLION DROUTH, JOB AID

$850,000 Will Be Spent for Hay and Seed Loans—$200,000 for Urban Needs.

St. Paul—An appropriation of $1,050,000 for drouth, direct and work relief in Minnesota, $850,000 of which is to be used for relief of farmers and the remainder in urban localities, was voted by the Minnesota state executive council.

The council also decided to use funds from the $2,500,000 authorized by the last legislature to match federal funds for direct and work relief purposes as well as federal-state projects. The money is obtained through the sale of liquor tax certificates.

Of the money appropriated, $500,000 will be used for drouth relief, including approximately $250,000 in obligations already incurred. Hay will be provided farmers in the drouth territory with $250,000, which was an additional authorization. The remaining $300,000 will be used for direct relief funds under the federal relief program. The council was informed by Governor Olson, chairman, and A. T. Forsberg, head of the drouth relief division, that the federal government has liberalized its seed loan program which is being immediately carried out in the state.

Governor Olson said that under the federal program, two types of loans are extended to farmers. One is a collateral loan, similar to those obtained from banks while the other is an emergency loan, given farmers who cannot qualify for a collateral loan. Farmers are given seed loans even though they have not signed for crop reduction, the governor declared.

Credit has been liberalized also, Mr. Olson said, as a result of the hog and corn loans being extended by the government. The government loans up to $500 in collateral loans and $250 on emergency loans. Olson said it may be necessary later to appropriate funds to supply seed to farmers who are unable to get either type of loans from the federal government, but estimated this would not exceed $100,000.

State Treasurer Julius Schmahl, another member of the council, said he had been informed that sufficient seed could be obtained by the elevators in each town of the drouth section from farmers who have an ample supply of Minnesota seed on hand.

U. S. Ready to Supply Building Fund

Washington—The next of the major Roosevelt experiments in the struggle to push the New Deal to success was announced by Frank Walker, chairman of the President's national emergency council. The new plan contemplates the putting up of more hundreds of millions of federal money to finance housing projects all over the United States. New homes are to be built; old homes are to be repaired, remoled, spruced up. Mortgages are to be given on generous terms with interest low and payment permitted over 10 and 20 years.

Wheat as Feed Urged to Raise Price

Rome—A plan to use wheat in producing pork and beef instead of bread and thus help farmers get higher prices was approved by the world wheat advisory commission. Under the scheme, one of a comprehensive program to rehabilitate on the world's most important commodities, an international agreement to dénature low-quality wheat would be recommended to the various governments for their signature.

Norway Landslide Causes 50 Deaths.

Oslo, Norway—A huge crag weighing thousands of tons fell into the sea on Norway's west coast and caused mountainous waves that trapped sleeping residents of two villages, at least 50 of whom drowned. Many other inhabitants of the fishing hamlets, Tafjord and Fjoraa, on opposite sides of the Korsnaes fjord, are still missing. It was the worst disaster Norway has experienced in years.

Tax Decision Is Court Boomerang.

St. Paul—Like a boomerang returned the recent ruling of the Minnesota supreme court holding the state income tax legal, as Attorney General Harry H. Peterson filed an opinion that even judges of the state high court must pay an income tax.

COUNTY AGENT DISTRIBUAES AAA FARM RECORD BOOKS

"Start keeping your records now, is the urgent request going out with each AAA farm record book mailed this week from the county agent's office to all Pennington county farmers who have signed wheat or corn hog reduction contracts. 150 of these special farm record books have been allotted to this county by the agricultural Adjustment Administration. One of these books is being mailed to every wheat signer not having a corn-hog contract.

Any farmer who has been through the scramble of rounding up evidence to go with his application for a wheat or corn-hog contract will see at once the advantage of having records. Simple directions for keeping the records are given in the front of each book and a "starter" on filling in the facts has already been made in the county agent's office which has entered in each corn-hog signer's book the number of hogs on hand the day the contract was signed—a figure some men might find hard to remember.

Things farmers can do at once to start their records, says the county agent, include making the beginning inventory of crops and livestock, listing sales and purchases of crops or livestock made since the book should have been started, and starting the map of the farm showing the acreages of different fields and the cropping layout for the coming year.

Another very important step in starting right with these records is to provide a large envelope or a box in which to keep all sales slips, ware house receipts, thresherman's statements and other evidences of production or sale of basic commodities.

Naturally ,each farmer receiving one of these books will want to study through it carefully to see just what records it will enable him to keep and to read the instructions given about entries and when to make them.

The book provides simple forms for taking inventories of all basic farm commodities, such as corn, wheat, hogs and dairy cattle, for the beginning and end of the year; for keeping records of crops and livestock bought and sold; a crop production summary, showing the usage of the land, and a layout for a crop-map of the farm; crop processed for family food; use of contracted of rented acreage; and net income from production of crops.

Three outstanding advantages are open to every farmer who keeps up these farm record books as intended:

First. he will have the information that will be needed to prove compliance with whatever AAA contracts he has signed.

Second, he will have information necessary to obtain future contracts that may be offered under the AAA program.

Third, he will have production records to help in obtaining loans from the Farm Credit Administration.

In addition, each man's records will help him to improve his farming operations for an other year. This will be especially true since the records of other farmers in the county will be summarized to bring out significant totals and averages which will serve as guides to future production and as a base with which each man can compare his own records.

Any farmer who does not understand how to keep his record book, or who has any special problem along this line should call on the county agent for suggestions.

SIX YEAR SENTENCE FROM FIRST AUSTRIAN CIVIL TRIAL

New York--Fifty leaders of trade unions, and various peace organizations have called a conference of New York organizations to meet Friday, April 6, at the Town Hall, to work out a program of action against war.

700 CWA DELEGATES MARCH TO WASHINGTON; MEET HOPKINS

Washington, D. C.—"You are going back to the old game of seeing how few crusts can keep the people from starving," Norman Thomas, leading 700 delegates from organizations of CWA workers, told Federal Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins.

The CWA workers' delegates paraded down Pennsylvania avenue to Hopkins' office, and afterwards marched to the White House, where a committee interviewed Marvin McIntyre, one of the President's secretaries.

The delegates had collected pennies nickels and dimes from their fellow workers to get to Washington they told Hopkins, and one worker had been fired for helping take up the collection.

The groups represented were: From New York, Association of Civil Works Employees, Associated Office Professional Emergency Workera, Emergency Workers in Adult Education, Tenement House CWA Employees, Workers Unemployed Union, Westchester County Citizens Unemployed League; from New Jersey, Unemployed Union; from Reading, Pa., CWA Workers' Union; from Baltimore, Md., Peoples' Unemployed League.

David Lasser, spokesman for the New York delegates, told McIntyre, "We believe, after a careful study, that five billion dollars is necessary for the unemployed in the next few months. If the President does not deal with this situation, he is going to have strikes far greater than any he has on his hands now."

"Slow starvation on lunch basket relief" was foreseen by Thomas if the CWA expenditures are cut off in accordance with present administration plans.

Edward Welch, New York Negro worker, bitterly attacked discrimination against his race in the administration of CWA projects.

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT ORDERS PROTECTING ROADSIDE TREES

All grading contracts let by the state highway department hereafter will include requirements for conserving natural roadside beauty along the right-of-way, according to a highway department bulletin.

Particular attention will be given to preserving trees and shrubs. The old fashioned principle of clearing out every vestige of natural growth and leaving a bare, ugly scar across the face of nature wherever a highway is established is taboo from now on.

"Minnesota's future policy in improving state highways," said N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner, "will be to keep undisturbed, as far as possible, our natural scenic beauty. Desirable trees and bushes on the right-of-way will be carefully protected unless they interfere with traffic safety, drainage,or other essential road requirements.

"Where young trees have to be uprooted, they will if possible be transplanted in other spots under the direction of a landscape architect."

In case trees of unusual beauty and value are found to be too close to the roadway, engineers in charge may shift the line of the road slightly in order to save the trees, Mr. Elsberg said. This, however, will only be done in rare instances.

"Minnesota's natural beauty is finer than anything man can produce," Mr. Elsberg said. "Therefore we feel that the primary step to make our hikhways more attractive a to conserve nature's handiwork. This is also much more economical than to first destroy and later trying to restore beauty."

CONGRESSMAN TAKES FLOOR FOR FIRE SUFFERERS' BILL

Of great importance to Minnesota especially northern Minnesota, is the Fire Sufferers' Bill which was called up in the House on Wednesday and Thursday, April 4th and 5th. Mr. Shipstead is handling the matter in the Senate and Mr. Hoidale in the house. The cause of the fire sufferes was ably presented, but the Minnesota delegation were unable to carry the day, and on a standing vote, the bill was defeated by 99 to 123. However, there was no motion made to reconsider, and the bill may be brought up again at a later date when the fight will be renewed to reimburse these fire sufferers who still have approximately eight million dollars due.

On Monday, April 2nd, Congressman Ernest Lundeen (F-L), Minnesota, delivered the following remark on this bill in the House:

"I am very much interested in seeing that the fire sufferers of Northern Minnesota are compensated and paid in full for the terrible dameg they suffered many years ago. The fires were result of the Federal negligence, and the United States should pay the bill.

"Something has been done—that is true. But these people will never be satisfied until they are fully reimbursed. The government can never pay for the agony and suffering—mental and physical—which they endured.

"Many years ago, in the 1913 session of the Minnesota Legislature, I introduced a bill providing for the establishment of a fire, flood and disaster fund for the State of Minnesota. This was given a great deal if publicity in the Duluth Herald, News Tribune, and Press of Northern Minnesota. Had my plan at that time been carried out, this terrible injustice would have been righted instantly. At once and automaticlly the fund would have operated to aid these people.

"The Minnesota fire sufferers—many of them—have been set back a decade or two in their finances. Had money been available at once, they could have gone ahead with their plans for homes, farms and business. Due to this terrible loss, they were stranded and left without means to progress.

"Now is the time to act, and now is the time to do the square thing for these splendid citizens of the North Star State."

TARIFF STRUGGLE IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tha great Tarriff Bill passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 274 to 111. Congressman Lemke and Sinclair of North Dakota voted against this bill. The Minnesota delegation was badly split on this subject The bill is apt to receive amendments in the Senate and may come back in the House again soon—at least conference. It is anticipated that there will be a long drawn out debate on the tariff in the Senate. The problem is whether the President shall be given tremendous power to negociate with foreign countries without the consent of the Senate. Shall he be permitted in effect to wipe out the debts of Europe to the United States at the expense of American prosperity? There is a wide difference of opinion upon the subject. Many people believe the bill will spell good times for America, and others see dark disaster in the offing if the bill should pass, ing for a job. It compares with 137,639 on March 1, and 127,943 on February 1, prior to drastic CWA reductions. During the last month, the reemployment offices received 19,148 new applications, 12,937 registrations, 30,625 renewals, and 50,000 reinterviews. The renewals and interviews were especially numerous because the government requires that applications for work must be renewed each month in order that the registrant may be considered for a job. Nearly 47,000 new applications were taken in January and more than 10,000 in February. The total number of applications since the Service was started last September is approximately 218,000.

The registration total includes nearly 30,000 women, 21,549 of whom were in the active files April 1. Applications during March included 2,415 women as compared with 3,292 in February and 17,671 in January. Of the 17,468 placements in Mrach, 2,202 were women. The February placements included 1,016 women and those for January, 4,731. The following are the figurea with respect to applications during each of the last three months for men and women combined:

	January	February	March
Applications	46,663	10,457	9,489

LIVESTOCK PRICES ARE ABOVE YEAR AGO, BUT BELOW PARITY BASIS

Livestock prices are above a year ago in spite of the fact that receipts have shown a material increase, yet markets have a long climb to make before they will reach a parity basis, "says the weekly market bulletin issued by the Central Co-Operative selling agency of South St. Paul.

Cattle prices average 80 cents per cwt., higher than a year ago, but are $2.48 per cwt., below a parity basis, or a price equal to what farmers have to pay for commodities. Hog prices average 25 cents above a year ago, but are $4.65 below parity. Fat lambs are $3.50 per cwt., above a year ago and are within 41 cents per cwt., of equalling a parity basis.

The aim of the A.A.A. plan is to reach this parity bases, but thus far, little gain has been made in that direction. However, the program is now working and while it is a long-time program, efforts apparently are in the right direction.

Compared with a year ago, cattle prices average 15 per cent higher than a year ago. Hogs are 6 per cent higher, and the fat lambs show a 62 per cent gain over a year ago. These gains are encouraging in view of the fact that receipts of cattle at twenty markets thus far this year at approximately 2,250,000 head show an increase of nearly half a million head over the same period last year. Hog receipts at the same market total 6,600,000 head or an increase of 6 per cent over a year ago. Sheep and lamb receipts at 3,200,000 head are 16 per cent less than a year ago.

Compared with the five-year average, 20 market receipts thus far this year show a 7 per cent decrease in hogs, and 20 per cent decrease in sheep.

Average livestock prices, compared with the five-year average, indicate that cattle are 32 per cent lower, hogs are 42 per cent lower, and lambs alone are about steady.

APPENDICITIS DEATHS CREDITED TO NEGLECT

Never call abdominal pain "indigestion," says bulletin until acute condition is ruled out.

The vast majority of deaths from acute appendicitis are preventable and yet appendicitis deaths increase each year.

This state of affairs is commented upon in a bulletin issued today particularly bcause an abnormal number of cases of fatal appendicitis have been reported in 1933 among unemployed depression victims.

The tendency in hard times is to neglect what appear to be minor ailments. Among these is classed, by far too many people, abdominal pain The victim is likely to take a laxitive and dismiss the trouble as "indigestion." If the inflamation is acute it will not so dismissed, however, and each hour's delay in getting proper treatment lessens the chance for life. If the patient has actually taken a laxative, the additional movement induced in the bowel hastens rupture of the appendix with peritonitis and often death.

Most appendicitis deaths are the direct result of neglect in abdominal pain. It is economy to get help immediately in the case of pain anywhere in the abdomen, even far from the location of the appendix, if it continues more then a few hours. Never take a laxative in abdominal pain. Never give a child with the "tummy ache" a laxative unless appendicitis has been ruled out.

MODERN FARMING DEMANDS A JACK-OF-ALL-TRADES

Old-time farming was carried on with a horse-driven plow, a shovel and a hoe and but very few other tools. Now the market is fairly flodded with all sorts of appliances from the power driven tractor to the milking machine and farm pump.

The farmer has to have many of these things in order to succeed in his business. If he does not understand how they are built; or how they are operated; or how to take care of them and repair them: they soon get out of order. He also loses valuable time in taking them down to the village for repairs that he ought to learn to make at home.

In olden times there arose a word called a "dinger." A "dinger" is a man who knows a little and can do little with a great many things, but but not very much with any one of them as far as a high degree of skill is concerned. He is not a tradesman, but a jack-of-all-trades.

The farm boy who is looking forward to a successful career on the farm needs to become a jack-of-all-trades; or, if you will, a "dinger," The help he needs in skill and knowledge he can pick up through special courses in farm mechanics such as are offered at Dunwoody Institute.

ROBERT MILLER'S SPEAKING TOUR PLANS ARE STARTED

Chicago—Robert Miller, one of the outstanding leaders of organized farmers in the Northwest, will begin a speaking and organizing tour in North Dakota, with his first date in Christine, N. D., April 9.

Miller was president of the Minnesota Farmers' Union for a number of years, and recently was chosen by a conference of farm organizations to represent them at the hearing of the A. A. A. on dairy farming. He is a member of the national committee of correspondence and action of the Continental Congress.

His schedule includes: April 9, Christine; 10, Fargo; 11, Mayville and Grand Forks; 12, Larimore or Northwood; 13, Park River or Grafton; 14, Sheyenne or New Rockford; 15 and 16, Jamestown and Valley City; 17, Forman; 18, Aberdeen; 19 and 20, Huron and Mitchell; 21, Yankton; 22 and 25, Sioux Falls; 24, Sisseton.

It is planned to return Miller to the same territory in about a month for a follow-up tour to strengthen organizations formed.

County Engineers Discuss R.W.A. at Meeting in City

than three days a week. Persons whose budget deficiency is less than is covered by three days a week of work will receive direct relief.

The continuance of the National Reemployment agency on relief work projects was asked by the county engineers, in a resolution adopted at this meeting.

The engineers agreed that efficient operation could only be accomplished by the effective assignment of men to the types of work for which they are best suited, through the Reemployment Service which has the workers registered according to skill and work experience.

This procedure is now in operation with the Federal relief offices investigating and certifying the applicants to the Reemployment Service which in turn puts the men to work on the various jobs. Under the Civil Works program, the N.R.S. was the agency for both the selection and the placement of the workers.

The engineers stated in their resolution that the National Reemployment Service has during the entire program given the engineering department whole-hearted and efficient co-operation.

The engineers present were from the following counties: Beltrami, Clearwater, Kittson, Lake of the Woods, Mahnomen, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake and Roseau.

Mason and Dixon Line

The Mason and Dixon line was named for Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon, two English mathematicians and surveyors, who surveyed and fixed the boundary line between Maryland and Pennsylvania.

VETERANS AND FEDERAL EMPLOYEES' SMASHING VICTORY

On March 20th, 1933, the Administration placed a vicious, cruel and inhuman so-called Economy Law on the statute books. Because of the provisions of that act, thousands of soldiers, driven to desperation, poverty, hunger and misery, commited suicide. The records of almost every community in this great nation record these tragedies. Many federal employees were so reduced in their standard of living that they lost their homes, were unable to send their children to school, and were fearfully embarrassed in trying to maintain an American standard of living.

After more than a year of battle, federal employees and veterans recoverd in part, the ground lost. Every dollar of the money paid these men, widows and orphans immediately goes into circulation, stimulating business. The Economy Act instead of helping business, was in my opinion, a handicape to business recovery. No recovery can be had until there is greater purchasing power.

Those who scoffed at Congress being able to override the President's veto must have rubbed their eyes in amazement when they read of the House vote, 310 to 72, and the Senate vote, 63 to 27. This was generally hailed as the first Administration defeat--an incorrect statement. The first Administration defeat occurred on February 20th, when the Lundeen motion to discharge the Ways and Means Committee from further consideration of the so-called Bonus Bill received the necessary 145 signatures of Congressmen, in spite of a written message brought to the House Chamber by Speaker Rainey from the President, warning members not to sign the motion. Nevertheless, within fifteen minutes from the reading of the letter, eighteen signatures necessary to complete the petition were received.

On March 12th thereafter the Administration suffered its second dedefeat when this Lundeen motion was carried in the House by a vote of 313 to 104, and thereafter on the same day, the Administration suffered its third defeat, when the Bonus Bill passed the house, 295 to 125.

CONGRESS GETS INFORMATION ON THE VETERANS' BONUS BILL

The Congressmen and Senators are just learning about the Bonus election held November 7th, 1933 in Pennsylvania where by popular vote, fifty million dollars was directed paid to the Spanish War and World War veterans, in the midst of America's greatest panic. The veterans carried the day with a majority of 400,000. This money is going into every corner and community of the great State of Pennsylvania, and has beneficial effect in that state.

The Adjusted Service Certificates will have the same effect in the great State of Minnesota where fifty-four million dollars will be disbursed, and it is partly because of the lesson taught Congress by the referendum in Pennsylvania, and because of impending elections, that suddenly we have a large number of converts coming into our camp.

500 ATTEND F-L CONVENTION AT ERSKINE ON SATURDAY

Labor endorsed candidate for state treasurer addressed the convention while the reports of the committees were awaited, after which motion was to nominate candidates for congressional endorsement. A motion was made and passed, that only those who agreed to abide by the decision of the convention should be considered in nomination. As each candidate was placed in nomination he was "put on the spot" and pledged himself to support the candidate winning the endorsement and not to file in opposition.

The following were placed in nomination: Senator R. T. Buckler of Crookston, Rep. Elmer Holm of Dilworth, A. C. Townley, Verner Nelson of Roseau, Leonard Hauske of Ada, Senator Bridgeman of Bemidji, and H. O. Berve of Thief River Falls.

Townley led on the first ballot with 154½, Buckler came second with 101 and Verner Nelson stood third with 88 votes. The second ballot resulted in Townley, 161½; Buckler 104; Nelson 85½. Buckler gained sharply as the other candidates were eliminated and the last ballot stood Towley 278 to Buckler's 311. Mr. Townley's home county of Otter Toil stood solidly by him thruout the entire bollotting. After the final ballot when Buckler had been declared the endorsee, M. Martin, chairman of the Otter Tail delegation arose and moved to make the nomination unanimous. The motion carried without a dissenting vote.

Senator Bridgeman was elected chairman and H. O. Berve was reelected secretary for two years of the Ninth District Farmer-Labor association. Both elections being by acclamation.

The rules were changed to provide that each county be allowed one delegate at large, and one for each 500 votes or major fraction cast for the Farmer-Labor nominee of governor at the last general election, in the future conventions. A ruling that only regularly accredited delegates shall be seated was also adopted. A resolution endorsing the Farmer-Labor state platform was passed unanimously.

The convention which convened at one o'clock adjourned at seven o'clock, agreed that it was the biggest and best ninth district convention ever held.

MEMORIES OF THE 1933 SESSION

Our recent trip to St. Paul as a delegate to the state Farmer-Labor convention brought back many memories of the last regular session of the legislature. We had the pleasure of visiting on the way down with Eric Friberg, representative of Roseau county and during the convention reminiscences from the session flew thick and fast.

The battle which the Farmer-Labories in the house put up to keep the auto tax from being cut 50 per cent was recalled and so was the battle over the income tax law and the unemployment insurance bill.

The Farmer-Laborites made the mistake of thinking that they could best control the weak-kneed sisters who had been prevaled upon to vote for Munn for speaker and thus cooperate with them in the organization of the House, by being lenient and cajoling. However when the unemployment bill after being throughly enasculated by mullifying amendments was voted down they began to take stock of themselves. The writer takes some pride in the fact that he had a humble part in getting the Farmer-Labor members into caucus, for that caucus united the true Farmer-Labor members and they showed a great deal of strength after that. Foremost in that bunch of battlers were Friberg of Roseau, Herfindahl of Swift, Day of Clearwater, Thorkelson of Renville, Boberg of Sherburne counties, Wier and Youngdahl of Minneapolis. The group consisited of about nineteen members of the House, and with the cooperation of the other fifteen of twenty Farmer-Labor members they made things more than interesting for the reactionaries the rest of the session.

Their first test came when they moved for reconsideration of the unemployment insurance bill. They got it and passed it .A small satisfaction however, inasmuch as it was hurried in the senate.

Two other committee clerks and the writer were drafted to watch the bills that were coming out of committees and coming over from the Senate each day and to put the members of the bloc on their guard; seperate the sheep from the goats as it were. We had the satisfaction of putting this group wise to a move to kill the state testing mill, and when the bill came up on call, quick work on he part of Herfindahl got the bill re-refered to committee. Being that this was on the last night of the session and the committee would not meet again this killed the bill and with it the hopes of Mrs. Kempfer of Otter Tail to help the milling trust swindle the farmers some more on grain grades.

Led by Herfindahl, Halvorson and Cravens this group put up a heartbreaking battle on the last night against the liquidation of the Rural Credit Bureau and altho they waged a losing fight the farmers of the sate owe them a debt of gratitude for the fight that they put up.

One of the first House members we had the pleasure of meeting after reaching St. Paul was Lewis Herfindahl of Swift county, and during the ensuing conversation he told us that in the special session the group followed out the tactics adopted in the closing deys of the regular session and caucussed regularly. Mr. Herfindahl became chairman of the caucus and Friberg the secretary.

"We caucussed three times a week," Mr. Herfindahl said, "and we made the going just as rough for the brewery and distillery interests as we could."

They must have, for it is reported that the last session was the most thoroughly lobbied in history. The wet crowd threw more manpower into their lobby than ever before. We have heard that the Governor found it necessary to send a representative out into the corridors to chase the lobbists out of the building on the last night.

We hope that those men are reelected and that they will have manpower enough with them in the next session to control the Legislature. They are battlers and never deviate from their program. Above all; they can not be bought, and they never trade.

COMING EVENTS CAST THEIR SHADOW BEFORE

Recent news reports of rioting in Minneapolis, Chicago and other large cities carry an ominous warning which the Roosevelt administration may well heed. Over a year has passed since the president took office and the administration is falling into the same mistakes that brought about the downfall of the Hoover administration; that of trying to convince the people and them selves that we have reached the "upturn." Two years the Hoover apologists were trying to make the people believe that factories were reopening, that stocks and bonds were strengthening, that we had definately reached the end of the depression. That, in spite of the fact that authentic figures of the A.F.L. reported from 12 to 15 million men out of employment, and the fact that the lists were being swelled every week that passed. Today's Washington reports have the same earmarke. They cite figures showing millions being put to work, yet A.F.L., fiugures show 11,374,000 were unemployed as of April first.

It is time that Roosevelt stops trying to kid himself. He s not kidding the American people. He has been priming a pump in a dry well. He has run the gamut of all the combinations possible with the English alphabet and the last combination, the RWA is forced labor at subsistence level. The American people will not tolerate it. The consumer can not stand the tremendous load of more interest-bearing bonds. The farmers, home owners and small businessmen are being weighed down with taxes caused by the ever-lengthening relief lines and can not, and will not, longer carry the burden.

You are at the Rubican, Mr. President, you can not turn back, you can not go around. You must cross.

Definite severance of connections with entrenched capital and socilization of monopolized industries is the only remaining solution. Until that is done, the riots will continue with ever increasng fury and recurrence. If you love your country; if you love your people; if you revere American institutions; if you believe in the right of a free people to self government, you will act to safeguard the American people in their inherrent rights to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" ere hunger, destitution and lawlessness so incites the passions that the mobs destroy our heritage.

Life holds many disappointments for the "Clerical Commentator" these days. First Senator Henrik Shipstead, whom he admits to be "respectable" in spite of the fact that he is a Farmer-Laborite, endorses the Farmer-Labor program, and now the Ninth District Farmer-Labor convention first endorsed the state program without a dissenting vote and refused to endorse Townley for Congress. However inasmuch as Berve, Harris and Aalbu are still members of the party, he will no doubt find that ample reason for being "agin" it.

FARM AND MARKET

By
R. A. Trovatten
Minnesota Commissioner of Agriculture Dairy and Food.

While the AAA and its disciples are still wavering in their stand for crop reductions, processing taxes, and other medival economic measures sane agricultural economists are casting for a new road.

The economic philosophy of the age-old law of supply and demand ceased to function when the bankers took over the monetary system which was, in all probability, immediately after the first stroke of the Liberty Bell in 1776. At least there is no written evidence in our country's history that the bankers ran the financial affairs of the nation other than as they pleased.

The AAA's Supply and Demand theory is based upon the simply premise of the man with ten apples for sale. If only five people have the means with which to purchase each an apple, the seller has little to say about the price. On the other hand, if twenty people rush after the ten apples with coin the realm jingling in their jeans, the fellow with the ten apples becomes cocky and gets his price. The AAA plans to cut down "apple trees" and buy up surplus "apples so that there will always be more people rushing for "apples", then there are "apples" for sale. It does not behoove them to think the other way around.

To say that we are producing more food products than we can consume is a fallacy. There is no question but that we are producing more products than we can sell, as the majority of the people have not the wherewithall with which to purchase the output of our farms. The Consumers' Council of the Federal Agricultural Adjustment Administration, states that should the American people earn sufficient incomes with which to live in accordance with their desires, it would require 67 per cent more acreage than is under cultivation at the present time. That is the key to our agricultural situation, not an "Alice in Wonderland" myth, as the AAA is attempting to effect.

Farmer-Labor Press Service

by Senator Henry G. Teigan

The Farmer-Labor Platform seems to be troubling our Republican and Democratic friends considerably. The reactionary papers are constantly talking about it.

It is to be another "smash Socialism" campaign. Many Minnesota voters will recall the campaign of 1920 when J. A. O. Preus and his satellites conducted a campaign on that issue in 1920. To be sure, it was a dishonest campaign and was not one based upon the Farmer-Labor Platform. This time the platform itself is being discussed though there will, of course be plenty of misrepresentation regarding the implications of the platform.

In last week's letter I attempted to show that the Farmer-Labor Platform has not changed materially during the past twelve years. And that is the fact. Never the less, newspaper editors are attempting to show that there is a marked difference between the platform of 1934 and those of previous years.

For the sake of our old party brethren I want to quote a portion of the declaration of principles of the Farmer-Labor Association of two years ago. It will enable Republican and Democratic editors to get a true slant on the situation and cause them to get over their nervousness as to the Farmer-Labor plan to establish a socialist state.

In the 6th paragraph of the Farmer-Labor association's declaration of principles occurs the following language:

"It (Farmer-Labor Party) aims to rescue the government from the control of the privileged few and make it function for the use and benefit of all by abolishing monopoly in every form, and to establish in place thereof a system of public ownership and operation of monopolized industries, which will afford every able and willing worker an opportunity to work and will guarantee the enjoyment of the proceeds thereof, thus increasing the amount of available wealth, eradicating unemployment and destitution and abolishing industrial autocracy."

The only real difference between the platform of two years ago and that adopted at the recent state convention is in the language used. Moreover, no intelligent voter is so stupid as to believe this program can be enacted into law by the next state legislature. Constitutional changes will be necessary. The voters will have to pass upon the proposals. While it may be true that old party politicians regard constitutions as mere scraps of paper, the same cannot be charged to the Farmer-Laborites. In every instance the Farmer-Labor party has endeavored to follow the constitution in its endeavors to bring about necessary economic and political changes.

Chains Fight F-L

Farmer-Labor party leaders are fully aware of the fact that they are facing a bitter fight in this campaign. The money bags of the chain banks will be in evidence as the campaign progresses. And this would have been true regardless of the Farmer-Labor Platform. The investigation of chain bank organizations by the state security commission and the attacks of Governor Olson and public utility companies have aroused the enmity of these plunderers of the people to all thngs designated Farmer-Labor.

A CRAZY SYSTEM
Contributed

Have you ever been to Crazy Land?
Down on the Looney Pike,
There are the queerest people there,
You never saw the like.
For those who do the useful work,
Are poor as poor can be,
While those who are the idlers
All live in luxury.
They raise so much in Crazy land
Of food and clothes and such;
That those who raise them starve to death,
Because they raise too much.
What a Crazy System.

IDENTITY OF INTERESTS, FARMERS AND LABORERS

By
Albert J. Herbolsheimer, M.D.

"I don't see how you can justify a Farmer-Labor party," remarked my friend, whom we will call John because that isn't his name.

"I don't see why anyone can fail to justify a Farmer-Labor party," I returned, "but since you spoke first, you get the first argument; let's hear it."

"Well their aims are directly opposite. The farmer wants high prices for his produce, the laborer wants to buy food cheaply. The farmer wants to pay as little as possible for labor, the laborer wants high wages. How can you reconcile that?"

"You are correct in saying each wants more for his labor or what is the same thing, the product thereof. Also that each is as economically minded as possible because each has a desire to accumulate against a day of want. In these statements you have proved my argument, namely, that they have much in common, in fact, they are identical."

Let me set down a few simple figures. During the War, the price of wheat to the farmer was $2.12 per bushel. This bushel of wheat, I am told, will process into 50 loaves of bread, which rose from 6 cents to 8 cents each at that time, or $4 for the bushel. This leaves $1.88 and the by-products (bran, middlings, shorts, etc.) to pay for the processing. Wages were high during wartime.

A few summers ago, wheat brought the farmer 25 cents per bushel but still cost the consumer $4 when processed into bread, a neat little processing charge of $3.75 per bushel (also plus the by-products), or almost exactly double that required during wartime, and wages down.

Now (as this is being written). wheat is 78 cents in Minneapolis (not at the home elevator). Oh, yes, there is a processing tax of 30 cents per bushel, but only a very small percentage of the farmers benifit from that. Wheat will average somewhere about 80 cents perhaps, on the farm. But let's be generous and call it a dollar, the argument is still good. Bread is now 10 cents per loaf or $5 for the processed bushel of wheat, a processing cost of $4 (plus the by-products—always plus), and wages still low.

Now is there anything more natural than that the farmer should want to get a little more for his wheat (when he is producing at a loss), particularly when he knows the consumer is "paying the price?"

Anything Strange About This?

Is there anything strange in the consumer objecting to paying a high price when he realizes how small is the farmer's share? Is there anything remarkable that they shold try to get together on it? Did it ever occur to you that the farmer is also a consumer, in fact the farmer represents the largest single consuming class in the country and our present economic difficulties are in large measure due to his impoverishment.

Also that the laborer-consumer is of necessity also a producer since he must continually put forth labor in productive effort in order to earn a livelihood? That each is both a producer and consumer? That when the farmer does not receive an adequate share of each dollar expended by the consumer of his goods, he is forced out of the market as a consumer himself, thus depriving the labor-consumer of a large share of his market, resulting in further decrease of the latter's power to buy farm products, and that again resulting—oh, well, just say it over and over—that's the way we've been doing it in this country ever since the beginning of high finance and big profits.

Other Farm Products, Too

And does it not occur to you that the consumer's stomach will not hold enough wheat at $5 a bushel to make the farmer solvent at $1 (or more properly 75c to 80c) per bushel even if his pocketbook could stand the strain? And what we have said of wheat holds good for most other farm products.

Professional Men as "Laborers"

"And do you not realize you are just as much a laborer as a mechanic is a laborer? (My friend, John, is a dentist.) You sell your skill and effort when there is a demand just as the mechanic sells his skill and effort when he can find a market. Neither of you earns when your consumers are unable to purchase. The same goes for every professional man or women, and in fact for anyone who lives by his own effort. It does not apply to those who live by the effort of others.

"Yes, farmers and labors have much n common. That is not new. All through the ages they have struggled against clever, unscrupulous persons who have lived by their own wits and the labor of others. The Farmer-Labor party is only a modern name for an age-old struggle that is slowly but surely coming to a favorable decision."

CHURCH ATMOSPHERES

There are deep inner yearnings, depressive mental doubts rumplings of conscience that find no peace or hope or satisfaction in nature, in the business world, in the home or on a vacation; the only place such agitations are met is within a church, beautiful in architecture and alter designs, creative of prayer, faith and Christian ideals.

However, there is no real beauty in a church however beatiful it may be unless it has that power which sends forth the church attender as a transforming influence into the world changing, by a righteous idealism, the uglinesses of society into a paradise.

SONG OF THE PAVEMENTS

Plodding feet of hungry men
Always walking against time,
Steady as a cadenced rhyme;
Plodding feet of hungry men--
Feet!

Haunted eyes of hungry men
Seeking out a resting place,
Searching for a friendly face;
Haunted eyes of hungry men--
Eyes!

Sickened minds of hungry men
Thinking, thinking without aim,
Wondering who there is to blame;
Sickened minds of hungry men--
Minds!

Weary souls of hungry men
Hungry both for food and light
That can break the pall of night;
Weary souls of hungry men--
Souls!

Editorial Comment

From Our Exchanges

THE BRAIN TRUST AND REVOLUTION
(The Challenge)

There is much ado these days, especially in the more grossly reactionary newspapers, about the charges of a small time former banker and present Steel Trust-city school superintendent, Mr. Wirt, that a group of President Roosevelt's advisers are plotting revolution. He relates with gusto that one of these men declared that Roosevelt was a Kerensky whom in their own good time the plotting college professors would replace by a Stalin.

This merely is a sign of the fact that the reactionary owning and employing class in America has recovered from the fright that the spectacle of the ruin brought by their criminal anarchy had thrown into them a year ago, when their entire finance and exchange structure was paralyzed. As Will Rogers observed at the time, the bankers had only the sense of humor of the American people to thank that their lives were safe.

The government of the United States under Roosevelt, rebuilt and restored confidence in the banking system and handed it back to the bankers. The NRA organized American employers and enabled them to pull out of the mix that the jungle practices of business big and little had plunged them into. At the same time it cushioned the capitalists of America against the anger of their oppressed workers by promising the workers the right to organize themselves like the government itself organized the employers. In practice, the government, as was inevitable, refused to do anything effective to prevent employers from blocking their workers efforts by usual war methods of spying, discriminating, discharging and threatening.

There are a few progressive minded among Roosevelt's advisors but no revolutionists. It is against these few and the equally few progressive policies that reaction is organized this year in a probably successful attempt to scare Roosevlt into abandoning them.

NOT A FARMER-LABOR INFANT
(Farmer-Labor Leader)

Maybe it needs to be said over and over until no reactionary newspaper or politician will dare repeat the canard, so here goes: The present liquor law is not "what the Governor asked for." Neither is it a "Farmer-Labor measure."

In his message to the Special Session the Governor said:

> The most preferable system in my opinion for such control is through a state dispensary, confining the sale of bottled liquors, not to be consumed upon the premises where sold. The elimination of the profit motive in the business would be the best means of protecting consumers as to price and quality, and for eliminating the bootlegging traffic in intoxicating liquors. If you do not concur in this recommendation you should at least submit the question to the people of our state, the great majrioty of whom are opposed to the return of the saloon in open or disguised form.

And we got neither a state dispensary nor a referendum.

The saloon is back in thinly disguised form. Bootleggers flourish as before. And those who profess to know say that "legal" liquor is abominable, the price prohibitive. All of this and much more was shackled upon the state for the sake of private profit. The Governor distinctly asked for a state dispensary system to eliminate private profit.

The present mess is not "what the Governor asked for."

Don't let them get away with that sort of talk.

HOLDING COMPANY RAPPED
(Union Advocate)

In a far-reaching decision last week Federal Judge Johnson J. Hays, of Greensborough, N. C., ruled that the holding company stockholders of the Detroit Banking company and the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., were liable for losses aggregating more than $35,000,000 incurred in the collapse of the two large national banks in Detroit. The court ruled that the holding companies were the real owners of the two banks which failed, and therefore the stockholders in these holding companies were liable for all assessments.

Naturally a great howl has gone up from the stockholders in the holding companies, and the ruling will be appealed to the circuit court of appeals and thence to the U. S. Supreme Court. But in the last analysis, the ruling of Judge Hayes is a wise one. The holding companies stood to gain millions in excessive profits in the event that the two large Detroit banks had been permitted to continue their operations. The government stepped in and closed the banks when it became apparent that there was plenty of skullduggery in the managment of these giant institutions. Now the ones who expected to amass huge profits are ordered to assume responsibility for losses totaling more than $35,000,000. Hence the howl of protest.

Holding companies are the same the world over. It does not matter whether they are holding companies for privately-owned public utilities or privately-owned banks. They are always ready to milk off the profits as holding companies. They are never willing to assume the liabilities.

With holding companies it is always a case of "heads I win, tails you lose."

Great Remedies From Great Minds
American Guardian

Further evidence of how the country's master minds are encouraging the American people to think along the right channels is furnished by an impudent book, "Who's Hooey," which culls a number of their sage comments on unemployment, depression and so on. Among the prize nuggets of wisdom are the following:

Calvin Coolidge: The final solution for unemployment is work.

Samuel Vauclain: When everybody makes up his mind to go to work and stops talking about the government supporting him, we will get out of trouble.

Arthur Brisbane: A real way to relieve unemployment would be to give employment.

If they ever catch the paluka that stole the medals off the grave of the Unknown Soldier they will probably find that he was one of profiteer, who, during the war sold shoddy clothing, flaming coffins, leaky gas masks, and powderless bullets to the government for the Unknown Soldier's comrades. They will also find that he is opposed (on patriotic grounds) to the immediate payment of the Soldiers Bonus.

Looking somewhat downcast, the Old Soak said the other day, "With legal liquor, raids 'n evrything, it won't be long now before it will be almost impossible to get a bottle of that good old pre-repeal moonshine.

Senator McKellar Says Income Tax 'Fixed' to Refund 118 Bil's

How corporation income tax laws were so "doctored" during the rule of Andrew W. Mellon secretary of the treasury and his successor, Ogden L. Mills, as to deprive the government of hundreds of millions in revenue was exposed by Senator Wenneth McKellar of Tennessee in sensational charges to the U. S. Senate.

Despite the serious importance of the Senator's revelations, scarcely a daily newspaper in the United States gave its readers anything like an adequate report of Sen. McKellar's clear statement of amazing facts.

Not Millions, But Billions

The trick was worked by a series of "deductions." In 10 years—1921 to 1930, inclusive—the deductions totaled $118,000,000,000.

"You mean millions, don't you?" interposed Sen. Long of Louisiana, who evidently could not believe his ears.

"No, billions." replied McKellar. Then he pointed out that the net income reported by all corporations for the ten years mentioned was $84,000,000,000, and the tax collected totaled $9,915000,000.

It will be noted that the "deductions" amounted to more than the income taxed.

Entire Deficit Total Refunded

If the deductions had not been allowed, Uncle Sam would have collected from these corporations, in the years of prosperity, not less than $10,000,000,000 additional. And that would have been sufficient to take care of the entire deficit so far incurred by the government on account of the depression! McKellar made all this crystal clear.

"We tax corporation, as shown by these figures, only on an infinitesimal amount of their net earnings," he declared. For more than an hour he patiently analyzed the figures. No-one challenged his conclusions.

G. O. P. Administrations Involved

"During the Harding, the Coolidge and the Hoover administrations," he said, "the provisions requiring a fair and just income tax, both of corporations and of individuals, were absolutely emasculated.

"This is why we see published in the newspapers items to the effect that the income tax has fallen down. That statement is not true.

"What has been done, is we have yielded to the emissaries of the favored interests, to the lobbyists, if you please, who come here every year—who, I am informed, are here now—seeking to change the income tax provisions in favor of the great industries they represent."

Contract Bridge

Question: How can partners safely reach a slam bid?

Answer: Slam bidding naturally presupposes a through knowledge of the fundamental principles of contract bridge. Without such knowledge partners should be content with a "Game" bid.

Every "strength-showing" bid is a slam invitation, because it indicates quite difinitely the number of Honor Tricks held by the bidder. Strength-showing bids are such as opening-two bids; forcing takeouts, overcalling in opponents-bid suit, etc. If the partners find that opponents hold more than one honor trick, the slam should generally not be bid.

In general: If after strength-showing bids one partner bids four notrump, this indicates absolutely two aces and a king of a suit by one of the partners, or lacking, a king, it shows three aces. If the other partner holds two aces, or one ace and all kings in suits previously bid, he is forced bid five notrump since all aces are in the two hands. With one ace and added values not previously shown, he must bid six in one of the supported suits. With no added support he must sign off with five of lowest-ranking suit bid by partners.

After a five notrump bid following the four notrump partner must respond, and this reponse must be six or seven, depending entirely on the logic of the situation.

Next week a hand will be given in which seven dimonds were bid, and made only owing to weakness of the defense.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

FORGOTTEN MEN! "NEW DEAL" FINDS 'EM THE WHISKY BOYS

By J. G. Nyquist

The forgotten man is found at last!

Under the "new deal" he is the wine man, the brewer, thet distiller. the saloon keeper, the bar tended, and the whole gang of parasites that live on the liquor traffic.

The liquor flood has already swept more than $600,000,000 out of the pockets of consumers in United States. The loss of such a colossal sum of money is bound to seriously affect the purchasing power of the American people. Fruit is considered a luxury. by many, consequently, when money is scarce, the fruit market will suffer.

The opening of the wineries was going to be a bonanza to the grape growers. But how about it? In order to start the ball rolling some wineries bought some grapes as high as $40 a ton. Now these same wineries are buying grapes as low as $3.50 a ton and they have no room for the $40 grapes, so they are still on the vines.

The government had to step in and furnish money in order to stabilize the grape at $15 a ton. A ton of good grapes will make 150 gallons of wine, and customers will pay at least $3.50 a gallon. The government will help the farmers to get $15 a ton for his grapes, but it will also protect the wine industry, so they can get $550 from the same grapes. This is one card on the "new deal."

EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS MUST NOT BE DEMOBILIZED

More and more, Congress is becoming conscious of the tremendous drive to demobilize our educational institutions, and many members resent the tendency "to take it out" on our children and our schools in order to save the war profiteers, and income and inheritance tax-payers who are so vitally interested in going to war but are greatly distrubed about paying for war when war is over. So far as I am concerned, I will do everything in my power to support and uphold the great educational system that has been built up in this country and so to maintain it at high American standards," Congressman Lundeen says.

SCIENTISTS STUDY STORKS' MIGRATION

Recent investigations have gone far toward solving the problem of the migration of storks. Since 1917, says Tit-Bits Magazine, upward of 110,000 storks from Denmark have been marked with a ring round the leg. Reports have been received concerning a sufficient percentage of these birds to trace their passage fairly accurately.

They appear to fly via Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, and Rumania, and across the Bosphorus to Asia Minor. They certainly pass through Egypt, but whether they reach that country by flying over the water or over the land is not certain. They then continue their journey up the Nile, over the great lakes of Africa, to winter quarters in Natal or the Cape.

The journey of 7,500 miles takes just under two months. Oddly enough, the return journey is accomplished in about half that time.

Great numbers go farther than Denmark, but about 2,000 spend the summer there. Modern industrial mechanism, especially high tension cables, is fatal to many, but storks are known to live to the considerable age of thirty or forty years—if they are lucky.

MAY TEACH PYTHONS TO CATCH RABBITS

With varying success entomologists have been introducing insect enemies to destroy fruit and other pests for a long time; now an experiment in that line is to be made with larger animals. Australian farmers lose heavily every year by the depredations of wild rabbits, and plans without limit have been tried to destroy the rabbit pests without success.

Now the government is to experiment with the python of India. Like the boa, the python is a large snake, and like it also a constrictor. It has no poison glands, and while its size is terrifying, the python is easily tamed, and by many of the natives venerated in a religious way. It is capable of swallowing a young antelope, and a rabbit would be a small mouthful for it.

The serpents reach the usual length of 30 feet, and while they ordinarily stalk their victims, they can make considerable speed, and can also throw themselves forward instantly a considerable distance.

It would be possible for a python to kill a child, and one naturally wonders whether in adopting the python Australia is not getting something more objectionable than the rabbit.—Columbus Dispatch.

Strange Oriental Disease

Miryochit, a nervous disease of Oriental peoples, is one of the most peculiar afflictions of mankind. Its chief characteristic is to make its victims involuntarily mimic the words and actions of those about them.—Collier's Weekly.

ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY DEFEAT IN SENATE

A short time ago, I regret to state, the Administration was defeated in its request for the St. Lawrence Waterway. I am heartily in favor of that great project which must come eventually, why not now? It will bring ocean shipping to our Minnesota ports and furnish tremendous low price light and power. I will continue my hattle for this great project." Congressman Lundeen says.

The Minnesota Kaleidoscope of 1933

Gives you first hand information of the doings of the 48th session of the legislature of Minnesota.

Read the following indorsement by the Farmer-Labor Leader:

The book shows the background of most of the controversies which arose over the income tax proposal, the unemployment insurance law. the chain store tax and other measures· It points out the weaknesses of certain groups in both House and Senate, and dissects the political intrigues with considerable skill. All in all, it is an excellent record to be used in the 1934 campaignand everyone interested in the political developmentsin the state should hav a copy for reference purposes.

Community Auction To Be Held on Sat.

The Forum Community Auction which will take place Saturday will be a success if one can go by the number of articles listed at this office. A representative list of many of the articles is printed elsewhere in this issue.

The auction is the outgrowth of many suggestions that we sponsor such an event because it would so help many people get rid of articles that they themselves had no more use for and others needed badly. Auctions of this kind will be held from time to time if enough cooperation is given this, our first attempt.

There are article ranging all the way from Bantam Cocks to flat irons, from electric fans to heaters. If you do not see an article listed that you would be interested in buying, come anyway because there are any number of articles that are listed under miscellaneous and some articles that were brough in after the published list was set up. If you do not want to buy anything, come! You will be welcomed and you might run across an exceptional bargain.

Concordia Choir Impresses Aud.

Singing to an appreciative crowd of people in the municipal auditorium last Friday night the Concordia College Choir gave a good account of themselves and the reputation that preceded them to Thief River Falls.

Prof. H. W. Monson, director of the Choir, showed to the audience just what could be accomplished by a group of that kind with perseverance and practice. The numbers sang by the group were of arrangements that showed a very wide range of accomplishment; the following are the selections which were presented: "The Spirit Also Helpeth Us" by J. S. Bach, "Beautiful Savior" by H. W. Monson, "A Crown of Grace" by Johannes Brahms, "Benedicus Es Domina" by Albert Snow, "Now Sinks the Sun" by Horatio W. Parker, "Jubilate" by Burkhardt, "O Come Let Us Worship" S. Rachmanoff, "Adoration of the Shepherds" arranged by Kurt Schindler, "A Mighty Fortress" by H. W. Monson, "Emitte Spiritum" by Fr. Jos. Schuetky, "O Blest Are They" by Tschaikowsky, and "Hosianna" by Gustav Schreck.

Those who heard the group are of the opinion that the admission price was too small for the class of entertainment which they received that those who missed hearing this College group should have every reason to regret it.

Republicans Choose Del. to State Meet

The county convention of the Republican party was held last Friday afternoon in the court house in this city. The meeting was called to order by Theadore Quale, chairman of the county organization, at about 2:30 with about 20 delegates present.

In a letter which was read by Mr. Quale that was received from the Pre-Convention committee of the Republican party the following points of interest were mentioned: If the Farmer-Labor party gets into power their intention is to put their program into effect immediately; The Parole Commissioner and the Administration were directly responsible for the crime situation in the state of Minnesota; that the cost of state government has increased tax levies almost twice in the last two years.

The resolutions commitete of the convention brought back the following resolutions for the convention to act on: That the convention go on record as endorsing Stafford King for State Auditor, Mike Holm for secretary of state, Julius Schmall for state tressurer, and Grace Davis for Clerk of Supreme Court. A resolution commending the Republican congressmen for their good judgement and wisdom shown in matters of legislation and in their refusal to be led either to the extreme left or the extreme right in matters of legislation.

Delegates to the state Republican convention to be held in Minneapolis April 13 were then chosen as follows Theodore Quale, Mrs. Tobias Reep, Charles Gahrielson, Charles Lindquist, F. K. Dukes and Mrs. McDonald of Goodridge. Alternatives were also chosen.

Lively Meet Held Mon. by Workmen's Prot. Ass'n

tually the cost of the various "alphabetical orders" would fall back on the consumer who, says Mr. Aalbu, are members of your organization. Taxes, the only way in which the government can raise money, must be placed on things that we buy, we are, therefore, the ones who pay for the cost of these various relief works and we should not plan on living under this hand-to-mouth exsistance very long.

Mr. Aalbu further pointed out the necessity of supporting Congressman Lundeen's Unemployment Bill now before Congress. Whenever bill comes up that will benefit men of the working classes then they should use all their power to get that bill passed. He gave an interesting talk on how the legislature works when in session, and told how the unemployment bill that was passed in the house during the last regular session was made useless by the conservative members of the legislature.

Donald Snyder, manager of the National Reemployment Service, was asked to give a short talk on what he thought of the program set up of the situation presented by Mr. Aalbu; Mr. Snyder said he heartily endorsed the methods described by the previous speaker as being the only sane viewpoint that could be taken, and that it only through organization that their ultimate goal could be reached. He further stated that relief should not be ultimate goal but the immediate goal and that he believed that jobs were what the men really wanted and needed not relief.

Wood for Boxes and Crates

The manufacture of boxes and crates consumes nearly 14 per cent of all the lumber harvested in this country every year. Fiber containers also take a considerable share of the United States wood crop, for 7 per cent of the wood pulp produced goes into this product.

Aristocrotic Principles

It is said of revolutions such as the great French revolution which closed the Eighteenth century, that it was rather a violent and mechanical inversion of aristocratic principles than a new interpretation of life. Starting from large generalities, such as "the rights of man," "liberty, equality and fraternity," rather than from the facts of humanity as observed with an open mind, if all men were not equal, then the taller ones must be shortened accordingly, and the guillotine was a practical syllogism.

Houses of Gold

In recent years improved methods of gold mining have made it possible to extract the metal from ore which formerly was considered too poor to be profitable. Guanajuato, a Mexican town, was built with earth taken from the workings during an early gold rush. Years later a man was demolishing one of the houses and realized that the walls contained gold in sufficient quantities to be extracted with profit. The news spread, and before long every house in the town had been knocked down by eager owners for sale to a prospective company.

The American veteran is a cross-section of American life—those men who bleed in time of war, and suffer in time of economic distress. The so-called Economy League and other enemies of the soldiers are becoming worried about the Senate vote on the Bonus.

VOLUME THREE NUMBER 2 — OFFICIAL PAPER OF PENNINGTON COUNTY, THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINNESOTA. — THURSDAY APRIL 19, 1934

$15,000 GRANT IS DEFINITELY LOST TO CITY

Failure to Execute the Necessary Grant Agreement Cause of Loss

An announcement from Washington made by Secretary Ickes Tuesday stated that the city of Thief River Falls had definately lost the $15,000 grant that had been alloted to them last summer when the former city council had applied for PWA funds to modernize the municipal power plant and water pumping equipment. This sum was to have covered 30 per cent of the construction costs of labor and material used on the job.

The grant was disallowed because "the city has refused to do anything further since applying for and receiving the allotment, despite repeated efforts made by PWA to get the city to execute the necessary grant agreement." Secretary Ickes stated.

Farther action was prohibited because of an injunction filed against the former council which prohibited them from going on and filling the necessary stipulations of the grant. As it was deemed unnecessary to add any other equipment to the local plant by the present city council the grant was allowed to be disqualified.

Last Thursday a grant of $4,800 to be applied to a proposed $15000 improvement on the city water and light department was approved by the federal public works administration according to word received from W. N. Carey of St. Paul, state PWA engineer. This grant was applied for by the city council last January 2nd, but it has not as yet taken any definate steps to put these improvements into effect.

POLITICIANS TOLD TO KEEP OUT OF WPA'S MEETINGS

President Says Politics Would Disrupt the Plans of the Organization

Because of the danger of the Workmen's Protective association becoming a political organization, the chairman, Mr. Battleson has stated that political arguments would no longer be tolerated at their meetings. He urged that the members of the organization should strive to keep the good-will of the city and county administration and not jump from one side of the fence to the other.'

W. Douville suggested that they go on record as endorsing a resolution that 54 hours a week of relief work was not enough to keep a man and his family from hardship and that they demand at least 30 hours a week four weeks a month of relief work. The WPA passed such a resolution and are sending a copy to Governor Olson and the Minnesota members of Congress.

Mr. Douville asked the organization for their endorement for a job as Poor Relief Overseer for the state, stating that such a job could be safely trusted to a man who cannot be bought off. "I have a steady job and I can always go back to work on that job should I incur the wrath of some higher up that tries to buy me off and fails," Mr. Douville stated.

Immediately after the meeting was adjourned a second meeting was organized extemporaniously in which the communist party representative Mr. Bouman of Bagley was very evident, he talked and pleaded with the men of the crowd to organize into a group and put on mass demonstrations stating that it was the only way to get what they wanted. An opponent of Mr. Bouman's argument stated that it was a sure way to get their heads "busted" and that the only way to get a decent and fair standard of living was to support a party that took a definite stand on political questions that would be of some lasting benefit to the organization and to the workers.

SEVEN FILE FOR CO. OFFICES THIS WK.

Aspirants for county offices have been becoming more numerous the past week according to a checkup made today. Seven new names have been added to the list.

Those who filed are as follows: H. L. Fowler, county auditor, who proved that he is not superistitious by filing on Friday the 13; he filed for reelection as auditor. Woodrow Wilson, of River Falls township, Emma Satre of Rocksbury and Albert Poppenhagen of Thief River Falls all filed for the office of Superintendent of Schools. John Gullingsrud, county treasurer filed for reelection and so did Sheriff Ole Ihle and Fred D. Lorentson, Register of Deeds.

Judge James E. Montague of Crookston spent today in this city on business.

Russell Nelson of Crosby spent a few days here this week visiting with his mother.

Pennington County Students Win Honors at N. W. School

The winter term grades just released by Registrar J. W. Milnar of the Northwest School of Agriculture at Crookston disclose that many students from Pennington county have outstanding scholastic records. Students making the coveted honor roll include, Harold Nabben, Goodridge; Ray Parnow, Erie, Morris Engelstad, Laura Hansen and Irene Holst of Thief River Falls; Clarence and James Weckwerth, Hazel. The following students made the high scolarship lists: Chester Larson and Le Roy Peterson, Thief River Falls; Olaf Dahlen, Erie.

Butter Naming Contest is Receiving Public Interest

Suggested names for the butter being manufactured by the Thief River Falls Seed House are coming in rapidly according to Mr. Hoel, manager of the plant. To enter this contest all that is required is to buy a pound of this new butter and write your suggestion along with your name on the inside of the carton.

For the best names submitted for this butter there will be a ten dollar cash prize awarded for the person winning first place and a five dollar cash prze for the person sending the second best name. The butter is now on sale at all leading grocery stores of this and surrounding cities, Mr Hoel says.

BIDS CALLED FOR BY CO. BOARD ON 21 MILES OF ROAD

Twelve Miles of Grading and Nine Miles of Graveling Approved Thurs.

The county board took action before adjourning Thursday and called for bids to be opened May 9th on nine miles of graveling and 12.69 miles of grading. The largest project for which bids called for is a 8.5 mile strech of grading on a county aid road about 24 miles east of Highlanding; bids were also called for the grading of county aid road No. 18 extending from the city limits to the golf links, and for the grading of C. A. road No 2 south from Erie. Bids were called on the following graveling projects: At the east end of State Aid Road No. 1, 3.5 miles; four miles in Polk Center from State Aid Road No. 1 to the Red Lake county line; and on State Aid Road No. 21 south from work on S. A. R. No. 1 for 1.5 miles.

Bids will be called for on the grading of County Aid Road No. 23, in Kratka south of the new Trunk highway No. 1 after the surveying has been completed, for four miles and for graveling of the road along the Red Lake-Pennington county line in Black River township, County Aid No. 10, for 3.5 miles, according to Mr Fowler, county auditor.

New Bridge Will Require Enormous Amount of Material; Excavation Started Thursday

Work on the new bridge at the east end of Third Street has started in full swing this week. Work is to be provided for about 60 men working on three shifts of five hours just as soon as the machinery and material has been brought in and set. The past week has been given over to setting up hoists and tool sheds and to the moving in of timbers used in false work construction.

Plans of the bridge show a length of 278' 4½" from face to face of the abuttments and a total roadway length of 315' 9". There will be four piers space 55' 8¼", 55', 55', 55', and 55' 8¼" apart. This is a total of five beam spans. There will be a six foot walk on either side of a thirty-two foot roadway.

There will be no superstructure, the top edge of the railing being the highest part of the bridge except for the ornamental lamp-pasts which are set at regular intervals along both sides of the structure.

As piles are unnecessary under the piers because of the solid hardpan bottom, excavation will be used to keep the peers from sliding, Mr. Michalsky, the superintendent, says A total of 1440 cu. yds. of wet excavation is necessary to so anchor the piers and 80 cu. yds. of dry excavation to set the abuttments.

Material to be used in the construction of the bridge amounts to some very staggering figures. Material includes 1835.8 cu. yds. of grade "A" concrete and 19.1 cu. yds. of grade B; 121,220 pounds of reinforcing steel, 387,500 pounds of structural steel; 1850 pounds of cast iron; 920 pounds of cast bronze; 627 pounds of phosphor bronze; 8 pounds of sheet lead; 18,470 pounds of ornamental iron railing; 150 Sq. ft. of two-ply joint waterproofing 5,400 sq. ft. of surface waterproofing; and an unestimated amount of rip-rap (material used for filling).

Stella Myrom was named valedictorian with a total of 46 honor points and Marion Sponheim salutatorian, with honor points totaling 38. The senior class honor roll of the highest ranking students of this year's graduating class includes Inga Loken, Douglass Adkins, Evangeline Douville, LeRoy Teslow, Margaret Davis, David Belcher, Hilver Johnson, Walton Myhrum, William Korstad and Robert Chommie.

The Commencement exercises will be held June first with the Misses Myrom and Sponheim representing the Lincoln high school graduating class with the valedictory and salutatory addresses.

Eggs Sold for Market Should be Grade One

According to a letter received by the egg dealers f Thief River Falls from the Department of Dairy and Food of the state of Minnesota, a law passed during the 1921 session of the legislature which provides that all eggs bought in this state shall be bought as number one or number two, must be observed. The dealer in eggs must learn to grade the eggs he buys and pay for them on that basis from now on the letter states.

Grade one eggs are all edible eggs of recent production, clean of shell and sound; the air spaces not exceeding ⅜ of an inch in depth, the yolk visable and mobile, the white reasonably firm and clear. The average weight per dozen shall be 24 ounces and a case of number one eggs shall weigh 44 pounds or more net, the letter states.

Number two eggs are all edible eggs which do not meet the requirements of number one eggs, excepting leakers. This class includes Minnesota trades, Minesota Dirties, Craks and Checks. There is no unclassified grade.

The old custom of buying eggs on the "case count" or current receipts basis was a practice most damaging to quality, payment for eggs bought soley on case count, without regard to quality, says L. H. Brodrick, director of poultry and eggs inspection. offered no incentive to the careful farmer to market good eggs. Quality in eggs begins with production or on the farm. The producer of eggs must

BUSINESS PLACES ORGANIZE TEAMS FOR KITTENBALL

About Ten Teams Will Play in League This Year Says Messenger

Organization of Kitten Ball League has been started in Thief River Falls according to Mr. Messenger, district director of men's recreational activities. According to his plan there will be approximately ten teams entered into the tournament play all of which will represent some local business place. Play will start as soon as the weather permits and the teams are organized Mr. Messenger states.

Plans are also under way to organize a junior baseball league in this city. All boys interested in playing ball should get in touch with Mr. Messenger soon in order to get the organization started as soon as the weather and ground conditions improve.

It has been customary in the past to charge an entrance fee for teams into the league but as there is very little expense connected with ball teams, Mr. Messenger states this plan does not call for any fee to be payed by the entrants. Of course, he goes on to say, there may be some small items of expense but these will not be anywhere near as large as the fees that were charged in the past.

Start lining up your players now because there will soon be a shortage of material to choose from, Mr. Messenger urges.

Nygaard, Former Sheriff Of Norman County, Dies

John T. Nygaard, former sheriff of Norman County and later with the prohibition enforcement department and recently employed by the United States Department of Justice died in Minneapolis April 14.

Funeral services were held at Halstad, Minnesota, Mr. Nygaard's home Tuesday, April 17. Rev. Oscar Holt officiated at the funeral.

John and Ernest Barzen motored to Minneapolis Saturday to attend to business matters, the former expecting to return the first of the week, while the latter plans to travel thru Wisconsin.

Farmer-Labor Meeting Friday at Court House

Helmer Halland, secretary of the local Farmer-Labor club, announced today that there would be a meeting in the court house Friday evening, April 20th, All members are urged to be present as important matters are to be taken up.

Roosevelt Declares He Will Veto Frazier Bill

WASHINGTON.— Speaker Rainey told newspaper men he was authorized by President Roosevelt to say the Executive would not approve the Frozier-Lebke bill for refinancing farm mortgages.

Signatures are being obtained to a petition to force the bill out of committee.

When the petition had come within nine of the required 143 signatures Speaker Henry T. Rainey and his lieutenant prompted withdrawals which reduced the total number of signatures to 133.

Rainey said he received his authorization from the White House to make the President's position clear.

The bill contemplates government issuance of securities for refinancing farm mortgages at 1½ per cent on principal and 1½ per cent on interest.

Friends of the measure say they will get the necessary signatures and hope to pass the bill over a Presidential veto.

Assessors Will Meet in Co. Court House Friday

All assessors from Pennington county will meet at the court house Friday morning, according to County Auditor Fowler. A representative of the Minnesota tax commission will be set at the meeting to discuss tax assessments of real and personal property which will begin May first.

An explanation of the method of assessing homesteads under the new law which was upheld in the Minnesota Supreme court last week by the state representative will prove to be of much value and interest to the assessors of this county Mr. Fowler says.

The meeting will be held in the court rooms and is called at ten o'clock; this meeting will be open to anyone who wishes to attend, Mr. Fowler states.

NRS Show Increase in Private Placements

Private placements through the NRS office has been steadily increasing since the first of April according to Howard Davidson, assistant manager of the local office. Since the first of the month there have been 136 placements made in this district of which thirty-five were placed in this city. Many of these are seasonal jobs but it is encouraging to note there is an increase in permanent jobs being filled, Mr. Davidson says. As good high class workers are always in demand, Davidson says. those who have some special ability and are anxious to get werk should be sure to register and keep their registrotion cards up to date.

City Mail Service to be Re-instated After May 1

Due to increased postal revenue and better business conditions the regular postal service which has been gradually curtailed since the first of the year will be installed again. Payless furloughs and service curtailments will not be in effect for the rest of the fiscal year after May 1st, according to word received by Postmaster Anderson from Postmaster-General J. A. Farley.

T. J. Welsh of the Minnesota Conservation Department has established his offices temporarily in the Brummund Hotel. Mr. Welsh was sent here by the conservation department to take care of all state timber and mineral land tracts that do not come under the jurisdiction of the Rural Credits Department, in the counties of this district which include Marshall, Polk, Red Lake, Mahnomen, Norman, Kittson, Rosean and Pennington counties.

Dr. F. Melius Christianson Will Present World Famous St. Olaf Choir Sun,, May 6

DIRECTS ST. OLAF CHOIR

F. MELIUS CHRISTIANSON

Over a quarter of a century ago a young Norwegian musician conceived and organized the famous St. Olaf Choir, which will appear in the new municipal auditorium in Thief River Falls on Sunday, May 6, at two o'clock in the afternoon.

Today this man, F. Melius Christiansen, is known to lovers of choral art the world over. Music critics in Berlin, London, New York, Chicago, and countless other cities have hailed the sixty student singers of his choir with the most glowing praise.

Dr. Christiansen insists that the secret of his success is hard work. And the most rabid enthusiasts will agree that this factor has something to do with it. Everyday except Sunday, the young musicians gather in their Gothic stone music building for an arduous rehearsal.

Fundamentals, attacks, releases, breathing, and intonation are stressed. Choir members must be able to sing perfectly in tune, for the Saint Olaf is an a capella organization.

Tickets are now on sale at the Thief River Pharmacy, Lambert's Drug Store, and the Thief River Music Company. Reserved seats are $1, while general admission is 75 and 50 cents.

Mrs. Anna Barzen returned Wednesday from Minneapolis after a visit with relatives and friends for a week.

Rep. Day and Melby are Endorsed for Reelection To the Lower House

District Organization is Set Up To Co-Ordinate Work in Coming Campaign

The 55th Legislative District Farmer-Labor convention was held at Oklee last Sunday with 70 delegates representing three counties and a host of Farmer-Laborites present. Representatives W. E. Day of Bagley and John O. Melby of Oklee were endorsed for reelection and Paul A. Harris of this city was indorsed for the State Senate. All endorsements were unopposed and on motion made and unanimously passed the secretary was instructed to cast the unanimous ballot of the convention for the candidates each in turn.

Arthur Carlson, chairman of the Red Lake county association was elected convention chairman and H. O. Berve of this city was elected convention secretary. A credential committee was immediately selected. As soon as the credential committee had reported the convention proceeded to nominations for endorsements. W. E. Day was first placed in nomination as representative from Clearwater county, a seconding speech followed and there being no further nominations offered, the nominations were closed and the unanimous ballot cast for Mr. Day. Mr. Melby was next nominated as representative from Red Lake county. No opposing nomination was made and the unamimous ballot was cast for Mr. Melby.

Coming to the nomination for State Senate, Mr. Harris was placed in nomination by T. J. Bjerke, seconding speeches were made by R. M. Aalbu, B. Dan Bjorkman, H. O. Berve and A. H. Carlson of Plummer. No further nominations were offered and again the unanimous ballot was cast for nominee.

Short talks were made by the nominees, and addresses delivered by Senator Laura E. Naplin and Thomas Vollom of Erskine.

Resolutions were adopted endorsing the action of the Ninth District Farmer-Labor convention at Erskine and its choice for Congress, R. T. Buckler of Crookston; endorsing M. A. Brattland of Ada for the district judgeship and commending the Farmer-Labor state platform.

A permanent 55th district organization was perfected for the purpose of synchronizing the work of the three counties in the coming campaign, R. M. Aalbu of this city being elected district chairman, A. L. Synnes of Bagley was elected secretary and they, with the secretaries of the three county organizations will comprise the 55th district executive committee.

MARTIN NELSON ENDORSED FOR GOV. BY G.O.P.

State Convention Warns Voters Against the Socialistic F-L Platform

With the possibility of fusion with the Demorcratic party still left open, the Republican state convention endorsed a full slate of candidates for the state offices last Friday in Minneapolis. The candidates endorsed for the offices are: Martin Nelson of Austin for Governor; John W. Evans of Montevido for lieutenant-governor; Stafford King for re-election as secretary of state; Julius Schmall for re-election as state treasurer; Oscar Youngdahl of Minneapolis for attorney general; C. J. Laurisch for re-election as railroad and warehouse commissioner; and Grace K. Davis for clerk of the state supreme court.

The Farmer-Labor party was flayed as the converse of Americanism and as champion of communism. It was claimed, by one resolution, that the Farmer-Labor platform, if put into effect, would destroy the small home owner, the farmer, the small business, and our school system. It was urged by the convention that all men and women, regardless of political faith should band together to stamp out this pestilance that threatens to ruin American democracy.

Mrs. L. M. Rolland Honored On 88th Birthday Event

Friends and relatives met at the home of Mrs. L. M. Rolland Sunday in honor of her 88th birthday. Refreshments were served and the center of the table was adorned with a three layer cake with 88 candles.

Mrs. Rolland is one of the old pioneers of this part of Minnesota, coming here when Crookston was just a trading post and Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls were not even post offices.

Mrs. Rolland has recently gone thru a siege of illness but has recovered sufficiently to be about again.

N. D. GOVERNOR INDICTED ON DEAL

Gov. Langer and Eight Others to Stand Trial on Job Levy Charges.

Fargo, N. D.—The federal government ordered nine persons, including the state's chief executive, Governor William Langer, to stand trial on charges of forcing political contributions from federal employes in the state. Indictments were returned as the climax to a week's session of a federal grand jury here, preceding which federal agents had worked for weeks gathering evidence.

Besides Langer, those indicted were Oscar Chaput, business manager of the Leader for which employes were solicited for five per cent of their wages, the money going for "subscriptions" to the paper; State Senator Oscar Erickson of Kidder county, listed as "publisher" of the Leader; State Highway Commissioner Frank A. Vogel; R. A. Kinzer and Joseph A. Kinzer, his son; Paul J. Yeater, and G. A. Hample of the highway department.

Harold McDonald of Bismarck, who went over the state soliciting subscriptions to The Leader, Governor Wm. Langer's administration weekly, and who first broke into print when he was tossed into a water-filled coulee at the University of North Dakota at Grand Forks by students when he attempted to work among university employes, was also held.

Federal officials indicated the investigation would be made when they recently removed Governor Langer as head of federal relief activities in North Dakota, charging relief workers had been forced to contribute to the support of The Leader. The governor denied the charges.

P. W. Lanier, district attorney here, issued only a brief announcement naming the indicted persons and saying two conspiracy indictments were returned against the defendants, one charging them with violating the law prohibiting one federal employe from soliciting funds from another federal employe for political purposes, and the other charging conspiracy to interfere with proper administration of an act of congress. The conspiracy charges carry a penalty of not more than two years in the federal penitentiary, or a fine not to exceed $10,000 or both.

The district attorney announced it will be the purpose of his office to have the cases ready for trial not later than the latter part of May. Until after his trial Governor Langer will continue to hold office. In the event he is convicted of the felony, it would deny him the right to hold public office, his citizenship and other rights being revoked.

Foshay, Henley Told To Begin Terms

St. Louis—Wilbur B. Foshay and H. H. Henley, heads of the Foshay enterprises which collapsed in November, 1929, were ordered by the United States circuit court of appeals here to surrender and start serving 15-year prison sentences. Both were convicted in federal court in Minneapolis of using the mails to defraud, and were ordered sent to the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth. Their appeals to higher courts were unsuccessful. Both Foshay and Henley reported to the U. S. marshal at Minneapolis to be sent to Leavenworth.

$255,000,000 Has Been Spent for CCC

Washington — President Roosevelt was told that $255,000,000 was spent in giving empoyment to 600,000 young men during the first year of the civilian conservation corps. Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work, reported to the chief executive that 310,000 would still be in the forest camps at the end of April. Funds have been appropriated to continue the program for another six months.

Shoemaker Ruled in Default in Suit

Washington—Justice Jennings Bailey of the District of Columbia Supreme Court handed down a verdict by default against representative F. H. Shoemaker of Minnesota in the $100,000 damage suit filed against him by Charles Newman, taxi driver. Newman charges the representative with assaulting him. A criminal action is awaiting retrial.

800 DAIRYMEN MET AT UNIVERSITY FARM

About 800 dairymen from all parts of Minnesota and the two Dakotas met with officials of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration at University Farm, St. Paul, April 6 and 7 to discuss measures for the dairy industry.

The Administration's proposed dairy reduction program was the chief topic of discussion, but a plan proposed by John Brandt, President and general manager of the Land O' Lakes Creameries, Inc., and a program advocated by the National Milk Producers' Federation also were aired.

Speakers for the administration plan were A. H. Lauterbach, chief of the AAA dairy section and O. M. Reed and A. B. Nystrom of the Bureau of Dairy Industy. Dean W. C. Coffey of the University of Minnesota Department of Agriculture presided.

Mr. Lauterbach said that the proposed dairy reduction plan was the best the administration had been able to devise under the authority of the Agricultural Adjustment Act. Before other plans may be adopted, he said, it will be necessary either to make them conform to this act or get Congress to pass new legislation. He voiced the opinion that there is still opportunity during the present session of Congress to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act or pass new dairy relief legislation.

"The most urgent need," he said, "is for dairymen to concentrate on one plan and, if additional legislation is necessary, present a united front to get it enacted."

Mr. Reed pointed out that milk production reached record heights in the summer and fall of 1933 and with the drop in consumer purchasing power, prices fell disastrously. Because of high grain prices, production has fallen so much in recent months that now, by checking volume about at present levels, and avoiding the flush production of which the industry is capable, a balance may be restored. This, he said, would involve reducing production at least 10 per cent below the high levels of 1932 and 1933, but would not lower materially the volume of recent months.

"It is easy to conceive a situation in which all of the milk produced might move into consumptive channels," he said, "but at prices so low that the dairymen could not continue in business."

Mr. Nystrom urged a change from heavy grain feeding to the use of good pasturage and high quality roughage as a means of reducing dairy production costs and curtailing production. He also advocated intelligent culling of low producing and diseased cows from the herds, the vealing of calves from all except the best dams, a delay in the time of breeding heifers, and the use of more dairy products on the farm as means of curtailing commercial dairy output.

Mr. Brant advocated setting a minimum price on all agricultural staples and removing surplus products from the domestic market by means of a government pool, to be financed at the outset by the issuance of two billion dollars in paper money, which would be replenished, however, by the proceeds of an equalization fee levied on the value of the products benefited. From this pool, products would be drawn to feed the needy, manufacture into industrial products, and export to foreign markets. The retirement from production of marginal and submarginal lands and, if necessary, of more productive lands with proceeds of the equalization fee would also play an important part inthis program, he said.

Mr. Reed's criticism of this plan was directed chiefly at its export provision to remove marginal and submarginal lands from cultivation, and the fact that it does not conform to existing legislation.

"Plans for surplus removal, equalization fees, and forced exports," he said, "would require new legislation. The Agricultural Adjustment Administration is primarily interested in working out some proposals which could be put into effect promptly, without further congressional action.'

W. S. Moscrip, president of the Twin City Milk Producers' Association reviewed the relief program advocated by the National Milk Producers' Federation, which includes the preservation of the American market for American dairymen; the withdrawal from production of marginal and submarginal lands, and the development of an intensive campaign for the eradication of bovine diseases.

THOMAS URGES NON-PROFIT CONTROL OF RADIO STATIONS

NEW YORK—All broadcasting activities should be conducted by a non-profit making body set up by the government, said Norman Thomas, speaking over station WEVD, on "Radio and Propaganda" last week

Any new or minority ideas, said Thomas, or any genuine discussion of great issues, fares badly on the air because radio is largely commercial. Most of the time is alloted to advertising, and advertisers are not interested in controversial programs which might alienate any section of their possibly buying public.

"Even paid direct radio propaganda," Thomas said, "is not welcome to the companies and their prosepective advertisers."

CATTLE $1.50 ABOVE YEAR AGO DESPITE BIG SUPPLIES

Cattle markets are from $1.25 to $1.50 above a year ago in spite of the fact that total slaughtering of cattle in the United States during the first quarter of the year reveals that 30% increase in the amount of beef has been moved into consumtive channels. Thus states the regular weekly bulletin issued by the Central Co-Operative Association of South St. Paul.

During March alone, 771,224 cattle were slaughtered at Federally inspected packing plants of the country that total having been exceeded but twice since 1915 and being 154,235 head larger that March last year.

More impressive than this, the threemonth total slaughter of 2,835,238 cattle was 537,307 head more than the corresponding total last year. This is an increase of 30% over a year ago and it is the largest total for January to March since 1918 and 1919.

During the past five years total cattle slaughter for the first quarter has been less than two million head.

In spite of this tremendous increase in beef supplies, cattle markets have behaved well. The good showing has been attributed, by some in the trade, to the hog processing tax on pork which has elevated that meat to a position which renders it more favorable for the sale of beef.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN TO RECEIVE VALUABLE HELP

Plans are now underway for the 1934 series of district Christmas Seal Orthopedic Clinics for crippled children and deformed childrent conducted annually by the Minnesota Public Health Association and co-operating agencies.

Clinics already scheduled for the summer and fall include Brainard, Crookston, MacIntosh, Fergus Falls, Thief River Falls and Bemidji. Surveys to locate the crippled children in extensive districts surrounding these cities are now in progress. Several additional clinics in other districts are also to be arranged.

Minnesota's plan for orthopedic clinics is remarkable in that it makes available to the physically handicapped in remote districts a variety of important services. The clinics bring to the crippled child and adult an opportunity for:

Medical examination by a specialist in the diagnosis and treatment of deformities, in consultation with the family physician, if there is one.

Advice as to the possibilities for improvement or correction of the condition.

An interview with a representative of the Gillette State Hospital for Crippled Children concerning opportunities for treatment.

An interview with members of the division of re-education, Minnesota Department of Education, regarding vocational training, suitable employment and transportation aid to school.

Approximately 400 physically handicapped persons took advantage of the eight orthopedic clinics held in 1933, according to the report of the Minnesota Public Health Association. Of these 47 have entered Gillette State Hospital, and 120 others have received orthopedic aids, such as braces and shoes. As a result of these clinics 39 persons have been placed under vocational training and arrangements were made for transportation aid from the state for 29 children unable to walk to school.

Collisions at Sea

Collisions between ships at sea occur more frequently than is generally imagined. Twenty-three per cent of the 104 major shipping disasters during the last 50 years, and 23 per cent of the lives lost in accidents at sea have been caused by vessels running into one another.—Collier's Weekly.

COMMUNIST FORGERY BARED IN ACCUSING KARL SEVERING

BERLIN—Karl Severing, formerly Minister of Interior for Prussia, has denied that his memoirs contain a single sentence like those quoted in recent stories saying that he was publishing a broshure entitled "My Road to Hitler."

The source of this story has been traced to the Communist Volkzeitung, published in Saar, which printed a lead article supposedly by Severing, made up of quotations from his former writings in the midst of which the paper had inserted copy of its own. To avoid the libel laws, the paper printed in fine type in another part of the paper a statement that "the alleged abstract from Karl Severing's new book appearing in this issue was originated in our office.

GARDENERS WARNED OF LOCKJAW DANGER

New studies in the effectiveness of the anti-tetanus serum in the treatment of acute tetanus—the dreaded "lockjaw"—have shown conclusively that it is very much easier to prevent the disease than it is to cure it.

Todays bulletin from physicians of Minnesota State Medical Association calls the attention to gardners in particular who will soon be digging in freshly fertilized soil in which the tetanus germ is constantly present of the importance of looking after punture wounds immediately, especially when dirt and foreign bodies may be thrust deep into the tissues.

These are the wounds that made ideal soil for the development of tetanus poison, according to the bulletin. The tetanus germ is an anaerobe, that is it grows only in the absence of oxygen and thrives in deep airless wounds made up of necrotic or unhealthy tissue. Thus it requires a damaged tissue of a deep wound caused by a foreign body in which to manufacture its poisons.

Every punture wound should be reported to a doctor so that anti-tetanus serum can be given before any symptoms of tetanus poisoning have developed.

Lockjaw may appear in less than five days or after ten days or longer To be safe, the serum should be administered immediately.

"As a preventive measure, anti-tetanus serum is not surpassed in effectiveness by any preventive serum known to medical treatment," says the bulletin. For proof, its effectiveness in preventing lockjaw among soldiers in the World War is cited As a treatment after symptoms set in, it is far less effective and the mortality from tetanus is still very high.

COMPANY THREATENS USE OF ARMS IN CAMPBELL STRIKE

CAMDEN, N. J.—Twenty-two employees of the Cambell Soup Company have been sworn in by Mayor Stewart as special officers, and applications have been received from more employees for permission to carry firearms, in what the company calls "armed defense" against the 2,000 striking employees.

The employees are out protesting against an average wage scale varying from $11 to $16 a week and against recent attepts of the Company to set up industrial unions.

The Camden area is now the scene of three large strikes, The Radio Condensor employees are out demanding an increase from 32c to 50c an hour. The employees of the New York Shipbuilding Company have been out since March 27.

Gives you first hand information of the doings of the 48th session of the legislature of Minnesota.

Read the following indorsement by the Farmer-Labor Leader:

The book shows the background of most of the controversies which arose over the income tax proposal, the unemployment insurance law. the chain store tax and other measures. It points out the weaknesses of certain groups in both House and Senate, and dissects the political intrigues with considerable skill. All in all, it is an excellent record to be used in the 1934 campaignand everyone interested in the political developmentsinthe state should hav a copy for reference purposes.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Minneapolis—The first barge tow of the season arrived in the Twin Cities, making schedule time from St. Louis. It returned with a load.

St. Paul—The Minnesota state executive council appropriated $1,050,000 to be used for further drouth, direct and work relief in the state.

Granite Falls—Seventy-six veterinarians are testing cattle of Medicine county for tuberculosis. Their work will include testing of 40,800 head.

St. Cloud—A new saving of $4,563.49 was effected by the Stearns county commissioners when they placed all officers in the court house on a strict salary basis.

St. Paul—Eugene Green, confessed gunman and suspected member of the Dillinger gang, died at Ancker hospital. He was shot down recently by federal men.

Holt—Twelve sheep were killed on the O. H. Nohre farm near here by a pack of roaming dogs. Last fall 13 sheep were killed in similar manner on the same farm.

Windom—Approximately $8,000 on Windom's bonded indebtedness was paid the last year leaving a net indebtedness of $40,000 in excess of actual cash on hand.

St. Paul—Minnesota motorists paid $11,326,991.37 in gasoline taxes in 1933, George Griffith, state oil inspector, revealed in his annual report. The amount is slightly below the 1932 total.

Duluth—An aerial survey of 2,830 square miles of Superior national forest will be made his spring, E. W. Tinker, regional forester, announced. Drainage maps will be made from the survey.

Austin—Martin A. Nelson, indorsed as caniddate for governor by the Minnesota Republican convention, has been practicing law here for 15 years. He is married and has a son, 11, and a daughter, 8.

New Prague—Fire destroyed the new Prague theater with loss of $25,000. The blaze for a time threatened to spread to other buildings. Fire departments from Montgomery and Jordan were called.

Mankato—Dr. C. B. L. Boman, Swedish Ltuheran minister for 60 years, died at Duluth, where he had been visiting a son, Dr. Paul G. Boman. He was 84 years old. Dr. Bomna was well-known in Minnesota.

Beaver Creek—An overalled bandit, wearing a mask, waylaid Henry W. Peters, cashier of the Beaver Creek State Bank, when he opened the institution, terrorized two other persons who appeared later, and escaped with $3,000.

Pine ICty—A district court jury convicted Walter Kent, Kanabec county farmer, of second degree murder in the slaying last December of Tony Masolionis, Norwood farm hand, and acquited Arthur Kent, a brother. Both were tried on first degree murder charges.

Stillwater—The state won a sweeping victory before the house committee on banking and currency in Washington when that body voted to approve giving states the right to tax national banks on the same basis as state banks, state Senator George Sullivan lead the argument and was supported by Attorney General Peterson. Sullivan is a local man.

St. Paul—Evelyn Frechette, one of John Dillinger's girl friends, is under $60,000 bond in Chicago to assure her appearance April 23 at a hearing on her removal to St. Paul to face a charge of aiding the notorious killer's escape when he was cornered in a St. Paul apartment by federal officers. She remained silent in court, but her attorney announced she would fight removal.

Minneapolis—Throwing the door wide open for a fusion with the Democrats this year, Minnesota Republicans completed preparations for the oncoming political battle by inviting the entire state to join in the fight on Socialist proposals of the Farmer-Labor party. The groundwork for the campaign was laid by more than 1,000 delegates who worked harmoniously at the municipal auditorium.

Minneapolis—Worried to the point of insanity by financial reverses, I. J. Frendenfeld, an insurance broker, killed his wife, three children and his mother-in-law, and then turned his pistol upon himself. Police found a note from Freudenfeld pinned to a chiffonier. The dead are Mr. and Mrs. Frendenfeld; Janet, 14 years old; Carol, 11; Richard, 8, and Mrs. Cora DeHaven, Mrs. Frendenfeld's mother.

St. Paul—A federal grant of $2,249,000 to be used in April for relief operations was approved in Washington by Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator. Mr. Hopkins said that, of the total April grant, $1,500,000 will be used for relief operations, including $7,350 for re-employment service, $700,000 for drouth relief, $12,000 for care of transients and $37,000 for the educational program covering March.

New Ulm—Net profits of $22,633 were shown for the municipal electric plant here by a report of a public accountant at the close of the fiscal year. The profit was shown in the face of drastic reductions in rates made during the year.

Eden Prairie—More than 125 residents formed the Minnesota Valley Home Owners' association at the Bloomington township town hall. The purpose of the organization is to protest any condemnation and purchase of land along the river that might interfere with their homes.

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT OPPOSES TAKING OVER ALL TOWNSHIP ROADS

The Minnesota highway department has no connection with the movement to include all county and township roads in the state trunk highway system, according to an announcement by N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner.

"Statements have been made that the highway department desires to take over all county and township roads," Mr. Elsberg stated. "This is not correct. Highway department revenues from motor vehicle licenses and the gasoline tax are not sufficient for improvement of the present state trunk system of 11,000 miles. To add all town and county roads would increase the trunk system to nearly 100,000 miles which obviously is impractical.

"I do believe that the trunk system should be gradually enlarged to include heavily travelled local roads as the existing system is permanently improved. A large increase in mileage has been made, however, and it is likely to be some time before these additions can be brought up to trunk standards.

"The highway department and the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads are now conducting a road study to provide facts for guidance in the formation of a long term state program of highway improvement. Results of this study will be given to the Citizens Interim Highway Committee which will report to the next session of the legislature."

U. S. PLAN TO BUY PORK PUT LIFE INTO MARKET

Adversely influenced by continued generous receipts of hogs at most of the leading markets, limited outlets for fresh and cured products and general bearishness on the part of packers due to the added burden of the processing tax which has been at its maximum ($2.25 per cwt.) since the first of March, hog prices have tended to sag for the past two weeks. Prices last week dropped to 10 cents below the March low point. However, part of the decline was restored before the end of the week and with a new government hog purchase program going into effect involving the purchase of 60,000 hogs during April 11,645,000 pounds of pork products and 2,500,00 pounds of lard, a stronger market trend for April naturally is the general assumption.

This is the opinion of W. G. Metcalf, at the head of the hog department of the Central Cooperstive Asoication at South St. Paul. Mr. Metcalf pointed out that while government hog purchases at South St. Paul may not be large enough to create a noticeable increase in hidding locally, it will undoubtedly have a beneficial influence on markets generally.

Contrary to general expectations following the pig slaughter campaign last fall receipts of hogs at most markets have held above a year ago. The seven market totals for March was 1,338,226 head or nearly 17,000 greater than for March last year. Total hogs at seven markets for the year to date show an increase of 12% over the corresponding period for 1933.

The government pig and sow slaughter program, however, should be reflected in somewhat of a reduction in supplies from now on. Hog prices at South St. Paul have been hovering around the $4.00 mark, but considering the $2.25 processing tax pork in reality is costing on a basis of $6.25 hogs.

NEW 1934 HIGHWAY MAPS NOW AVAILABLE

Official maps of the enlarged and re-numbered Minnesota state trunk highway system will be available this week, the highway department announced today. Route marking signs on the old trunk system will be changed about May 1 to conform to the numbers shown on the new maps. Maps may be obtained from the Highway department, 1246 University, St. Paul.

"U" BUILDS NEW SPORTS BUILDING WITH PWA MONEY

Work on a large Indoor Sports Building, second of the University of Minnesota's building projects to aid reemployment, will begin this week. Approximately a third of its cost has been provided by the Federal Public Works Administration, as is true also of the second unit of the men's dormitory, now under way.

Two swimming pools, a complete layout of facilities for sport between student terms, as distinguished from intercollegiate teams, classrooms for the coaches and teachers' training course, and offices for all divisions of the Department of Physical Education and Athletics will be provided by the new structure, which will practically complete Minnesota's athletic plant.

The Indoor Sports Building will lie across the open end of Memorial Stadium, facing toward the Stadium playing field.

Floor space on the top floor, which will be of gymnasium type, will be large enough to permit the playing of five basketball games at once between student teams. There will be two swimming pools, one a pool for general use and the other an exhibition pool for use in swimming matches that are to be attended by students and the public. The structure probably will be ready when college reopens next fall.

HOPKINS SAYS RELIEF ROLLS CANNOT BECOME PERMANENT

WASHINGTON— Addressing the annual convention of the American Red Cross, Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, said he did not believe that "as a matter of permanent policy" four and a half million persons could continue to be carried on relief rolls.

He advocated unemployment insurance and a broad public works.

CANCER NEVER HEALS OF ITS OWN ACCORD

Medical Science has up to the present not discovered the cause of cancer, but it has shown that many so-called causes are not responsible for cancer, says a bulletin issued by the Public Health Education Committee of the Minnesota Medical Association today.

Cancer is not caused by water or germs, or by cooking utensils or climate or any certain mode of living. It is not a general constitutional disease that can be cured by medicine or diet. It never gets well of its own accord.

These truths are cited by the committee as part of a campaign for the early recognition and diagnosis of cancer in which the Minnesota State Medical Association is participating with the American Society for the Control of Cancer.

"We know of no way to prevent cancer except to avoid all chronic irritations inside and outside of the body," this committee says.

It is an established fact that cancer often develops at the site of an irritation such as the sore in the mouth that fails to heal because of the presence of a jagged tooth; or the site of a formerly harmless wart or mole that is exposed to rubbing.

We know of no cure for any type of cancer unless it can be discovered early and removed before the cancer cells have a chance to detach themselves from the parent growth and be carried through the blood stream or the lymphatic system to some other part of the body where they set up a new cancer.

Lotions, ointments and massage applied to cancerous sores do not heal them often serve to stir them up to sudden and fatal activity.

Removal by surgery, destruction by radium and x-rays are still the only known methods of cure.

JUST TO KEEP THE RECORDS STRAIHT

There has been a great deal of arguments among the "men on the streets" during the last several days in regard to the NRS set-up and we have heard the statement made that it is under the supervision of the governor; that its personnel is Farmer-Lahor etc.. Incidentally there has been some thoughtless and unfair critism made of the conduct of the office.

With so many people on the verge of despair; with so many unemployed, it is not to he wondered at, if the reeployment office gets a lot of criticism levellel at it. However it is our opinion, that it has heen very well handled. The fact that they can not supply johs for all who want work, can not he laid at their door. It is their function to place people in jobs, hut not to creat the johs.

We ask no credit for the Farmer-Lahor party nor for the Farmer-Lahor administration for any of the merits of the NRS. Neither will we accept any responsihility for shortcomings that it may have. It is a purely national set-up. An outgrowth of the United States Employment Bureau.

When the Roosevelt administration acting under authority granted it under the N. I. R. A., came to set up the NRS in Minnesota it choose Prof. Hollenbeck of the University who had for several years conducted an Employment Stahilization Research Bureau, financed by the Rockerfeller Foundation, as the chief of the NRS in this state, Mr. Hollenheck's experience in the employment research work made him exceptionally well qualified to handle this job. He chocse as his assistant, Dreng Bjornaraa who had heen working with him in the research work. Arnie Solem and Donald Snyder were recommended hy the local NRS committee, by Mr. Bjornaraa and hy Mr. Hollenheck and were appointed to their positions hy Washington. Incidently they are held in very high esteem by the National office, hut Gov. Olson had nothing to do with their appointments. The National Reemployment Service is purely a non-politica' set-up and every effort is being made by the administration and the officials to keep it so. If some of the appointees are Farmer-Lahorities that should not provoke any astonishment in a state where the vast majority of the electorate subscrihe to the Farmer-Lahor political philosophy. Indeed it would be more cause for wonder if some of them were not Farmer-Laborities. Which is all beside the point. What we want to make quite clear is that the NRS is not a Farmer-Lahor hrain child. If it fails to provide work for all and sundry that fact can not be charged against Governor Olson. Not even by the most unfair critics.

WALL STREET STILL AT THE HELM

If any one of us had thought for a time that Roosevelt is the hoss and has the financiers doing the light fantastic to the tune cf his bagpipes, the latest developments in Washington should dillusion us. It is quite evident that Wall street still calls the tunes.

Big Business, speaking thru the National Economy League, demanded the so-called National Economy act. We attended a mass meeting of veterans in the House Chamber in the state Capitol at Saint Paul while this hill was being given consideration (very scant consideration) by Congress, and we heard the Superintendent cf the Veterans' Hospital at Minneapolis state that if the hill was passed it would mean that 1500 patients in his hospital would be thrown out on private and puhlic charity. Nevertheless, the hill passed after President Roosevelt gave his word of honor to Congress that no deserving veteran should suffer. But they have suffered. We have a letter from Congressman Kvale stating tbat the harrowing tales of suffering coming into the offices of the congressmen were soul-searing. We know that only the heroic efforts of the local Legion post and Auxiliary has prevented death from privation and starvation in some cases in this neighhorhood.

The Independent Offices bill was intended to correct some of the worst ahuses of the Economy Act. President Roosevelt vetoed that bill. It is to the credit of Congress that they passed it over his veto in spite of the pressure brought to hear hy the despicahle Big Business controlled press.

Now President Roosevelt has let it be known quite emphatically that he will veto the Frazier bill if Congress passes it. This declaration has caused ten Congressmen who know "their master's voice" to recall their names from the petition which would force the hill ont on the floor of the House for consideration, and greatly diminished the chances of getting action on the bill this term.

This bill is the only legislation heing considred hy this congress that can put the farmers back on their feet and enahle them to retain their farms and homes thru refinancing their mortgages at an interest rate that they can hope to meet. Its inflationary features would revive prices on farm commodities as no "pension for doing nothing" allotments can do. But it would not pay a bonus to Wall Street and therefore Big Business is against it.

The President's action has shaken his popularity in the midwest states to the foundations. If it should pass and he carries out his threat o veto, it will write a definite finis to his political career.

Editor Schilplin of the St. Cloud Times is so alarmed over the Farmer-Labor platform that he has almost decided to run for governor. He has addressed a letter to the newspaper puhlishers of the state asking them what they think about it. Well, we're willing. If he wants to offer himself up as an offering on the alter of Mammon for the Booze and Boodle gang, far be it from us to discouage him.

The prize for the weekly wisecrack will have to go the Alderman I. G. Scott of Minneapolis. In his "Skeptic's Column" in Scott's Herald he says; "Headline reads 'Phaender Hits F-L Platform.' He will he a bent Phnender if he keeps on hitting anything as strong and suhstantial as this instrument."

Everybody is willing to accept dollar hills for anything the have to sell. WHY? Because there is a clause printed on them as follows: "This certificate is receivable for all puhlic dues and when so received may be reissued." Everybody was willing to accept CWA checks. WHY? Because they could he traded for dollar hills. We would suggest that "Uncle" issue some more CWA checks that can be traded for dollar hills. But next time let the honds lay in the treasury instead of heing handed to Wall Street to collect interest on.

FARM AND MARKET

By
R. A. Trovatten
Minnesota Commissioner of Agriculture Dairy and Food.

Our annual Vitamin D bulletin will he ready for distrihution within the next few weeks, this bulletin is issued hy ths Minnesota Department of Agriculture, Dairy and Food as an aid to poultry raisers and farmers. Our feed department has made over 50 exhaustive tests with various vitamin D carriers during the past years. The results of these tests will he published in the bulletin.

The research work involved auch vitamin D. products as cod liver oil, cod liver cake meal, hurhot liver oil, sardine oil, irradiated yeast products, and other materials. In addition, the seven methods now used for measuring vitamin D potency havs been standsrdized into one table. Farmers and poultry raisers who received the hulletin in other years will be mailed this years' copy without request. Others should write the department for their copy.

While our work in vitamin eperiments deals only animal feeds, it is important to note the marvelous headway that is heing made with vitamins in connection with human health. Science has discovered six distinct vitamins and has been ahle to determine the relationship of each to diseases of the hody, and in some instances the mind. At the present time the vitamin is more or less a mystery in relation to its physical properties; yet, just recently an eastern scientist isolation vitamin B. It is only a few years ago that the vitamins were unknown. What lies ahead in the way of development is a matter of conjecture. With the isolation of the vitamins, possibly scientists have discovered the "Fountain of Youth."

However, we know the value of vitamin D in feeding poultry and hogs. Our contrihution to that phase of science is a valuable one. Poultry raisers and farmers should get our Vitamin D hulletin, credit ofr which must be given to our able chemists, H. O. Halvorson and L. L. Lachat.

Congressman Ernest Lundeen

POST WAR PROBLEMS REMAIN

It is significant that no one defended our entry into the World War. seventeen years after, on April 6th, 1934, and it is remarkahle that the statements published throughout the nation, of thoss who voted against War, went unchallenged. The figures of Robert M. LaFollette, Charles A. Lindhergh, General R. Sherwood, the last Grand Army Man who served in Congress, Col. Edward C. Little, the most distinguished soldier of ths Spaniah-American War, and other distingulshed soldiers and leaders who voted against war, now begin to loom in history as prophets and men who knew whereof they spoke.

* * * *

FIGHT. FOR. THOSE WHO FOUGHT FOR US

The war is over; yes, hut it is not over for hundreds of thousands of maimed and wounded soldiers. It is not over for our men who failed to get their old jobs back. In Congress, when we are asked to fight for those who fought for us all, we meet another propaganda barrage, vicious and cruel in its language. The war is over; yes, hut it is not over for the oppressed taxpayers; it is not over for fifteen million unemployed, their families and undernourisbed children. The war is still on for our school teachers, our cbildren and our schools now being demobilized to pay war debts.

* * * * *

CONGRESS MAY NOT ADJOURN ON SCEDULED DATE

All this is evidenced by such bills as the Wagner- Lewis Unemployment Bills, the Connery Thirty-hour week Bill, the Workers Unemployment and Social Insurance Bill, and many other measures, such as the Soldiers Adjusted Service Certificate, and other bills along the lines of the money question. In fact, the legislative hopper is jammed, and it is doubtful whether Congress will adjourn on any scheduled date.

It is quite amusing to read here in Washington headlines, that the Democratic Party is charged with being "Red," Bolshevistic,' Socialistic" and what not. The attack is even extended to the President and his family and his advisors—the so-called "Brain Trust." It includes the government factory which Mrs. Reesevelt proposed to establish in West Virginia. Mrs. Roosevelt replied that she never knew is was Commnnistic to give people a chance to work for a living and support themselves and maintain a home.

* * * * *

"RED SCARE GROWS

All this "Red" attack upon the Democratic Administration should he remembered in connection with the hysteria of attack which is now being hurled at tbe Farmer-Labor Party in Minnesota, and recalls the 1920 campaign when the old parties engaged in their famous "Save the State from Socialism" campaign. In that campaign it is reported that more than five hundred tbousand dollars was expended to save the state for the war makers, the profiteers and propagandists and their political errand-hoys.

HOLD YOUR HORSES

Our contact with others demands daily; courage and resistance against tha temtation to be angry or annoyed.

What automohile driver has not at times become irritated hy the actions of other drivers? Then there is the ons with we associate who persists in soms annoying habit. And, that business transaction with a supposed friend with its evidence of unfair dealing. And that person who tried to put themself "in good" hy putting you "in bad."

In all such eperiences, a temptation to "get even" may present itself as humanly natural and just.

But Christianity suggests that we completely ahandon our hasty, angry or renvengeful atitude and permit Divine Love to manifest from which overcome in a dignified way and radinte a sweet orderliness and considerstion in all we think, say or do.

The Liberal Digest

"AN OUTRAGE," SAYS GOVERNOR OLSON ABOUT FERA CUT IN RELIEF APPROPRIATION

The following article was culled from the columns of the "Farmers Union Herald." The news article is from J. R. Wiggins, Pioneer Press Staff Correspondents and the comment following the news article is hy the editor of the Farmers Union Herald.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—All Minnesota work relief projects of any consequence will have to he abandoned if the state receives from FERA only $800,000 for its April needs, Governor Olson said hera tonight in an interview in which he denounced the adminstration's attitude on relief appropriations as "indefensible" and "an outrage."

Assisting this amount allotted hy FERA would meet only direct relief needs, the Governor said: "I think it an outrage to appropriate a hillion dollars for enlarging the Navy and to fail to make adequate provisions for the needy unemployed."

The 590 million dollars planned for relief purposes, he thought, should be three times greater and he found the position of the administration, in thus limiting its relief hudget, "indefensihle."

Tax on Capitalism Urged

"If we are going to bave this capitalistic system," Mr. Olson said, "I think it would be a fair thing to tax it to create things needed to sustain tbe unemployed."

Comment: We emphatically concur in the above statements hy the Governor of Minnesota. The abandonment of the CWA program of work and wages, and tbe substitution of a subsistence charity dole to the unemployed is hotb economically unsound and morally indefensible.

We have had much to say in this issue of the Herald on this subject, hecause if anything is to he done to make Congress face its responsihility in this matter it must be done now.

Congress bas added $282,000,000 to public employee and pension rolls. It has voted, as Governor Olson pointed out, nearly a hillion dollars to the Navy. The House has voted ot pay ex-soldiers over two billions of dollars, hut Congress has been hlind as a hat to the needs of nearly 10,000,000 heads of families, who are without work and wages.

Our prime duty as editor of this paper is to look after the interests of farmera and plead their needs, hut economie recovery cannot be hrought ahout by helping agriculture alone.

While Congress has hy no means given the farmers all that should be given, the fact must be admited that Congress has been generous with agriculture in comparison with what has been dons for the unemployed, and please remember that the unemployed are consumers of farm products. Anything which destroya this purchasing power injures agriculture

The addition of sugar beats, flax barley, rye and cattle to ths list of basic commoditiea now just about completes the picture for the farmer

The appropriation of $250,000,000 for cattle and dairying added to subsides for wheat, cotton, corn and tohacco, will make the farmers the beneficiaries of mora than a billion dollars in government suhsides.

If the Shipstead bill redefining the basis of parity price, adding taxes, interest and labor is approved, the farmer will havs the way paved for an approach to cost of production. Much of what is to come to the farmer will not be in operation until the crop of 1934 is marketed. The program of relief to agriculture is generons and when made effective on the 1934 crop will vastly change the agricultural picture.

Congress has done nothing for lahor and unemployment which will compare with what has heen done for agriculture.

We wonder if Congress has overlooked the fact that the unemployed have votes. Here in Minnesota the unemployed heads of families number nearly 50,000. Add to them the wives and you have 100,000 votes. Add the relatives who have been helping the unemployed and you have another 50,000, making a grand total of 150,000.

When the votes are cast this fall it may surprise a lot of people to find that Governor Olson and his Socialist platform may prove to be more popular than some of the Twin City newspapers seem to think will be the case

IN MEMORIAM

John A. Simpson, President of the Farmers Union,
Died March 14, 1934
By G. R. INGRAM, Pelto, N. D.

He has passed on. Our Peerless Leader—gone
To his reprieve from years of ceaseless toil.
Fallen in battle harness to redeem the homes
And loved ones of the toilers of the soil.
And from the Great Beyond unto the end,
Hark, I seem to hear his soul this message send:

"I am not dead, altho my earthly form has passed
For a short space from eyes of mortal men,
The Torch of Inspiration kindled—burns,
And will inspire their failing hearts again.

"Be ye not downcast . . . . neither be dismayed,
Tho I have fallen . . . , yet I point the way;
Yours the task to follow where I led,
The torch I hand to you to bear today.

And like the voice from Flanders Field' immortal dead,

"If ye break faith with me, I shall not rest.
Take up the cause for which I fought and died.
This sacred cause I leave as my bequest,
My work on earth is done . . for you the task ahead,
This charge I leave to you; to follow where I led."

A WARNING FROM MINNEAUOLIS

(St. Paul Daily News)

Unemployed in Minneapolis, estimated to number from 5,000 to 10,000 stormed the city hall Friday and were only quelled hy the police after extraordinary effort.

These men and women demanded resumption of tha CWA, among other things, and left no douht of their serious intentions.

Cessation of the CWA and provision of inadequate fund for RWA and direct relief hefore industry itself is able to ahsorh the idle have brought on this violent reaction.

Men and women provided with work and pay—even in a comparatively amall amount—are not willing to go back to unemployment and in adequate relief handouts.

In a way this protest is t healthy thing. Two years ago many Americans were so sunk in despair that even such a protest would have been impossihle. They hava gotten up their spirit now and, while such a demonstration with destruction in its wake is a terrihle thing to contemplate, it should serve as a warning to those who still hold to the belief that it is possihle to go on in this country with 12,000,000 unemployed and several millions in a state of semistarvation.

There is ahsolutely no excuse for persons starving in a nation which is today plowing under foodstuffs and has its warehouses hursting witb needed commodities.

THE TIME FOR CO-OPERATION

(Red River Valley Times)

There has never been a time when the farm cooperatives of the country were called upon to do more important work than they are doing now—both from the standpoint of the farmer and the consuming public.

It would not he fair to say that the government's farm relief policy bas failed. But it has not produced the henefits that were expected of it six or eight months ago. Prices, when related to the rise in the cost of living, are still low. Surpluses continue to glut an already overhurdened market. Matters have reached tha point where there is talk of declaring agriculture a puhlic utility, under strict governmental domination which would tell every farmer exactly what and how much he could produce every month in the year and give him a permit to do it.

The cooperatives are fighting hard to maintain the farmer's traditional individualism—and at the same time bring him around to policies that are essential to his every economic and social existence. They are striving to reduce surpluses—to stahilize markets—to fight his hattles with interests that oppose oc-operative movement.

They must win out. At this time, especially, they need the loyal help of all farmers and the puhlic. Aggressive action is essential. The cooperatives have the machinery in motion—and they know how to use it to the fullest advantage.

THAT FARMER-LABOR PLATFORM

(Union Advocate)

The Farmer-Labor platform adopted last week has hardly heen approved hefore the St. Paul Dispatch and the Minnespolis Journal put on their usual crying acts over the extreme radicalism of the embattled farmers and lahorers of Minnesota, Both of these very progressive journals appear shocked beyond expression; botb lament the fact that the radicals of the state are still—radical.

No one will deny that the swing was definitely to the left, nor did Governor Olson attempt to conceal the fact that he is more that a mere liberal. He admits he is a radical, and that he has lost patience with those who appear to he willing to allow Time and Tide to right the wrongs of reaction.

It would be ridiculous to presume that anything the Farmer-Labor party night do would ever find favor in the eyes of either the St. Panl Dispatch or the Minneapolis Journal. These two newspapers have been the moutbpieces of reaction for considerahly more than a quarter century. They have defended the policies of rugged individulism so long that they are unable to adjust themselves to the changed order of things. No donbt they still believe Mr. Hoover could have solved the misery of 17,000,000 jobless men and women. No douht they feel that President Roosevelt is a pale pink communist, and that his new deal is applied socialism. It is too much to presume they can see any hope of human salvation in a leader who does not bear the brand of the repuhlican party.

The Farmer-Labor platform admittedly is radical, but it is no less radical than the conditions rugged individulism hrought to a nation which now must admit that people starve because there is too much food, and that millions are impoverished because there is too much money in the vaults of the banks. The wildest schemes ever proposed hy any radical group could not produce a national calamity comparable with the one hrought ahout hy the leadersbip the St. Paul Dispatch and the Minneapolis Journal have always glorified while holding their noses against the realities known to all.

GAS LIGHT AND COMMUNISM

(Farmer-Labor Leader)

Decades ago a Britisher, William Murdoch, proposed lighting the streets of London with gas. The "best minds" of that day, and the newspapera declared that "A madman proposes to light the streets with smoke." After denying that it could be done, the newspapers gave "valid" reasons why it should not be done. Even if it were possihle. Those reasons were:

(1) THEOLOGICAL—As blasphemous, since God divided the light from the darkness.

(2) JUDICIAL—People should not be compelled to pay for gas they do not want.

(3) MEDICAL—The emanations of the night were injurious to health and people would stay out lata and catch a cold.

(4) MORAL—the fear of darkness would vanish and crime would increase.

(5) POLICE—The street lights would frighten horsea and embolden thieves.

(6) ECONOMICAL—Great aums would have to he sent to foreign countries for coal.

On a par with that ignorance is the bogyman that Capitalism raises in connection with the Farmer-Labor platform.

When the people puhlicly own and publicly operate the things that they puhlicly use there will be an eternal stop to panics, unemployment and economic insecurity. But nswspapers and politicians, fighting that forward step, wring their hands declaring that freedom from private monopoly will hring about Communism, regimentation, and red revolution.

There is no more truth in the statement that the Farmer-Labor program will produce any of those things than there was truth in the statement that lighting a city's streets at night would produce an increasa in crime.

CONDEMNATION PROCEEDINGS

STATE OF MINNESOTA
COUNTY OF PENNINGTON,
IN DISTRICT COURT
Fourteenth Judicial District

State of Minnesota, by Harry H. Peterson, Its Attorney General, Petitioner,

vs.

F. H. Gambell, Jacob N. Olson, The County of Pennington, Gertrude Holstein, Mel Johnson, Ronald J McDonald, James Meehan, Jr. City of Thief River Falls a municipal Corporation; Thief River Falls Lumber Company a corporation; Wiley Tindolph, Thomas Milson, Tilda Swanson, Elmer Hultin, Joel Hultin, Olga Thompson, Oscar Hultin, Alma Goodwin, Ellen Hultin, Harry Hultin, Leroy Hultin, Hazel Hultin, and Unknown heirs of Carl Hultin, Deceased; also all other persons unknown claiming any right, title estate, interest or lien in the real estate described in the petition herein,

Respondents.

IN THE MATTER OF THE CONDEMNATION OF CERTAIN LANDS FOR TRUNK HIGHWAY PURPOSES.

NOTICE

To the Respondents above named:

You and each of you are hereby notified that the above named petitioner will, on the 24th day of May, 1934 at 1:30 o'clock P. M. of said day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, present to the court above named, at chambers in the court house, at Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota, a petition in the above entitled proceeding for the condemnation of certain lands for trunk highway purposes, which said petition is now on file in the office of the clerk of the said court.

The objects of said petition are to have the lands hereinafter described, including all buildings thereon, condemned and taken by the petitioner for right of way for the laying out, constructing, improving and maintaining thereon of a trunk highway, the same being a part of Trunk Highway Number 73, formerly known as Trunk Highway Number 174; and to have the court determine and adjudge that the use for which such lands are sought to be acquired is a public use, and that said taking is authorized by law, and that said petitioner obtain the right to construct and maintain temporary snow fences upon the tracts and parcels of land herein described and the lands adjacent thereto as provided by law, and to have the court appoint commissioners to ascertain and report the amount of damages that will be sustained by the several owners and the persons interested on account of such taking, and to have an order of the court herein pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided; and you and each of you are entitled to and may appear before said court at said time and place and offer evidence relating thereto and show cause if any, why said petition should not be granted.

The lands described and proposed to be so taken are situate in Pennington County, Minnesota, and are described as follows and the names of all persons appearing of record or known to your petitioner to be the owners of said lands or interested therein, including all whom your petitioner has been able by investigation and inquiry to discover, together with the nature of the ownership of each as nearly as can be ascertained, are as follows:

Insects Converse in Notes

Ferret out your insect pests with a radio microphone! It can be done, according to an Oslo (Norway) professor, who has devised a special microphone that will make insect noises audible to the human ear by amplification through a loud speaker. Insects "converse" in notes so high that the human ear cannot hear them, but the super-sensitive electronic tube can do so and amplify them to audibility. There is a theory in some quarters that bees actually "broadcast" to one another on short waves even beyond the ultras, thus accounting for the fact that reconnoitering bees are shortly followed in "bee line" toward a source of honey by the bees of a hive in spite of the fact that the scouter may be far out of sight of ordinary hearing.

Chemical Waterproofs Clothes

Treatment in a new chemical bath converts fabrics into waterproof material so that men's suits, women's dresses, hats and even sheer stockings may be made to shed water. So efficient is the process that a velvet dress or a man's suit can be immersed in a tub of water without getting wet. Not a drop of water is absorbed by the treated material. A flag with the chemical coating will not be affected by rain. In the aviation industry, the process will be used in treating the wings of a plane so that they will shed moisture, thus preventing the formation of ice. Fabrics immersed in the chemical are said to be unchanged in physical appearance.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

OHIO FREEMASONRY IS NOT COMPROMISING ON LIQUOR

Following many inquiries as to the the subject of members of the craft selling liquors under the repeal of the 18th Amendment, the Grand Master of the Ohio Grand Lodge cited section 58 of the code of that Grand Lodge which is as follows:

"To engage in the selling of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes is a Masonic offense and should subject any Mason so offending to charges and expulsion; it should also be a disqualification for initiation or affiliation in a Masonic Lodge. Pro. 1911, p. 88."

Citing the Van Cleve resolution of the Ohio Grand Lodge which "makes it an offense against Masonry for members to engage in the selling of intoxicating liquors to be drunk where sold or for purposes other than medical and mechanical," the Grand Master declared that "every Mason in Ohio is bound by the above provisions and that lodges will be required to enforce a strict compliance therewith." The Grand Masters decision also incorporated prohibition against the use of intoxicating liquors in any Masonic lodge room, anteroom or banqueting room.

Declaring that it must be the constant care of Masonry "to preserve unsullied the reputation of the Fraternity," be added as his decision, based upon the Grand Lodge code, that "no Lodge or Masonic Temple company can rent or lease any portion of its building where the same is to be used for dealing in intoxicating liquors."

EXPERT WORKMEN HELP AVERAGE COMMUNITY

Many of our readers or their sons are interested in printing, automobile work, electrical work, machine shop, sheet metal, carpentry, drafting, farm mechanics, tractor work or similar lines. They would like to get special training to help them secure jobs, holds jobs or secure promotions in these lines.

Right here in our own home town or community we want the best workmen. They do the best job and give the greatest satisfaction. The home shop with properly trained men can do the job. We may have to send away for some special tool or supply, but there is no reason why our work men should not be able to do the job itself.

On the farm and in the town trained workmen are needed.

"Five million dollars were given to the residents of the State for trade and industrial training" to help realize the above ideal conditions.

Dunwoody Institute at Minneapolis is conducted without profit to help train men and boys to enter, to held, to secure promotion on the job.

take an interest and be helped to know the quality of eggs he has produced, and to understand how to overcome and eliminate those factors in egg production which brings or hastens spoilage of this product and thereby, cause his eggs to be graded in the lower grades, he says.

So that the egg industry of this state will expand and further develop high grade eggs must be marketed as it is only through marketing quality eggs in the Eastern markets by Minnesota dealers that a consumer's demand can be created for our eggs, Mr. Brodrick states. When our consumer demand is built up our eggs will merit a premium similar to that which California eggs are enjoying on the Eastern market today. The letter states that shippers who send inedible eggs east, not only destroys the market for Minnesota eggs but also violates the Federal and the state laws and is subject to prosecution.

Army Home

By HAZEL ARDEN

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate WNU Service

MOST army romances end with a newspaper account of the bridal couple emerging from an arch of crossed swords, but this particular romance of young Lieutenant and Mrs Rodney Ashurst goes on.

The first night, on their way by car to Rodney's post in the South, they stopped at the best hotel in Baltimore and had jellied consomme, broiled blue fish and peach melba, which they didn't eat. The second night, they stopped at an exclusive hotel in Roanoke and had cantaloupe, fried chicken and blueberry pie, some of which they ate. The third night, after a consultation over the honeymoon pocketbook, they stopped at the second best hotel in Greenville and had a dollar blue plate almost all of which they ate.

On the fourth day they reached their destination, the army post to which Rodney had been assigned after his graduation from West Point that June

A stout captain in the quartermaster corps met them at headquarters and ushered them to their new home. It was one of a group of unpainted wooden shacks that resembled squatters' huts one finds on ash heaps outside large cities. From their patched torred roofs tin chimneys emitted billows of soft coal smoke.

The captain got out, pried open a rusty, sagging screen door and waved the bride and groom inside, then left them with a cheery smile. He was so used to showing hardened army folk into dingy quarters that he didn't stop to sympathize with these young newcomers.

Sally Ann buried her head in Rodney's shoulder and wept heartbreakingly.

"I'm sorry, kiddie." he groaned "What'll we do?"

"I know what I'm going to do," announced Sally Ann, hysterically but firmly. "I'm going home."

But she decided to stay for two months, for after all, they were still on their honeymoon. But when the day came for her to go she didn't feel the least bit like travelling.

When they realized what was the matter, Rodney was terrified and begged her to go. If he hadn't suggested it, she probably would have But she stayed. She would let Rodney see little Rodney, then leave for ever.

Winter descended upon them, a chill rainy winter that spread a vast duck pond about their little low shack Sally Ann shut off one room of the house and tried to keep it warm with the pot-bellied stove which, with its sister, the kitchen range, comprised the heating system of the house.

At last, one spring day, the great event took place. Sally Ann spent an afternoon walking on the hot roof garden of the army hospital with Rodney pacing desperately at her side. Then the nurses brought her in and told Rodney to stay out.

After a long while they told him be could go in.

"You have a cute little daughter," they said, "and girls are just as nice as boys."

He merely glanced at the bundle on its way out to the nursery, cried for a few moments over Sally Ann's placid white face and went back to his little lonely shack.

Lying in the pleasant, yellow-walled hospital, Sally Ann was more determined than ever to leave Rodney and his dreadful little hut. She simply couldn't let her baby grow up there, to play on those damp floors and perhaps get hold of the deadly white insect powder they were always compelled to have about.

At her father's home there would be a sunny nursery, with warm, rugged floors and steam heat, sizzling against the frosty windows.

When they at last took Sally Ann back to the shack, she resolved that the next time she went out of it would be the last. Rodney gently deposited her on the quartermaster settee and she looked about.

A medley of colors met her gaze. The rough ugly boards were covered with yellow wall paper. Various pillows of clashing cretonne were carefully plopped on all the chairs. On the wavy floor, newly coated with orange shellac, was a tan rug that was not half bad.

Rodney grinned.

"Do you like it?" he asked, proudly. "I did it all myself. This is a real home now, isn't it, kiddie?"

Sudden tears scalded Sally Ann's eyes. Yes, this was home—this funny, terrible little shack that the government had provided and that Rodney had so valiantly tried to make livable. Thousands of army women, for generations had lived in worse.

She looked at Rodney and smiled bravely.

"I told you that I was going home after the baby came," she said. "Well, Rodney, I am home."

Largest Electric Shovel

The Engineering News-Record says that the largest power shovel in use today, according to its records, is not a steam shovel in the full sense of the word, but is an electric shovel. Steam as power for large shovels has been replaced largely by electric power or diesel engines. This electric shovel is in use in an open-strip coal mine at Duquoin, Ill. It weighs 1,750 tons and required 58 freight cars for transportation to the work. It has a bucket capacity of 20 cubic yards, which is the amount of material that can be handled in one operation. This material would weigh about thirty tons.

Gospel Verses Cut Into Ship

On the banks of the Wade river, N. Z., is being constructed one of the strangest craft ever made to ply the sea. It is the Gospel ship Ysabel, and is built by L. Reavis, who plans to sail it personally. He has measured everything by span of the fingers, and has kept a Bible handy while working, writing or cutting a text from the gospel on every timber of the vessel. The figurehead represents an angel holding an open Bible. The Ysabel is 41 feet long and rigged as a barquentine. The timbers were cut and shaped with an axe, saw and plane and a chisel made out of an old file. Auxiliary power will be supplied by a hand-driven propelling device invented by Reavis.

Hoarders Since Ancient Times

All sorts of ancient beads, cut to resemble an eye, found on the sites of old cities of Mesopotamia, are treasured by modern natives of the district as charms against every sickness and evil spell. It is difficult to obtain these charms, even at considerable price, says a returned traveler. Banded, semi-precious stones, such as agate and sardonyx, are prized as the most powerful. Natives of this region have been antique hoarders since ancient times.

Grapes Held Age Preventive

Live on a diet of grapes and raisins and the tartaric group of foods and eliminate those substances which bring old age. Thus declared a prominent English physician, at the recent harvest festival in Doddington, England. Today, he said, there was the dawn of a new life for the human race a happier and longer life, a life freer from disease and fuller in its capacity of brain and nerve power.

Cord of Wood

A cord of wood consists of or is equivalent to a pile closely stacked, eight feet in length, four feet in breadth and four feet in height. This is true whether the wood is in four-foot lengths or whether it has been sawed and split before purchasing. This is true in most states, but in Minnesota the law provides that a cord shall mean 110 cubic feet when ranked or 160 cubic feet when thrown loosely.—Washington Star.

Oyster Age

Oysters are not ready for marketing until they are from two to five years old—sometimes older. Some of the more hardy ones live as many as fifteen years. Incidentally, you can tell an oyster's age by counting the rings on his shell.

FIRE DESTROYS ATLANTIC AVE. RESIDENCE MON.

Entire Contents Lost in Blaze. No Insurance Carried

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the second house north of the Park Hotel on Atlantic avenue Monday forenoon. The house which was owned by Mrs. H. Prestebak and occupied by the Chester Rambeck family is almost a total loss, the entire interior being beyond repair and roof burned thru in several places. Al contents were completely destroyed. No insurance was carried on house nor contents.

Mrs. Rambeck had stepped over to the neighbor for but a few minutes when the fire was discovered, but it was already so far along in the tinder dry building that it had become like a raging furnace, The patent shingles on the roof helped to confine the fire within the building according to the firemen and probably prevented the blaze from spreading to other premises.

NEW APPRAISAL CARDS TO SHOW TAXABLE VALUE

Drastic New Assessment Rules Made to Prevent Tax Dodging

The most important element in the assessment of praperty far purposes of taxation is equality of valuation. Under the general property tax system, the value of property canstitutes the tax base, and as all property is supposed to contribute to the expenses of government in propartion to its actual value the most important step in a good assessment is equality in valuation. Equality in the distribution of tax burdens, whether such burdens be high low, says a statement issued by the state Tax Commission.

The use of appraisal cards is compulsary in the assessment of improved real property. Prior to 1928 no systematic method of valuing property had been followed in this state, except in some of the larger cities and villages, and in a few townships. Too often the assessment was based on a guest made without any serious attempt to classify and analyze the many factors that influence taxable values. The purpose of the appraisal cards in the assessment of real property is therefore to eliminate the guessing method as far as possible, and to substitute in its place a systematic method of valuation, based on careful classification and analysis of all factors affecting taxable values. The system is not introduced for the purpose of increasing taxable values, but rather to make them

No Exploitation of Soloists in St. Olaf Choir; Here May 6th

A remarkable feature of the work of the St. Olaf Lutheran Choir, which comes to Thief River Falls on May 6 is the fact that no soloists are exploited. In the works they sing there are many solo parts, and they are sung beautifully. But the name of the soloist never appears on the program. No stars, no "Red Granges," are developed in this choir.

Often reporters ask for interviews with the soloists to get their reactions to receptions on their concert tours. "We would rather you didn't do that," says the manager. "We do not push soloists. It's the choir that counts." "No, we have no stars in the Choir," says Dr. Christiansen.

Tickets are now on sale at the Thief River Pharmacy, Lambert's Drug Store and the Thief River Music Company.

National Farmer-Labor Party Being Formed Thruout Midwest States Says H. Y. Williams

"Midwest states are moving to the left and voters are demanding more radical action in the presence of increasing insecurity," says Howard Y. Williams, national director of the League for Indeptndent Action, and chairman of the platform committee of the recent Minnesota Farmer-Labor party convention, in a survey of the situation issued today by the League from its new offices, 209 Baltimore building, St. Paul Minn.

"In Michigan a Farmer-Labor party was formed on Washington's birthday, when about 400 progressives gathered in convention at Jackson. The county conventions will be held on Decoration Day and the state convention on the Fourth of July. Mr. and Mrs. Tom Williams of Grass Lake are acting as state organizers and able leadership is undertaking the task.

"At Madison, Wis., over 500 progressives gathered on March 3rd. The sentiment was overwhelming for a third party. It was the conviction of many that Bob La Follette will he squeezed out in the primary election if he runs on the republican ticket just as the Stalwarts sqneezed out his brother and Senator Blaine twa years ago. The law governing n new party is very indefinite in Wisconsin and so it was voted to take a test

Townley Supporters Gather in the City, Ask Pennington County Bolt Convention Choice

By R. M. Aalbu

Townley supporters wha are dissatisfied with the endorsement made by the Ninth District Farmer-Labor convention at Erskine when it endorsed Senator R. T. Buckler far Cangress gathered in this city about 50 strang last Saturday eveniag at the caurt rooms demanding a meeting with the Pennington county committee and with H. O. Berve, secretary of the Ninth District organization.

The committeemen who could be reached declared however that they had nothing to say and that as far as they are concerned they will abide by the decision of the Erskine convention and will expect Townley ta abide by the pledge he made to support the endorsee and not file in opposition to him. Mr. Berve stated the case very plainly saying, "The convention was properly conducted and its decision will stand as far as I am concerned. Mr. Townley was antvoted in spite of the fact that he came there with a very strong machine determined to put him across. If he files in spite of his given pledge we are going to figtt him and if he is nominated in the primary we shall fight his election in the general election."

The writer was the only Penniagton county man who met with the delegattion and was besieged with demands by the visitors that Townley should be allowed to file and fight it out in the primary agaiast Buckler. "If Buckler wins in the primary we'll support him." was the argument used. We stated emphatically that as far as we are concerned, we have neither the inclination nor the power to stop Townley from filing. Nevertheless as a good farmer-labor we feel that Townley should abide by his pledge. We take the position that the convention method as set up by the association, where duly accredited delegates elected and instructed by regular dues-paying members of the association choose the candidates to be endorsed and formulate the platform upon which they shall run, should stand, and party members must adhere to that principle if the party is to run its own affairs without the interference af Tam, Dick and Harry as is inevitably the case when the primary decides tbe issue. The convention system set-up has been used from Non-Partisan League days and Townley has been one of its chief exponents.

WPA Adopts a Resolution Favoring a 30 Hour Week

Meeting in regular meeting last Monday evening the Workmen's Protective Association favoring a 30 hour week and CWA rate of wages. The resolution pratested against the subsistence level of the RWA and EWA. Copies of the resolutions were sent to Governor Floyd B. Olson and to all members of Congress from this state.

A letter was received from the Civic and Commerce association advising the WPA that a committee has been appointed hy the president of the C and C for the purpose of coaperating with a similar committee from the WPA in the matter af stimulating employment in the city.

The organization also discussed the possibility of submitting a hid on the gravelling jobs being advertised by the county. This matter is to be taken up again next meeting when more definite information an the matter can be secured.

Discharged CWA Workers Are Reinstated With All Rights by State Board

All the CWA workers who were discharged on complaint of their foremen and subsequently appealed their cases to the Grievance Commitee during the closing days of the CWA work here have been reinstated with all rights restored, according to an announcement made hy H. O. Berve, attorney for the men.

The men were discharged daring the last days of the CWA work here on complaint of their foremen to the effect that they refased to caoperate with their foremen and for inefficiency. They appealed their caaes to the local Ameliation Board and when an adverse verdict was rendered, appeal was taken to the state board.

H. O. Berve, who appeared as attorney for the men states that he is in receipt of a letter from the state board, wherein that body states that the men shall be reinstated on the lists with full rights and their records cleared. The letter states that the board finds that the foremen and the discharged workera were equally at fault in the disagreement.

FIVE COUNTIES ADOPT MINIMUM PAY SCHEDULES

Action Taken to Comply With Federal Rules Governing Road Work

Members of the county boards of five counties met at Warren on Tuesday and worked out a uniform scale of wages and hours to be adopted on all road work in these counties. The counties represented were: Red Lake Norman, Kittson, Marshall and Pennington. These schedules are necessary in order to comply with federal regulations, Mr. Fowler, Pennington county auditor said. The scales set are as to minimum wages and maximum hours that contractors bidding on work in these counties must adhere to. Shorter hours and higher wages may be paid if the contractor so choose.

The rates adopted follows:

Common labor per hour	30c
Dumpman, per hour	40e
Teamster, per hour	30c
Cat operator, per hr.	50e
Blade grader operator, per hr.	50c
Elev. gruder oper. per hr.	50e
Dragline oper., per hr.	75c
Foremnn, per hour	50c
Teams, per horse hour	10c
Truck driver, per hour	49c
Cook, per month	$50
Gen. Superinten't per mo.	$100
Trucks per hour	85e

Contractors may not charge the men more than 90 cents per day for board nor work any man over ten hours per day not to exceed 60 hours each week.

Unofficial Returns Show Mahoney Lost By 210 in St. Paul

JOHN DILLINGER ESCAPES AGAIN

Two Dead and Four Wounded Is Toll in Wisconsin Resort Battle.

Mercer, Wisc.—John Dillinger, cop killer and bank robber, has escaped again. Cornered at a road house near here where he and his gang stopped for three days, the desperado shot his way to freedom through federal men and local police. Dillinger, with five or six other men and three women, took over the resort and kept the proprietor under constant watch for three days before the tip got out they were there. Federal men and posses converged on the place and in the ensuing gun battle, two men were killed and four wounded as the outlaws broke through the net. The three women were captured.

Those killed were Federal Agent W. Carter Baum of Chicago and Eugene Borsoneau of Milton, Wisc., a CCC worker who was an innocent victim of federal agents' machine guns. Those wounded were: Federal agent Jay C. Newman of Chicago, shot by Dillinger gang; John Morris, CCC camp officer near Mercer, mistakenly shot by federal agents; John Hoffman, gas station attendant at Mercer, mistakenly shot by agents and Constable Carl Christensen, Spider Lake, shot down by Dillinger gangsters.

Dillinger and his gang escaped from officers by a rowboat across the lake. They were pursued and forced to flee in a car. Police riddled the car with gun fire and chased the bandits toward the Twin Cities. The chase led through the woods over humpy roads at a speed of 70 miles an hour. Dillinger and the men with him exchanged cars after losing the police. They held up a motorist and forced him to give up his car. Reports of their escape came from persons all along the roads to the Twin Cities and police are now looking for the gangsters in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

This latest attempt to capture Dillinger brought the total number of persons killed trying to capture him, to thirteen. This includes peace officers, innocent bystanders and associates of the outlaw's mob.

France Orders Trotsky from Country

Paris—Leon Trotsky, exiled Russian revolutionist, was ordered to leave France by the government because of his efforts to organize a world revolution. Minister of the Interior Albert Sarraut announced the cabinet decided to withdraw the permission granted Trotsky to live in France because he violated the political neutrality which was made a condition of his stay at Barbizon.

Carnera-Baer Prices from $3.45 to $25

New York—A ticket price range of from $3.45 to $25 has been fixed for the Primo Carnera-Max Baer heavyweight championship bout to be held June 14 in Madison Square Garden's Long Island bowl. Prices, including all tax, were set at $25 for ringside ducats; $11.50 for inner circle seats; $5.50 for outer circle, and $3.45 for reserved seats. There will be no general admission.

Farmers to Get Billion More in 1934.

Washington—American farmers already enriched by nearly $200,000,000, will pocket $1,095,005,010 in benefit payments before the end of 1934. An analysis of expenditures to be made by the farm administration during the present year in its wheat, corn-hog, cotton, tobacco, and dairy reduction program indicates that it has only begun to approach its spending stride.

AAA Abandons Plan To Help Dairies

Washington—Confronted by strong opposition, the farm adjustment administration has abandoned, for the time being at least, the national milk control program it had proposed to help dairy farmers. The milk plan's failure was the first instance where producers had rejected an administration proposal for the benefit of a major farm commodity.

Jury Awards Girl $2,500 in Spanking

Topeka, Kan.—Miss Georgia Hill, Silvis, Ill., was awarded $2,500 by a federal district court jury here for injuries which she contended resulted from a spanking administered for an infraction of a no date rule by 10 feminine school mates when she was a student in the Goodland, Kan., high school.

BRITISH I. L. P. NOT JOINING MOSCOW

YORK, England—The annual convention of the Independent Labor Party, which broke off several months ago from the British Labor Party, has decided after a long and exciting debate, by 126 votes to 34, not to affiliate with the Communist International.

Clara Barstad is spending a few days at the O. J. Peterson home.

VOTING UNDER THE LABOR BOARD

Out of 45,202 workers who have voted in factory elections under the National Labor Board, 29,060 or 64 per cent have voted for union representation, and 14,420 or 32 per cent have voted against the unions. Approximately 4 per cent of the ballots were either blanks or invalid.—Information from an attorney specializing in "New Deal" legislation and administration.

President Roosevelt Proclaims May 1st as Child Health Day

Acting on the recommendation of the Congress, President Roosevelt has proclaimed May 1st as "Child Health Day." An announcement sent out by E. C. Hartley, state May Day chairman states that the day has been so observed in many ways thruout the nation in years past and suggests that teachers and educators could make it more effective by following out some of these suggestions:

1. Pageants on some health topic arranged for in the schools of the community.
2. Immunitization campaigns.
3. Arrangements for corrections of defects among school children.
4. Conducting chest or dental clinics.
5. Classwork in the Hygiene of Maternity and Infancy.
6. Other health projects which seem to meet special need in the community.

The president's proclamation follows:

MAY DAY PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS the Congress by joint resolution of May 18, 193b, requested the President of the United States to proclaim annually May 1 as Child Health Day; and

WHEREAS, the welfare of the nation is vitally affected by the health of its children; and

WHEREAS, the promotion of the best physical and mental development of the children is an essential part of the social-health program of the nation; and

WHEREAS, it is highly desirable that special consideration be given this matter in all parts of the nation;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and designate the first day of May of this year as child Health Day, and do urge all official and voluntary agencies and organizations and all individuals interested in Child Welfare to unite upon that day in the observance of such exercises as will result in a deeper realization by the people of the necessity for the protection and promotion of the health of the nation's children and in greater, unified effort to improve the existing child-welfare wherever it is found inadequate.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this 6th day of April, in the year of Our Lord nineteen hundred and thirty-four and of the independence of the Unitd States of America the one hundred and fifty-eighth.

NATIONWIDE PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN ANNOUNCED BY SHELL PETROLEUM CORP.

Believing that business is definately on the upgrade, Shell Petroleum Corporation is launching the largest advertising program in its history today, to introduce a new "super-Charged" Super Shell gasoline, it was announced yesterday by Paul Ryan manager of the sales promotion-advertising department.

More then 330 newspapers thruout twenty-six middle western states will participate in the campaign.

An outstanding innovation of the campaign is the featuring of famous comic-strip charactors in brightly colored figures in service station decorations. Two million play masks of these characters will be given away to children at Shell service stations during the opening days of the campaign.

POETIC SPRINGTIME BRINGS HEADACHES FOR ENGINEERS

To some persons, spring means blissful love, tra la, tra la; to others it means tender, rhapsodic poetry, or near poetry. It spells new hats for the ladies, some of them at least and planting time for the farmers. To the maintainance engineers of the state highway department, however spring means that season when a certain type of truck driver insists he can haul ten tons over a highway which has been restricted to a three-ton limit.

Furthermore, this same type of truck of bus man, says a highway department bulletin, is firmly convinced that if his particular load is not permitted to go thru without interference, a goodly share of the population of the state will starve or otherwise perish within 12 hours.

"At this season numerous stretches of roads are restricted as to the load limits which they can carry," says the bulletin. "The Highway department places these restrictions in force becaust heavier loads will tear the soft roads to pieces and cost the taxpayers thousands of dollars in unnecessary expense. A good gravel road or light bituminous surface can be ruined for a whole season by too heavy loads during the spring breakup.

"The department is besieged with pleas to make special exceptions for loads of groceries, loads of cattle feed, school busses, timber loads and almost every other commodity. The department cannot make exceptions. Either the roads must be restricted to all, or they must be left open to all, and in the latter case this would mean that they would shortly become impassable to even light traffic. Two or three small trucks can be used instead of one over-weight truck to get loads through, and passenger cars can replace school busses temporarily when necessary to preserve the roads at this season.

"Many drivers are anxious to cooperate in this, and they are serving the best interests of the public and themselves."

TEXTILE WORKERS TRACE ILLS TO CAPITALISM

SALISBURY, N. C.—The legislative program of the North Carolina Federation of Textile Workers, in introducing its demands for new labor laws, states:

"Capitalism has proven that it has no remedy for our present crisis. Not only is capitalism responsible for getting us into this desperate state of affairs, but the system of capitalism has failed to such an extent that it it not capable of getting us or the capitalists themselves out of the present mess.

"The N. R. A. is the latest attempt of capitalism to save itself. In this attempt it has failed miserably, as is shown by the wholesale violation of the codes and the government's inability to enforce them either in spirit or in letter."

THOMAS URGES THAT LABOR BRING PRESURE ON N. JERSEY RULERS OF THE 'NEW DEAL'

NEW YORK—Writing to Eric Ross, state secretary of the Socialist Party of New Jersey, Norman Thomas urges that labor unite to bring pressure to change the methods of "New Deal" administration in that state, and particularly to ward off a steady drift to a Fascist setup for Labor under the symbol of the Blue Eagle."

The letter follows:

"Unless labor can bring the effective pressure upon the government of the United States and the government of the State of New Jersey which will release the Amalgamated organizers now in Jail for picketing, labor not only in New Jersey but over the United States will suffer incalculably. The precedent set up by Vice-Chancellor Berry is contrary to liberty and truly oppressive. It must be fought by every means in labor's power. A similar injuntion is threatened even now in the Campbell Soup strike, and N.R.A. is cited as a reason for the injunction. This means a steady drift to a Fascist setup for labor under he symbol of the Blue Eagle.

"Besides fighting injuntions in general our friends of justice in New Jersey should do the following things:

"1. Demand the removal of Col. Eisner as State Administrator of NRA. His whole labor record as well as his connection with this particular case makes his position an affront to fair play. He is identified with a firm which rejected a tacit agreement to drop all legal cases when a strike was settled. He has always supported the injunction policy of the firm.

"2. Pressure should be brought upon the United States Government to grant no contracts for uniforms or anyhing of the sort to the Eisner Company.

"3. Pressure should be brought upon Governor Moore for an immediate pardon for the men still in jail. They are fighting our battle. We cannot afford to ignore their case."

If you had a record of the telephone calls you and your family make and receive in a month you would have some measure of how much telephone service gives for the few cents a day it costs.

In an emergency, one telephone call may be worth more than the cost of the service in a lifetime.

A New "Super-Charged" Gasoline That Gives up to 6900 More Firing Charges Per Gallon

Shell Refineries Develop a New Way to "Re-Make" the Chemical Structure of Gasoline . . . Resulting in More Mileage, Added Power and Quicker Starting STOP measuring gasoline by the gallon! It's what you get in your gallon that really counts!

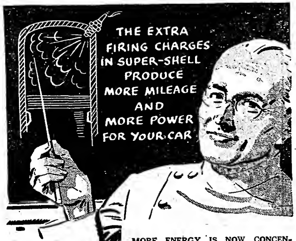
In the new improved Super Shell you get up to 6900 extra firing charges in every gallon. To give you these extra firing charges, Shell developed a costly new refining process. This new Shell process actually "re-makes" the entire chemical structure of gasoline. Even a single ounce contains as much as 54 extra firing charges!

Firing charges in your engine drive your car forward. That's why these 6900 extra firing charges in Super Shell give you more power, quicker pick-up, and extra mileage.



THE EXTRA FIRING CHARGES IN SUPER-SHELL PRODUCE MORE MILEAGE AND MORE POWER FOR YOUR CAR

MORE ENERGY IS NOW CONCENTRATED in every gallon of the new Super Shell. As many as 6900 extra firing charges in every gallon. Think what that means to you in greater power and mileage. You'll never use any other gasoline again once you've tried Super Shell.

"I GET BETWEEN 1 AND 2 MORE MILES to the gallon from super-charged gasoline, and it makes my car wonderfully responsive," reports still another delighted Super Shell user.
—Kathryn Trombley, St. Louis, Mo.

AUTOMOTIVE ENGINEER IS AMAZED! Mr. Allen Taylor (at left) tried super-charged gasoline and tells Shell technical expert, Mr. Robert I. Lewis, "This new Super Shell has the power we engineers have been looking for in gasoline these last few years."

F-L State Central Committee Holds Orgaization Meeting

Harris Becomes Member of the Leader Publication Committee

The state central committee of the Farmer-Labor association met at Saint Paul Saturday in its first meeting since the state convention when the new membership of the committee was selected. Because of the deliberate attempts at misrepresentation of the state program that is being indulged in by the opposition press the committee decided to appoint a legislative committee which will set to work at once to draw up a set of bills for introduction in the next legislature embracing the immediate demands of the platform. This committee is composed of J. L. McLeod of Grand Rapids; A. M. Landby of Warroad; Fay Child of Russell; C. F. Gaarenstroom of Fairmont and Theo. Wichman of Twin Lakes.

The Central committee also appointed as members of the Farmer Labor Leader publication committee; Paul A. Harris of this city; H. O. Peterson of Stillwater; C. R. Erickson of St. Paul; Henry Teigan of Minneapolis; Fay Child of Russell; A. F. Lockhart of St. Paul and Geo. Griffith of Minneapolis.

The state executive committee of five was completed with the selection of S. S. Tingle, St. Paul and Emery Nelson, Minneapolis. The other three members are A. C. Welch of Glencoe chairman, Paul A. Harris of this city vice chairman and Irene Welby, St. Paul, secretary.

The committee will meet again in two weeks to formulate campaign plans.

FORESTER CITES BENEFITS OF TREE PLANTING PROGRAM

Planting trees as a replacement crop is practical on some acreage retired under corn and wheat adjustment contracts, according to W. K. Williams, extension forester, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, who has worked out a program of forestry for farms in the corn and wheat belts.

In addition to tree planting on the contracted acres, where practical, the planting of trees on worn, eroded, or rough lands may prove more productive than growing cultivated crops on these lands.

"The benefits of planting suitable forest trees of the faster growing species of hardwoods or pines are obvious to many owners who have been growing timber on their farms," says Mr. Williams. "Timber products are useful on the farm and save cash outlays, or they can be sold in local markets. It is generally recognized that a growing crop of timber suitable for fence posts, fuelwood, poles, pulpwood or sawlogs increases the real estate value of the farm, prevents soil erosion and conserves fertility.

"Trees may be planted with home labor, and they require little or no further outlay except for protection from fire and livestock.

"Some of the more important species of trees adapted to southern Minnesota are: butternut, black walnut, maple, white oak, red oak, cottonwood, basswood, white ash, green ash, red pine, white pine, Scotch pine Jack pine, Black Hills spruce, white spruce and Norway spruce. Excepting walnut and butternut, these species all are suitable for planting in northern Minnesota, also. The proper choice of species to plant will depend upon the purpose of planting soil conditions, and the type of product desired."

Farmers wishing information about planting and caring for trees should see their county agents or write to Parker O. Anderson, extension forester, University Farm, St. Paul.

GERMAN SOCIALIST EXILES ARE HOPEFUL IN FIGHT AGAINST HITLER

NEW YORK— Writing from Prague, Czechoslovakia, Frederick T. Birchall, of the New York Times reports that "in all Europe, amid a general pessimism that foresees indefinite Hitlerite control of Germany with a consequent continuous peril to the peace of the world, there is one lone note of optimism, one confident prediction that before long a change will come and democracy will reign in Germany.

"It is here among the Socialist exiles from the Nazi Reich."

Neue Vorwaerts, the official German Social-Democratic paper, is circulating a million copies each week of a minature edition which contains about 25,000 words of Socialist news and propaganda, "with a kick in every paragraph," the Times correspondent reports. In addition, Socialist pamphlets, prepared with utmost ingenuity, are sent in bulk to trusted agents in Germany and circulated from hand to hand until they are worn out.

LITTERS COUNT IN CORN-HOG CONTRACT COMPLIANCE

If the producer farrows his full allotment of litters in 1934, but fails to raise for market these litters the number of pigs allowed him under his corn-hog contract, he will not be permitted to farrow additional litters, according to word received by County Agent R. M. Douglass from Dr. A. G. Black, chief of the AAA Corn-Hog Section.

"Paragraph 2 of the contract specifically states that the producer must reduce his hog litters in 1934, as well as number of hogs produced for market, by not less than 25 per cent," Dr. Black said. "After farrowing, the producer's pigs might be stolen, they might die from disease or the producer might lose them for any number of reasons, all of which are among the usual hazards of farm if we were to make exceptions of all these cases, the net reduction in hog production probably would not be large enough to raise the market price in any substantial degree.

"It should be kept in mind, however, that the producer who signs the corn-hog contract gets his hog reduction payments even though he should lose all of his hogs in 1931," Dr. Black pointed out. "Heretofore if the producer's hogs died or were stolen, he received no compensation for such loses. While we cannot assure a producer that his hogs will live until marketed, we can assure him that he will receive his reduction payments so long as he complies with the terms of the contract."

FIFTH ACTIVE SOCIALIST LOSES JOB AT WISCONSIN UNIVERSITY

MADISON—Ross Stagner, who recently managed the Socialist campaign in the municipal election here, faces loss of his position with the University of Wisconsin. Stagner received a letter from V. A. C. Henmon, head of the phychology department, "that the department will not recommend the renewal of your appointment to an assistantship for next year."

Stagners case is the fifth in which contracts of faculty members were not renewed after Socialist activity. Last June three contracts were not renewed, and one assistant was told that his contract would be renewed only if he would promise to devote "full time" to research work. The other cases were:

John Powell, instructor in English who ran last spring on the Socialist ticket for alderman of the 11th ward.

Delos Otis, assistant professor of history, who ran for supervisor from the 10th ward in 1932.

A. H. Tuttle, instructor in mathematics, active Socialist party member.

E. L. Vernon, assistant in chemistry, was told his contract would be renewed only if he abandoned active work in the Socialist party. Vernon is now a state organizer for the party in Wisconsin.

The central committee of local Dane county, in protesting to President Glenn Frank and the board of regents against Stagner's dismissal stated:

"The recent dismissal of Dr. Ross Stagner accentuates the feeling among liberally minded persons that discriminatory practices against university teachers by the university result from their radical political affiliations and activities. Such practices include not only dismissal but involuntary leaves of absence, lack of advancement in rank and pay, and boycotting classes, and explains the loss to the university within the past year or so of such persons as Drs. Hart Meiklejohn, Dawson, Jacobson, Vernon, Powell, Otis and Tuttle.

"Discrimination exists also in that there are no persons of the rank of assistant professor or higher in the university who are members of the Socialist party, although there have been admittedly many brilliant students of the party attending the university and although a large number of the taxpayers of Wisconsin support the principles of Socialism."

A. A. A. DEFINES WHEAT PROPORTIONS ALLOWED IN CONTRACTED ACREAGE

Land seeded to wheat mixed with other grains will be classified under the wheat reduction contract, according to the proportion of wheat contained in the seed mixture. This ruling has been anounced recently by the wheat section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

If the total mixture so seeded contains 50 per cent of more wheat by weight, the total area so seeded will be classified as wheat acreage; if 25 per cent or less of wheat, as non-wheat land; and if more the 25 per cent but less than 50 per cent whteat, "that portion of the total acreage which the weight of the wheat seeded bears to the total weight of all the grain seeded" will be considered wheat acreage.

For instance, if the farmer should seed 60 acres to a mixture containing one-third wheat, by weight, 20 acres would be considered as sown to wheat. Signers of the wheat contract must obtain special permission from their county allotment committee to seed mixtures of wheat with barley, oats or flax. They must specify in their request the acreage to be seeded and the proportions, by weight, of the various grains in the mixture. The growing crop will be inspected to varify the producer's statement.

HITLER ADMITS THAT HE CAN'T END UNEMPLOYMENT

Chancellor Adolph Hitler admitted publicly while addressing the winter relief workers recently that his government can not abolish unemployment.

Before coming into power it was Hitler's and his follower's boast that if they were given complete power they would abolish unemployment and want in Germany. Now the dictator says that a "certain percentage" of the population must of necessity "remain unemployed in a nation of 65 million people. If we can succeed in reducing the number of unemployed to about 1,000,000 then we can consider the problem of unemployment solved," the Chancellor said.

MR. PRICHARD SUGGESTS AN HISTORICAL SOCIETY

We visited fr en hour or so with W. W. Prichard, Sr., last Sunday and his recounting of some of the early history of the community has brought home to us very forcibly the need of creating a Pennington County Historical Society. The suggestion was mode by Mr. Prichard that such an institution should he formed end we heartily agree with him. We invite suggestions and if sufficient interest can be stirred up we shall be glad to arrange for a meeting for the purpose of organizing a society.

In the rush end crush of the daily grind we are prone to overlook the finer things of life. It is possible that living in an age of economic madness it is only natural that we may forget that transportation systems, paved streets, broad highways, fine churches, splendid schools, and elecric lighting systems didn't just happen. They are the result of hard work and much self-sacrifice on the part of our forebears. Let us act now to peretuate for posterity a record of the past. Let us remember that old landmarks are disappearing and with each passing year more and more of the early hisory of Thief River Falls and the surrounding community is passing into oblivion, never to be recalled.

Old faces are vanishing, ond with each passing month the ranks of the pioneers are thinning. With each passing day their steps become more feeble and the opportunities for chronicaling the early history of the community becomes more end more limited. In a few; all too few years, n vast storehouse of information about the early days of our community; available now, will have passed with the last of the pioneers to the Great Beyond and forever lost to mortal men.

The way the pioneers braved and conquered the trials, the heartbreaking adversity, the backbreaking labors of the wilderness should be e source of inspiration to future generations. The hopes, the aspirations, the ambitions of the early settlers should be interesting to posterity. The problems they faced end their methods of meeting them; the success of their enterprises as well as the mistakes they made should teach valuable lessons to our children.

A SANE ECONOMIC SYSTEM, OR——CHAOS

The daily press of the state and to a smaller degree the weeklies who feed at the trough of fat advertising contracts dispensed by "Big Business," would like to make the people believe that the Farmer-Labor association intends to overturn the constitution, the government, the home, the church, and ohout everything else that the true American citizen holds dear, end that the Farmer-Labor platform adopted at the recent state convention states such intent. Nothing could be farther from the truth, as anyone who knows the Farmer-Laborites and has read the platform knows. The Farmer-Labor association is the only political organization in the state of Minnesota today that stands for orderly, sane and constitutional progress. It has always stood for majority rule thru regular peaceful and constitutional channels. It still stands for such methods of progress. We are not revolutionists. We are radicals—true radicals.

The old parties are the parties of revolution end insanity today. The Republican party thru its refusal to do anything to alliviate suffering and distress in the face of ever lenghtening bread lines, evictions, foreclosures and rising crime actually foster and feed the flames of revolution. The democratic party thru its insistence on dabbling with palliatives, refusing to recognize the fact that it is the high wages of capital that prevents a recovery. Its bullheaded piddling with insane economic experiments has proven it absolutely unable to cope with the situation.

Only the Farmer-Labor association understands the situation, or understanding it dares to face the issue squarely. The Cooperative Commonwealth is the logical next step in our social, economic end political evolution. Anyone giving history even a cursory study must admit that fact. It is admitted that under the system of individualism, or capitalism if you prefer the word, the country has expanded. Under the whip of competition humanity has been forced to strike out and continually conquer new frontiers. The economic pressure has driven mon to open the wildernesses end build new empires. At a frightful loss in lives and human happiness it is true, but nevertheless the battles have heen won.

Now we stand at the dawn of a new era. We can no longer run away from competition. We must conquer it or be conquered. We must destroy economic (not personal) competition or be destroyed by it. Competition must be displaced by cooperation if we are to survive.

The Farmer-Labor association recognizes this fact and meets the issue squarely. In the preamble to our platform we declare;

> That capitalism has failed and immediate steps.. must be taken by the people to abolish capitalism in in a peaceful and lawful manner end that a new sane and just society must be established——."

and again;

> "In order to bring about this cooperative commonwealth and also for the purpose of adopting legislation for the immediate relief of the peple . . . ."

The cooperative commonwealth is our ultimate objective; the goal towards which we strive. But we are not destructionists, we realize that the transition must be gradual. The American people suddenly transplanted into a cooperative commonwealth, (even if a sudden transition was possible) would be as out of place as a fish out of water; thrown up on dry land and told to walk. They wouldn't know what to do with it, nor how to go about it Any attempt at a sudden change would mean armed conflict between our citizens. It would mean destruction; inevitable destruction of some of the finest things of western civilization, and we repeat; we are not destructionists: We will protect the things that our people have labored for three hundred years to establish; schools, libraries, hospitals, homes, transportation systems, churches, and above all our freedom of speech, press and assemblage. We will fight any attempt to establish a dictatorship, whether that be by a Stalin, a Mussolini, or a Hitler. We will fight for our right to self-government—on that issue, and on that issue alone will we take up arms,—if that becomes necessary.

We demand immediate legislation to make it possible to feed the starving, administer to the needy, to put workers back into useful labor, to establish security of tenure to the farmers and a price for their products that will insure them a decent American standard of living. Always with the ultimate object; the Cooperative Commonwealth in view. Progressing to the time when no man shall collect tribute from his fellow man for the privilege of living on an earth endowed humanity by an Allwise Creator. When all man shall reap the full benefit of his labor, each according to his ability. and talent and no man's greed shall be another man's starvation. No, indeed, we do not hedge on our statements nor apologize for our platform.— We glory in it.

FARMER TO BE IN BEST POSITION OF ALL
Farmers Union Herald

The St. Paul Pioneer Press for March 26th contains an editorial captioned "Trouble Brewing" in which the editor points out that the schedule of farm prices compared with the status of industry and labor shows the relationship as of March 1st to be as follows:

Wholesale prices, 105 per cent of pre-war; industrial wages, 179 per cent; farm wages 81 per cent; general commodity prices, 118 per cent; farm commodity prices 76 per cent.

But the editor enitrely overlooks the farm bonuses on corn, hogs, wheat cotton and tobacco which are separate and distinct from the farm commodity prices themselves, and the full effect of which will not be felt until payments are completed during the year 1934.

On the farm which our family operates in Iowa, our corn and hog rentals and bonuses for 1934 will be greater in amount than the entire receipts from commodities marketed in 1933, and these bonuses are in addition to whatever the hogs and other things bring when matured and sold.

With the addition of the dairy program the American farmer will be receiving benefit payments in 1934 on all the major crops or commodities produced on the farm.

The farmer will be able to live on his bonuses and rentals regardless of crops and prices. Mind that we say the farmer will be able to live, not make money.

The wages of industrial labor look good on paper and in terms of percentages, but there are said to be ten millions of able-bodied men and women who are not included in these percentage tables because they belong to the army of the unemployed.

Four millions of the ten are being demobilized by the C. W. A. and sent back to charity rolls. We can get no comfort out of index figures which show wage scales of the fortunately employed t be higher than pre-war, when millions of destitute workers have no jobs and no incomes.

Were these destitute millions earning wages, they would have purchasing power to consume at least a part of the farm production surplus. For these unfortunates there are no bonuses. There in to be, instead, a miserable dole of charity, just sufficient to keep soul and body together.

The Congress of the United States permitted the C. W.A. to be disbanded with protests only from the little hand of progressives. Of all the forgotten men and women for whom protests should be the loudest, it is this forlorn and destitute army of the unemployed.

Nor need these protests to be made solely on the account of sympathy. The unemployed with their lack of purchasing power delay recovery to agriculture which suffers as much from underconsumption of the masses as from over-production of products.

THE SCHOOL CRISIS
Union Advocate

That a real crisis exists in American schools is graphically set forth in a report just issued by the Teachers' Research Council of New York City. This report, based on a national and authentic survey, reveals the startling fact that more than 2,000 rural schools in 24 states did not open in 1933, and 20,000 schools had closed by April 1. There are 2,280,000 children of school age who are not in school, although there are 250,000 teachers in the United States unemployed. More than 25,000 teachers have been discharged so their pupils could be added to the already over-crowded school rooms. And because of slashed budgets and bankrupt municipalities thousands of the teachers still employed have $40,000,000 due them because of payless paydays. Teachers' cash salaries during 1933 averaged less than $1,000.

Thus the treasured heritage of America faces the gravest crisis in its history. Our school system has been our national boast for more than half a century. Today it is treatened by penny-saving economists and tax-dodging interests who would willingly demoralize our public schools if they can save a few dollars in taxation by so doing.

THE CASE OF DR. WIRT
(St. Paul Daily News)

Poor Dr. Wirt started his publicity stunt by saying that a member of the brain trust told him that the President was "the Kerensky of this revolution." Put on a congressional investigating stand he has changed his story: It was not a brain truster, but a newspaper correspondent never connected with the government.

Those at the dinner where Dr. Wirt says he heard the Kerensky statement deny that it was made. Indeed, they say that no one else could express any opinions because Dr. Wirt made an uninvited uninterrupted half-hour speech on his pet hobby in favor of revolutionizing the American monetary swstem.

Describing Mrs. Roosevelt's project for homestead-factory development to save the unemployed in West Virginia Dr. Wirt soberly called this a "communistic effort." We shudder to think what he would call the Hoover RFC.

Dr. Wirt has not harmed the Roosevelt administration. Mrs. Roosevelt and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who seems to be his particular hates, are more secure in the esteem of the country than when he began his low comedy.

He has succeeded merely in making himself a national laughing stock. We are sorry. Because, before he went off on this strange mental tangent, he was a great man in his special field. For 20 years he had the courage to lead in educational reform. And, curiously in the light of his present cheap publicity parading, his behavior was marked by modesty and humility.

So, however much Dr. Wirt now invites us to ridicule him, we can't get fun out of it.

BLIND ECONOMY

If the political and economic leaders had followed the teachings of the schools, we should not be in our present difficulties. The schools never taught war, they taught peace; the schools never taught extravagance, they taught thrift; the schools never taught disregard for law, they taught respect for law; the schools never taught national isolation and selfishness, they taught international participation and co-operation. Now the people, as they strike out blindly to save themselves from economic disaster, are about to wreck the schools as if that would accomplish their end. —Lotus D. Coffman.

It is no exaggeration to say that General Johnson and some of his lieutenants have permitted industrialists "to get away with murder" in many of the codes. This has gone so far as to menace the entire recovery program. —Labor.

FARM AND MARKET
By
R. A. Trovatten
Minnesota Commissioner of Agriculture Dairy and Food.

Many of our farmers are unable to secure seed loans from the federal government through refusal of landlords and creditors to waive 1934 crop liens. Under the federal emergency seed loan act, crops must be free from incumbrances before loans are made. Farmers who have signed corn-hog reduction agreements are also disqualified.

These farmers are in desperate circumstances. Seeding time is here What are they to do?

In view of such conditions I have contacted senators and congressmen in Washington urging that the seed loan requirements be modified. Simultaneously, I made an appeal to business men in agricultural communities to make surveys of conditions in their respective localities and, insofar as they can, aid in providing seed to destitute farmers.

This is not only e humanitarian proposal, but it is good business. Without crops in e locality, business men in the area will suffer jointly with farmers.

Landlords end creditors who refuse to sign seed lien waivers are in the same predicament. Without a crop, what chance have they of collecting? Something must be done about this serious situation with dispatch. Seeding time will not wait. If there s too much delay, it will be too late.

WEEKLY WASHINGTON LETTER
BY
Congressman Ernest Lundeen

Prominent House leaders today ventured adjournment in June. They predicted Congress would remain in session until July or August, if this were not a campaign year. The District of Columbia $20,000,000 Appropriation—a minor bill—has occupied several days. Remember Congress meets every year on the 3rd of January, and from now on chances are that Congress will remain in session the first six months; the adjournment will cover the balance of the year. Special sessions will be rare events from now on.

Frazier-Lemke Bill

Minnesotans will be astounded to hear that 141 members signed the Frazier Bill motion to discharge Committee to bring the bill before the House for consideration. Only four more members were needed to discharge the Committee. If Minnesota had elected four more Farmer-Labor members to Congress in the last election, the bill would have been brought to the floor at that moment. However, instead of four more members signing and bringing the bill up for immediate action, twelve members were called in by the leaders and rather forceably told to scratch their names off the list bringing the number back to 129; however, members again changed their minds and again signed the petition, bringing the number up to 131.

Why should there be so much strong opposition the farm refinancing at low interest rates when the government is busy refinancing great corporations, right and left by the billions? Money is furnished to banks at interest rates of ⅛%. So far as I am concerned I will speak and vote against adjournment until the Frazier-Lemke Bill has been enacted into law. I favor a 2 per cent rate of refinancing instead of 3 per cent which I consider too high. I know thousands of farmers who cannot even pay 2 per cent; however 3 per cent will be far better than the present rates and costs. There is no more important legislation before the Congress today, than the Soldiers' Adjusted Service Certificates Bill now before the Senate, and the Frazier-Lemke Farmers' Refinancing Bill.

Public Works Projects

Money must be provided for enormous public works projects. By this time, the plans of architects and planning engineers ought to be ready for our great public works program, employed directly or indirectly millions of men. If the Public Works are slowed up when they should be in high gear, billions must be voted for relief. There is no escape—either jobs or unemployment insurance— one or the other.

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

BOOKS ARE THE FUNDAMENTAL BASIS OF PROGRESS

How easily we take for granted the comforts of modern life, nor pause to consider that most of them are derived from the hard labors of the past.

We see science, medicine, industry, architecture, engineering, salesmanship, institutions of mercy and healing, religion art, craftsmanship and the three route transportation advance without realizing that our world of magic end fairyland—a previously unknown heritage—has come to us in a lege measure through books.

How would we get on without books?

Books give nations, history; scientists, records; schools, libraries; youth, education, children, pleasure; leisure, profit; clergymen, thought; civilization hope; art, masterpieces; and communities a social medium for the sane use of time including e rich opportunity for aiding students, through the library—an institution, the value of which can never be estimated

ARMAMENTS ENDANGER DEMOCRACY, SAYS SOLIALIST HOOPES

WASHINGTON, D. C.—"Unless the people exercise their democratic power to abolish armaments, armaments will be used to overthrow democracy," Darlington Hoopes, Socialist state legislator from Reading, Pa., told the Sub-Committee of the Judiciary of the Senate in the hearing on the independent disarmament amendment.

"Not only do armaments endanger international peace," Hoopes said, "but they threaten the continued existence of democratic government. They make it possible for a small group of selfish labor exploiters to seize control of the government, dissolve the parliament, set up a dictator like Dollfuss, and crush all opposition with bombing planes and cannon. The results in Austria indicate how little chance the people have against a dictator with armaments at his command."

It is a characteristic of all animals living at great depths that they are either sightless or provided with very large eyes that react only to a phosphorescent light that is thrown off by many of the creatures living in darkened areas.

The Liberal Digest

LITTLE FELLOW ALWAYS PAYS FOR PANICS SAYS WORLD-FAMED ECONOMIST
By Scott Nearing

The income study recently published by the U. S. Department of Commerce reported a decrease in salaries paid of 40.3% between 1929 end 1932.

As the wage decrease for the same years was 60.2 per cent it seemed clear that while the workers had carried the heaviest burden of the slump, the salaried workers had taken a goodly share of the burden.

These figures for salaried workers include all those paid on a salary basis—bookkeepers and clerks as well as mensgers and chief executives.

The report of the Federal Trade Commission in salaries of corporation in salaries of corporation officials seems to show that the salary cuts were not taken by the higherups, but were borne largely by the lower salaried groups. The Federal Trade Commission figures indicate three definite policies as regards the salaries of high officials during the depression.

Raise Salaries

The first policy was to raise salaries. Thus the Standard Oil Co. of California paid its president $100,000 in 1929 and $150,000 in 1932; the William Filene Co. of Boston paid its president $66,666 in 1929 and $89,333 in 1932; the Bethlehem Steel Corp. paid its chairman, Charles M. Schwab $150,000 in 1929 and $250,000 in 1932 the American Chicle Co, paid its chairman $50,000 in 1929 and $75,000 in 1932; the Coca-Cola Co. paid its president $100,000 in 1929 and $120,000 in 1932.

Among the companies listed by the Federal Trade Commission, the corporations that raised executive salaries during the slump are exceptional but not rare.

The second policy was to hold executive salaries stationary. The Borden Co. paid its president $110,000 in 1929 and 108,000 in 1932; the Diamond Match Co. continued its president att $100,000; the Burroughs Adding machine Co. and the Barnsdall Corp. continued their presidents at $50,000.

The third policy was to cut executive salaries. The president of the Du-Pont Co. received $99,999 in 1929 and $84,750 in 1932; the president of Packard Motors was cut from $125,000 to $63,458; the president of Eastman Kodak was cut from $100,000 in 1929 to $70,961 in 1932; the presidents of the American Smelting and Refining and of American Machine and foundry were each cut from $50,000 in 1929 to $42,000 in 1932; the chairman of American Sugar Refining Co. was cut from $100,000 in 1929 to $79,200 in 1932; the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey cut its president from $125,000 in 1929 to $72,295 in 1932; and the U. S. Steel Corp. cut the salary of its president from $150,000 in 1929 to $56,667 in 1932. At the same time however, it raised the salary of its finance committee chairman from $100,000 to $192,578. In a number of their cases, salaries for 1933 were considererably higher than those for 1932.

Two facts stand out with startling clarity from these Trade Commission figures. The first is the enormous salaries that are still being paid to the chief executives of U. S. corporations; the second is that, with minor exceptions, these high officials, despite their big salaries, took far less in cut percentages than the minor salaried officials.

Habits of Cochineal Insect

When the female cochineal insect comes out of the egg it is minute but very active. It has six legs which it uses freely, running over the surface of the coctus until it finds a suitable spot, where it settles down, inserts the sucker with which it draws out the juices, ond for the rest of its life remains fixed firmly to the plant.

"MY COUNTRY"

("I don't like war but I want to protect my country."—U. S. Army General, Advocating Military Preparedness.)

Protect "my country"! But where is "my country"? Who has decreed that "my country" shall include only the geographical area bounded by the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, Canada and Mexico? Who has decread that "my country" shall embrace only those men, institutions, and events which lie between the year 1492 and the present? Who may thus limit and define "my country"?

Where Isiah lifted up his voice for human justice, there is my country. Where Plato announced the reality of the spiritual there is my country. Where Jesus offered his life for men, there is my country. Where St. Francis lived the compassionate life, there is my country. Where Shakespeare swept the human scene into drama, there is my country. Where Luther struck for the liberty of the soul, there is my country, Where Darwin discovered the method of the Creator, there is my country. Where Magna charta was signed, there is my counry. Where Milton sang, where Rembrandt painted, where Geothe wrote—there is my country.

Who draws these little lines, limiting my allegiance by accidents of time and space?

Where Gandhi fights a swordless fight for freedom, there is my country. Where Schweitzer heals the bodies of black men, there is my country. Where Kagawa champions the underprivileged, there is my country. Where brave men stand firm against Hitler's barbarism, there is my country.

I would protect my country. For my country I would fight against all enemies. Where is my country and who are its enemies?

Wherever men and women lift the flag of justice, or of beauty, or of freedom, or of truth, or of peace, or of fellowship, there is my country. Who enslaves men in body for the sake of gain, or in mind for the sake of power, who tramples on others' rights, who closes the doors of opportunity, who serves the dark gods of superstition and prejudice, who turns his eyes toward the past, who denies to others the privileges he desires for himself—he is my enemy. God help me to protect my country against all enemies!

Days of the Week

The seven-day week as a unit of time dates from prehistoric antiquity. Each of the days corresponds to one of the seven moving heavenly bodies then known. Sunday and Monday are named after the sun and moon; Tuesday was named for Mars' (Tues in Norse) day; Wednesday, Mercury's (Wodan's) day; Thursday, Jupiter's (Thor's) day; Friday, Venus' (Freia's) day, and Saturday, Saturn's day.

COMPLIANCE FORMS CALL FOR REPORTS OF WHEAT SIGNERS

Farmers who are taking part in the national wheat adjustment program will soon be asked to fill out a "1934 proof of compliance" hlank which will record the facts and figures of their crop activities in carrying out the terms of the wheat adjustment contracts.

Among tht definite information which will be filled out in the compliance forms will be:

1 1933 wheat record of acres seeded and acres and bushels harvesttd.

2 1934 wheat record of acres of seeded and acres abandoned.

3. Acres, if any, destroyed in order to comply with contract.

4 Reason if necessary, for seeding less than 54 per cent of base acreage.

5 Serial numbers of other contracts if farm was entered as "joint compliance."

6 Acres of wheat on other land not under contract.

7 Serial numbers of other farms under wheat contract.

8 Use of contracted acres.

9 Use of commercial fertilizer.

10 Amount of wheat processed for home use.

Contract signers can help speed up the inspection work and the arrival of their next wheat checks if they will have as much as possible of the information ready to give the wheat supervisor when he comes to measure the land. Certain parts of the compliance blank will be filled out and signed at thet time.

NEW APPRAISAL CARDS TO SHOW REAL ESTATE VALUE

more equitable than heretofore, to the end that our tax burdens may be apportioned more equitably among the people who should bear them.

An appraisal card which will be on file with the county auditor in the future will be filled out by the assessor, one for each parcel of taxable real estate. The card will besides the owners name and a description of the property, carry the following information which the owner will be expected to supply: loans against the property, insurance carried, rentals, cost of remodeling and improvements, age, condition, purpose for which it is used, size of buildings, and all construction features as well as original cost.

After the assessment work has proceeded a week or two, some maps of various blocks in different parts of the city will be made showing tenative values and real estate owners will be invited to call and view them, and may offer suggestions. Dates and place for this will be announced later, according to Mr. Senstad, local assessor.

Owners of personal property and money and credits are urged to list them all to the assssors as neglect or refusal to do so only results in a fifty porcent penalty to the owner.

NATIONAL FARMER-LABOR PARTY BEING FORMED

case to the state Supreme Court. Phil La Follette has taken the brunt of the work in tha action that is now pending before the court. Progressives seem satisfied that the court will render a decision permitting them to go ahead and form a party. A decision should he forthcoming the first week in May and a state convention to launch the new party held about the middle of May. Coming into the November election against the conservative candidates of the two old parties, Bob La Follette and a Farmer-Labor party in Wisconsin are bound for victory.

"In Iowa four state-wida conferences of progressives have been held and a Farmer-Labor Federation organized. Alvin Coons of Ames was elected state organizer and county units are being established. The state convention in June expects to launch a state Farmer-Labor party if botb old parties nominate conservatives.

"In South Dakota three state conferences of progresives led to tha formation of a Farmer-Labor Economic Federation with E. L. Gordon of Huron as state organizer. In North Dakota a bitter fight within the Non-partisan League may result in a Farmer-Labor party.

"Evidences indicate that progressives in Indiana, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Utah and Montsna may follow a similar program."

Horse Comes Back

The horse, it is said, is coming back, but nowhere has he been ushered in so impressively as at Hutchinson, Kan., where horseflesh displaced the motorized milk wagon. The dairy owner who, for reasons of economy, turned back the clock to the premotor age, made an occasion of it, and the townspeople turned out several hundred strong, according to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The first wagon, shining white and rubber tired, was ceremoniously christened—with Grade A milk, of course. The wagon-maker, the harness man and the blacksmith made speeches acclaiming the equine renaissance. The cows were among those present, and looked on placidly as the barnyard resumed its old precedence over the garage.

Good "American" English

Cultivated people on both sides of the Atlantic speak the English tongue equally well, according to Dr. Walter Hervey, founder of the American Good Speech society. The best English, and what Doctor Hervey calls the best American are so nearly alike today that, in his opinion, according to the Irish Independent, they can not be distinguished the one from the other. When King George or President Roosevelt speaks, the spoken words are not marred, we are told, by any "local tang or distortion." As a result of education the same exquisite English is spoken, Doctor Hervey maintains, in both New York and London by the finest actors, the best preachers and the best orators.

Freak weddings, in which the bride and groom leave the church under arches of golf clubs, meat choppers, bicycles and other articles, are being attacked in England. One leader of the crusade declares that soon rolls of wall paper, cans of paint, and possibly coffins will be utilized as decorations. He adds, dryly, that if the craze continues, bankers and clerks will use currency instead of confetti.

OFFICIAL Proceedings

Pennington County Bd.

SPECIAL MEETING APRIL 24th, 1934.

Pursuant to call the board of County Commissioners met at the office of County Auditor, Tuesday April 24th, 1934 at 9:30 o'clock A. M.

Members Present: Lee, Kinghorn, Roy, Ness and Mendt.

Members absent: None.

The meeting was called for the purpose of discussing rates of pay and hours of labor to be observed by contractors on jobs to be let in Pennington County and establish a scale to be followed under provisions of the Federal Recovery Act.

Commissioner Roy moved that the board hold a joint session with the Marshall County Board and representatives of Norman, Red Lake and Kittson Counties at Warren at 1:30 P. M. today. Motion seconded by Commissioner Ness and carried.

Commissioner Ness moved that the County accept proposal of Leonard Erickson to tear down the old Foundry Building on County property in Thief River Falls and clean up premises, Erickson to pay the County $40.00 for the brick salvaged. Motion seconded by Commissioner Roy and carried.

Commissioner Roy moved that the Board recess to attend the Joint Board meeting with the Marshall County Board at Warren at 1:30 P. M. Motion seconded by Commissioner Lee and carried.

RECESS

The Board reconvened at 4:30 P. M. after the Joint session with Marshall County Board.

The following resolution which had been agreed upon by the representatives of Pennington, Marshall, Red Lake Kittson and Norman Counties as the minimum scale of wages and maximum hours of work under the N. R. Schedule for road work in these counties was offered by Commissioner Ness, who moved its adoption:

WHEREAS the attention of the County Board has been directed to the adoption of the Contractor's Code in accordance with the National Industrial Recovery Act of the Federal Government and that the same became effective on March 14th, 1934 pursuant to the executive order of President Roosevelt; and

WHEREAS heavy penalities are imposed for violation of said code, and

WHEREAS, ARTICLE 3, Section 3 of said code provides as follows, to-wit:

"Where provisions concerning hours of labor or rates of pay have been established for specific projects, by competent governmental authority or agencies (whether Federal, State or political sub-divisions thereof) acting in accordance with law, any employer required to comply and complying with the provisions so established shall be relieved of compliance with any conflicting provisions of this Article or any actions taken in accordance therewith."

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the County Board deems it for the best interests of the County and its taxpayers that it comply with said Article 3, Section 3, and in accordance therewith does hereby establish the following code of its own with reference to rates of pay and hours of labor to be binding upon all contractors having or entering into contracts with said County, as follows, to-wit:

Common Labor, per hour	$ .30
Teamster, per hour	.30
Dumpman, per hour	.40
Caterpillar Operator, per hour.	.60
Elevating Grader Operator, per hour	.50
Drag Line Operator, per hour.	.75
Foreman, per hour	.50
Teams, per hour per horse	.10
Truck Driver, per hour	.40
Cook, per month	50.00
General Superintendent, per mo.	100.00
Trucks, per hour	.85

(The above figures are minimum wages to be paid, but if contractor wishes to pay more, he may do so.)

Board for men, not to exceed $.90 per day.

Hours of work per men per week, not to exceed 60-hours.

Hours of work per man per day not to exceed 10-hours.

In case of loss of time due to cause for which the laborer is not responsible, the laborer can if he so desires make up such time lost at rate of 10-percent per week."

Motion for adoption of the foregoing resolution was seconded by Commissioner Roy and carried.

Commissioner Mandt moved that the Special meeting adjourn. Motion seconded by Commissioner Lee and carried

H. W. Kinghorn
Chairman County Board.

Attest:
H. L. Fowler
County Auditor.

Junior Class Play

A large crowd attended the Junior class play, "The College Hobo," Friday evening at the high school auditorium, a 4 act comedy drama.

Between acts a cornet duet was given by Billy Winter and Maitland Cartier accompanied at the piano by LaVaughn Skatrud. A couple songs were sung by Margaret Dahle and Raymond Anderson accompanied at the piano by Marion Anderson. A reading was given by Elroy Johnson.

J. A. Hanson of Harwood N. D. came Tuesday to take over the local Great Northern station. He fills the vacancy created when Theo. Skatrud left for Aneta N. D. CONDEMNATION PROCEEDINGS

STATE OF MINNESOTA
COUNTY OF PENNINGTON,
IN DISTRICT COURT
Fourteenth Judicial District

State of Minnesota, by Harry H. Peterson, its Attorney General, Petitioner,
vs.
F. H. Gambell, Jacob N. Olson, The County of Pennington, Gertrude Holstein, Mel Johnson, Ronald J. McDonald, James Meehan, Jr. City of Thief River Falls a municipal Corporation; Thief River Falls Lumber Company a corporation; Wiley Tindolph, Thomas Milson, Tilda Swanson, Elmer Hultin, Joel Hultin, Olga Thompson, Oscar Hultin, Alma Goodwin, Ellen Hultin, Harry Hultin, Leroy Hultin, Hazel Hultin, and Unknown heirs of Carl Hultin, Deceased; also all other persons unknown claiming any right, title estate, interest or lien in the real estate described in the petition herein,
Respondents.

IN THE MATTER OF THE CONDEMNATION OF CERTAIN LANDS FOR TRUNK HIGHWAY PURPOSES.

NOTICE

To the Respondents above named:

You and each of you are hereby notified that the above named petitioner will, on the 24th day of May, 1934 at 1:30 o'clock P. M. of said day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, present to the court above named, at chambers in the court house, at Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota, a petition in the above entitled proceeding for the condemnation of certain lands for trunk highway purposes, which said petition is now on file in the office of the clerk of the said court.

The objects of said petition are to have the lands hereinafter described, including all buildings thereon, condemned and taken by the petitioner for right of way for the laying out, constructing, improving and maintaining thereon of a trunk highway, the same being a part of Trunk Highway Number 73, formerly known as Trunk Highway Number 174; and to have the court determine and adjudge that the use for which such lands are sought to be acquired is a public use, and that said taking is authorized by law, and that said petitioner obtain the right to construct and maintain temporary snow fences upon the tracts and parcels of land herein described and the lands adjacent thereto as provided by law, and to have the court appoint commissioners to ascertain and report the amount of damages that will be sustained by the several owners and the persons interested on account of such taking, and to have an order of the court herein pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided; and you and each of you are entitled to and may appear before said court at said time and place and offer evidence relating thereto and show cause if any, why said petition should not be granted.

The lands described and proposed to be so taken are situate in Pennington County, Minnesota, and are described as follows and the names of all persons appearing of record or known to your petitioner to be the owners of said lands or interested therein, including all whom your petitioner has been able by investigation and inquiry to discover, together with the nature of the ownership of each as nearly as can be ascertained, are as follows:

District Judge M. A. Brattland is in the city today disposing of small cases which have come up since the regular term of court.

CWA Worker Asks Audience To Support Lundeen Bill

Robert Salo, a CWA worker from Bemidji spoke to a large gathering of unemployed at the court rooms last evening. He urged them to organize to help release, thru mass protest and financial assistance if possible, the secretary of the United Farmers League who was jailed in Warsaw, Indiana for participating in preventing a foreclosure.

He discussed the unemployment bills now before Congress at some length and scored the Wagner-Lewis bill as being of no benefit to the unemployed workers. He also explained the provisions of the Unemployment and Social Insurance bill introduced by Ernest Lundeen, (F-L Minn.) and urged the audience to rally behind this bill. "Get in touch with your congressmen in Washington and urge them to back up this bill." be said. He criticised President Roosevelt for trying to get congress to adjourn at once. It is to keep this bill from being acted upon at this session of the congress he said.

Kenyon-Lindeman

A wedding of interest to local people took place at the Kenyon home at Mahnomen at 2:00 Saturday April 21, when Leona Lindeman of Wauban became the bride of Thomas Kenyon. The ceremonies were performed by Rev. Stortroen of Mahnomen before an improvised alter of carnations and ferns. The couple was attended by Miss Elizabeth Kenyon sister of the groom and Emery Hanson a friend of the young couple. Mrs. Wilbur Slokeof of Fordville, a sister of the groom played Lohengrin's Wedding March.

The bride was dressed in a beautiful white taffeta and wore a bridal veil held in place by dainty rose buds of delicate pink and white. She carried a bouquet of carnations and sweet peas.

A three course wedding dinner was served immediately after the ceremony, and a reception was given in honor of the young couple at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lindeman of Wauban in the evening.

The Kenyons formerly lived in this city, Mr. Kenyon being a Soo Line engineer operating on the Winnepeg flyer.

SMART POLICE DOG PROVES TO BE WOLF

Around the world has gone the fame of a wolf, probably the sole illustrious wolf on record, and it is in a Chinese magazine that one learns of him now, though he lives in Austria, where he serves as a police dog, and rates as Europe's smartest, says Literary Digest.

He was a cub in the Bosnian woods when a Vienna police clerk, out hunting, captured him six years ago, and began to train him with animals already in service. Last year the wolf took first prize at an international police dog show, making not a single mistake in tests for training, skill, and accuracy. He had won more than two hundred prizes before that.

Commenting on his brilliant career, the China Journal remarked, "We are not surprised to learn of this wolf's accomplishments, for it is the experience of every hunter who has matched his wits against wolves that they are possessed of an intelligence which is uncanny in its human qualities, and to it is added super-sharpened senses of hearing and smell as well as an unerring instinct in detecting danger from man. Unquestionably the so-called Alsatian owes its superior intelligence to the fact that it is little more than a domesticated wolf, notwithstanding that many lovers of this breed hold views to the contrary."

Dead Volcanoes in Lake Near Superior's Surface

Volcanoes, both active and defunct, are wide-spread throughout the world, but the last place we would have thought them to be probably would have been under the waters of Lake Superior, observes a writer in the New Orleans Times-Picayune. And yet a couple of such—the dead variety, thank heaven—have been discovered in the bed of the world's largest fresh water body. At a point midway between Thunder bay and Michipicoten island, in Canadian waters, a shoal has been found, thirty miles from any shelter. There has been discovered a peak 100 feet in diameter covered by only three and a half fathoms of water. A second nearby is smaller and deeper, but both, now to be marked by the Canadian department of marine, are asserted to be the cones of extinct fire mountains.

The question is, shall the peaks be cut down to a safe depth, or shall they be permanently marked and lighted? The first alternative is more costly, but the permanent upkeep of the second is most forbidding. Decision remains to be made.

Read the following indorsement by the Farmer-Labor Leader:

The book shows the background of most of the controversies which arose over the income tax proposal, the unemployment insurance law. the chain store tax and other measures. It points out the weaknesses of certain groups in both House and Senate, and dissects the political intrigues with considerable skill. All in all, it is an excellent record to be used in the 1934 campaign and everyone interested in the political developments in the state should hav a copy for reference purposes.

AAA DAIRY CURB PLAN IS DROPPED FOR TIME BEING

Program to Eliminate Sick Cattle May be Launched Soon

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration has decided not to under take at present a dairy reduction program involving adjustment payments, according to word received from Wasington this week by Dean W. C. Coffey of the University of Minnesota Department of Agriculture.

This decision was reached by Administration officials following a series of regional conferences in which dairymen were given an opportunity to express their views of the administration's proposed reduction program.

The administration makes it clear that it has not lost interest in the dairymen's problems, but has decided to undertake no far-reaching program until dairymen are united in the support of one sound plan.

A limited program to eliminate diseased cattle from herds and purchase dairy products for the needy may be carried cut, however, with the aid of funds recently appropriated by Congress. Whole milk producers also will receive the benefit of marketing agreements now in effect or to be adopted in the future.

Poison Hopper Mash To Arrive Here Soon

Pennington county will be ready for the grasshoppers when, and if they become a menace this year, according to county agent R. M. Douglass. A carload of poison mash has been shipped to this count, he said and is expected here within a week This mash is ready mixed and will be distributed when, and if, the pests become dangerous. The federal government has made an appropriation to meet expenses of hopper extermination this year and a supply of poison suffcient to meet any emergency is believed assured.

Mr. Douglass states that the same set-up of township committees which has dealt with the hopper situation so successfully the past two years will be maintained this year. Under this arrangement the mash is distributed to the chairmen of the various townships who then supplies the crews and supervises the work of distribution.

Regulations this year provides that a record of the amount used by each farmer must be kept, Mr. Douglass said.

The excellent cooperation received by his office in past years has made it possible for Pennington county to be remarkably free from infestation 350 tons of poison mash was used in the county in 1932, Mr. Douglass stated and only 140 tons were necessary in 1933. Still less should be needed this year unless there are migrations from other sections of the country. Parts of North Dakota and Manitoba are badly infested according to reports from entomologists who state that the insects are taking on the characteristics of the Rocky Mountain locusts which caused havoc in the latter years of the nineteenth century.

FEDERAL SAVING AND LOAN ASS'N OPENS MAY 1ST

Will Launch Campaign for Loans And Sale of Thrift Shares

The First Federal Savings and Loan association of Thief River Falls having complied with the requirements of its charter opened for business on May 1st, according to S. R Dahlen, secretary-treasurer of the association. Offices have been opened in the Dobner-Meehan building at the corner of Main avenue and Second street.

A active campaign for sale of the associations thrift shares is being launched, Mr. Dahlen says, and he nvites investors to look into the possibilities of these shares as depositories for savings. The shares are of $100 par value and can be bought on the monthly payment plan and on other plans of payment.

The association is ready to make loans on city homes and invites investigation of loan possibilities. Loans can be made to apply on the purchase of a home; to finance remodeling; and to finance building of new homes. The rate of repayment is $1.20 per month per $100 borrowed.

New Numbers Go On State Roads May 4th

Renumbering of state highway system Friday, May 4, will be accomplished in less than one day, under plans just announced by the Highway department.

Maintainance crews in every county will start early Friday morning taking down old numbers and replaceing them with new markers on each road affected by the renumbering. Nearly 40,000 signs will have to be handled by the crews to make the roadside markers conform to the new 1934 highway maps issued last week.

In renumbering the roads, the Highway department took the 140 new routes authorized by the 1933 legislature and consolidated them with the 71 old state routes and old U. S. route.s Out of this total of 227 different routes, the department made a simplified system of 125 routes. This was done in the interest of public convenience, it was said by N. W. Elsoerg, highway commissioner. In the new system, U. S. routes will carry only their U. S. numbers, avoiding confusion resulting when the same road carries different state and U. S. numbers.

Maps of the renumbered system are available at all highway department offices and at most chambers of commerce,, automobile clubs and other road information centers.

WPA Goes on Record Favoring Frazier's And Lundeen's Bills

Resolutions requesting the Congressmen and Senators from this state to support the Lundeen Social insurance bill, the Frazier bill and demanding a national 30 hour week law was passed by theWorkmen's Protective Association at its meeting on Monday evening.

Letters were read from Senator Shipstead and Congressmen Arens Johnson, and Harold Knutson acknowledging receipt of the resolutions passed by the asociation at its meeting last week condemning the ERA and RWA. Congressman Knudsor assured them that he is giving their protests "serious consideration." The others assured the association that they were acting on the suggestion and making vigorous protest against RWA and ERA. Magnus Johnson informed them that he favors more work like the CWA to help the recovery.

Chairman Battelson informed the members that small project under the city council was started Monday which will employ about five men for a week. If it lasts more than that he will change the personnel so that another five men can get work on this work next week.

The organization also decided to protest to the county board against the wage and hour rate set by it at the special meeting last week, maintaining that 30 cents per hour for common labor is to low, a minimum and ten hours a day is too long as a maximum. Copies of the protest will also be sent to the boards of Norman Red Lake, Marshall, and Kittson counties because these counties in meeting with the Pennington county set this scale. The resolution demands that the National code governing road construction shall be used.

Marie Wick Murder Case is Reopened After Thirteen Years with the Arrest of McKenzie

Arthur C. James, believed to be the A. R. McKenzie who was one of the men registered at the Prescott hotel in Fargo on the night that Marie Wick of Grygla was murdered there 13 years ago, has been taken into custody at Cheyenne, Wyoming It is claimed that the state attorney's office allowed McKenzie to go free with instructions to keep in touch with the sheriff's office the day following the slaying and that he disappeared. He is now being returned to North Dakota to stand trial for the murder for which William Gummer who was night clerk in tho hotel is serving a life sentence in the North Dakota state prison.

The return of James will reopen one of the outstanding criminal cases in the history of North Dakota. Sentiment in Fargo was so strong against Gummer that the case was removed to Valley City for trial. Almost continually since Gummer's conviction, a brother in law, H. W. Swenson of Devils Lake, has worked for his freedom. Gummer has clung to his statement that he is innocent. He was 22 years old when he went to prison.

Marie Wick went to Fargo the night of June 7th 1921. Her body was found in the room the following morning when Gummer reported that she failed to answer her telephone Her arms and legs had been tied to the bedposts. She had been assaulted and her head had been beaten in with a fire nozzle.

Claims that William Green, now of St. Paul, who was then state's attoreny for Cass county, N. D. failed to present to the jury important testimony bearing on the case and that the state did not call as witnesses all the persons registered at the hotel the night of the murder has been made on numerous occasions by attorneys for Gummer.

Two men who were registered at the hotel, A. R. McKenzie and James Farrell, were neither called as witnesses by the state and are claimed by Gummer's attorneys to be the missing links in the testimony.

The state's attorney claimed that that the name James Farrell was a fictious name placed on the registry by a pal of Gummer, named Andy Brown, Gummer's attorneys however claimed that Farrell is a former resident of Willmar, Minnesota.

A. R. Bergeson, state's attorney of Cass county stated Tuesday evening that he has five or six witnesses who will come to No. Dakota to testify that James has admitted to them that he and a companion, "Blackie Carter," killed Marie Wick. Mr. Bergeson is proceeding on the theory that Carter is the mysterious Farrell who registered at the hotel the same time and who has never been traced.

ANNUAL MEETING WOMEN'S CLUBS HERE TUES.; WED.

Gifted Speakers Will Address Two Day Convention Of Women

The 34th annual convention of the ninth district Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs will be held here Tuesday, May 8. The convention which will continue two days will bring to the city Dr. Kathleen Jordan of Granite Falls who will address the convention on Tuesday afternoon.

Dr. Jordan was born in England of missionary parents. When she was only four months old they were ordered to Mohammedan North Africa. Here she received her education in French schools until her Junior college year. Desiring to study medicine, she came alone to the United States where she finished her college course at Ohio Wesleyan College and later took her medical degree at Western Reserve University.

She came to Minnesota as the wife of Dr. Lewis S. Jordan, superintendent of Riverside Sanitorium at Granite Falls.

Doctor Jordan comes to the Federation meeting through the courtesy of the Minnesota Public Health Association as a member of the Christmas Seal Speakers Bureau.

Other features of the Tuesday program is a talk by Morris Bye superintendent of city schools and by Mrs. Thomas Mohn, president of the Minnesota Federation of Womens clubs. On Wednesday the convention will be addressed by Senator Laura E. Naplin who will speak on "Legislation." Addresses will also be made by Mrs. J. M. Bishop and Esther McGinnis of the U of Minnesota.

A banquet will be held in the civic and Commerce rooms in the auditorium on Tuesday evening after which a music festival will be presented in the auditorium.

Thi Ri Fa Mu Concert Well Attended. A Fine Program

The seventh annual Music festival of the state and nationally federated Thi Ri Fa Mu club was held last Monday in the Sons of Norway hall at 8 p. m. The concert was well attended by music lovers of this city and all were well pleased with the concert given, under the direction of Mrs. Thellma Holm Erickson, first vice president of the Minnesota Federation of Music Clubs, and the organizer of the local club; Margaret Fabric, President of the local club assisted by Miss Violet Rhodegard had charge of the arrangements.

Mrs. Agnes Jorgenson Kise, guest artist from Moorhead, gave excellent vocal solos accompanied by Edna Johnson Cowan. Those attending the concert stated that the solos alone were worth far more than the price of admission. Mrs Kise, as will be remembered, was also the guest artist of the Fargo-Moorhead Amphion Chorus when it was here in March.

Her work is highly praised by local critics.

School Children of City Will Present a National Song Festival May 11th

The city's grade schools will unite in a national Music Week program at the Municipal auditorium on Friday May 11 at 2:45 p. m. Seven hundred school children will participate in the event which features group singing by the kindergarten and first grades; second grades and Toy orchestra from the third grades. The program will close with four numbers by the massed chorus of all participants. Children from Knox Northrop and Washington schools are included. The program follows: "How Do You Do, Dear Visitors, O'Hara; "The Farmyard", Jones-Barbour; "Little Boy Blue", Coan; Rock-a-bye" Jones-Barbour; "Song of Joy" Jones-Barbour by kindergarten and first grades.

"Careless Paul", Norwegian Folk Tune; "My Playmates", Churchill-Grindell; "Fashions in Footwear", Grant-Schaefer; "Goosey, Goosey Gander", Churchill-Grindell; "The Clown", Polish Folk Tune, by second grades.

"The Crooked Man", Old Tune; "The Cradle Song", Hauser; "American Patriotic Medley", arr. by Vandevere, by Toy Orchestra, third grades

Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Neset spent Sunday at their cottage at tha Red Lake Narrows.

FILES FOR COUNTY ATTORNEY

H. O. BERVE

Attorney who was defeated for the office of County Attorney by two votes four years ago filed as a candidate for the same office Tuesday. Mr. Berve who is well known thruout the county served as county attorney 1926 to 1930. He was secretary of the Pennington county Farmer-Labor association during the past two years refusing to become a candidate for reelection at the last county convention. He is at present secretary of the Ninth District Farmer-Labor association. Mr. Berve was prominently mentioned as a possible appointee to fill the place on the district bench vacated by Julius J. Olson and was urged by the Pennington county Farmer-Labor convention to file for election to the office of judge. Following the appointment of James E. Montague to the bench he decided to stay out of the judgeship race.

ST. OLAF CHOIR TO SING HERE SUNDAY AT 2:

Lydie Rice' Lincoln Graduate is Member of Famous Group Of Singers

The appearance here of the internationally known St. Olaf choir at the municipal auditorium Sunday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock is of more than passing interest to a great many local people, inasmuch as Miss Lydie Rice, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. J Rice of this city is a member of this justly famous group of singers. Miss Rice who is now enrolled as a Freshma at St. Olaf college is a graduate of Lincoln high school.

Dr. F. Melius Christiansen, widely known composer and director of this choir, has brought his organization to the point where it is considered the leader in its field of music today Its singing is something which is no quickly forgotten. Music critics in New York, Boston, Chicago and other large cities have nothing but praise for its work.

During the summer of 1930 these singers visited England, Norway Sweden, Denmark and Germany Glowing newspaper accounts of their successes state that they revealed to Europe a hitherto unheard of type of American culture. It was the second tour of the choir abroad. The "Berliner Tagblatt" had the following to say regarding the singing of this group: "Through all their program we gain an impression of a capella singing of such beauty and purity as we have possibly never heard before."

Last PTA Meeting of School Year Monday

The last meeting of the school year of the Thief River Falls Parent Teacher association will be held next Monday evening, May 7, at 8:00 p. m., in the assembly rom at the Lincoln high school.

Mr. Arnold Gloor, superintendent of schools at Crookston, will be tha speaker of the evening. He will discuss the subject "The Child's Community." This will be developed along the lines of the theme for the year's meetings, that of character development.

The Junior high school A Capella Mixed Chorus will sing "Night Sinks on the Wave' by Smart, Miss Irma Springen directing.

Omer Sundrud, a sophomore student in Lincoln high school will play a group of accordion solos.

The election of officers for next year will be held. Lunch will be served at the close of the meeting.

A. H. Kleffman, of Hibbing visited in this city Wednesday.

POWER EQUIPM'T PROBLEM PROBED BY CITY COUNCIL

Lars Backe Suggests Beautifying City Block for Park Purposes

Lars Backe appeared before the council on Tuesday evening with a communication wherein he urged that the lots occupied by the city tool shed be cleaned up and made into a park and recreational center. He suggested that the block be planted with trees and that boulevards and playgrounds be laid out. As to the future expansion of the project, he suggested that the place can be made a beauty spot and that a band stand should be erected there as well as a swimming pool and a wading pool for smaller children. "We have got to the stage in the development of our city that a park and recreation should be provided for and recreation should be provided for." Mr. Backe's communication stated.

The suggestion was discussed by the council which then instructed the street committee to communicate with RWA authorities and the county board with the hope of getting the ground now occupied by the old foundry as a site for a tool shed for the city's equipment and the utilization of some of the old foundry building for that purpose. It is hoped that RWA funds may be secured to finance cleaning up the lots and remodeling of the tool sheds.

Mr. Senstad, city assessor and Geo. Werstlein, his assistant appeared before the council and called attention to the fact that there has in the past been quite a discrepency in the valuation of the lots on the corner of Main and Third street and those on LaBree and Third stree, two corners which should be of relatively the same value. After some discussion of the proposition it was decided that the difference should be split and those lots which have apparently been valued too high should be reduced and those which had been assessed too low should be raised.

The matter of applying for PWA grant for the purpose of modernizing the light plant by installing alternators on the two old Bush-Sulzer engines, purchasing new pump and motors as well as installing additional white way posts was also thoroughly threshed out. City Engineer Viebahn advised that inasmuch as four or five years more of service is all that can be expected from the old engines and

Delinquent Tax Sale Will Be Conducted on May 14

A sale of lands upon which taxes are delinquent will be conducted at the Pennington county court house on May 14, according to county auditor Harry L. Fowler. Only lands delinquent on the first of January of this year are included in this sale, Mr. Fowler stated. Many parcels are being paid from time to time during the present and past month Mr. Fowler stated and the number of pieces to be sold will most likely be greatly reduced before the time for the sale.

SEED LOANS ARE SLOW IN COMING: FARMERS WORRY

250 Applications Have Been Made and Only a Few Received

Seed loans are coming thru very slowly this year according to local officials who are doing all in their power to hurry them thru. It is pointed out that 220 applications have been sent in, many of them several weeks ago, and that there are about 30 more awaiting waivers and as yet only a few checks have come thru to the applicants.

Register of Deeds, Fred D. Lorentson reports that his office, to which the checks are sent for distribution to the applicants, is besieged by farmers who are daily expecting their loan checks and are getting worried since the season is advancing rapidly Some farmers are openly charging the administration with purposely delaying the checks to assist in the agricultural adjustment administration's crop curtailment program.

Tha loans are being handled thru the same set-up as in former years according to officials and no reason is given for the delays.

In the meantime, Mr. Olson, federal relief agent states that his office is being permitted to advance funds for seed for fodder to destitute farmers.

ADMITS BREMER KIDNAP PLANS

Grand Jury to be Recalled for Action on Confession by Chicago Politician.

Chicago—John J. (Ross) McLaughlin, reputed Chicago gambling lord and former state legislator, has confessed to handling $53,000 of the ransom money paid for release of Edward G. Bremer, wealthy St. Paul banker, the department of justice announced here. McLaughlin confessed he knew the money was "hot" and had come from the Bremer abduction.

At the same time, a $200,000 swindle of Martin Wunderlich, St. Paul contractor, was linked with the kidnaping of Bremer, whose abduction in January netted his kidnapers another $200,000.

Wunderlich was disclosed as the mysterious "Mr. W." listed on government reports as the St. Paul contractor mulcted out of $200,000 shortly before the Bremer kidnaping. Federal agents in Chicago were seeking William E. (Christian Kid) Mead, notorious swindler, as the finger man in the Bremer abduction while agents in St. Paul sought "Sioux City Whitey," former St. Paul gambler, for questioning in the swindle, believed the forerunner of the Bremer abduction.

The United States grand jury which adjourned several weeks ago "subject to call" will be recalled to consider indictments against the four persons held in Chicago in connection with the $200,000 kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker, and the swindle of a St. Paul contractor, federal officials indicated .

Those held in Chicago are John J. (Boss) McLaughlin, former Illinois legislator, who, according to federal officials in Chicago, confessed handling $53,000 of the Bremer ransom money; John McLaughlin, Jr., his son; William E. Vidler, former convict arrested with $2,665 of Bremer money in his possession, and Philip Delaney, arrested with McLaughlin.

Purvis said he has recovered $3,400 of the $53,000 of ransom money which McLaughlin confessed to passing throughout Chicago. He intimated to newspaper men that he had important clues to the remaining $147,000 of ransom money unaccounted for.

U. S. Warns Japan on Treaty Rights.

Washington—In an official statement, the Roosevelt administration outlined its policy with regard to the far east and informed Japan that this nation expects from other nations due consideration of the rights, the obligations and the legitimate interests of the United States. The statement, made by Secretary Hull as a reply to the recently enunciated statement of Japanese policy toward China, pointed out that the United States, with Japan and China, was a signer of the nine power treaty and other treaties which guarantee the territorial and administrative integrity of China and the maintenance of the open door.

Bancorporation Loses Court Appeal.

Minneapolis—Efforts of Northwest Bancorporation to prevent the Minnesota commerce commission from immediately resuming investigating its affairs were blocked by the U. S. supreme court. The court denied the bank holding company's request for a temporary restraining order, which would have prevented the commission from resuming the probe until the court had ruled on the application for a temporary injunction in the same matter.

$2,000,000 Paid to Minn. as U. S. Aid

St. Paul—Twenty federal government checks of $100,000 each, or a total of $2,000,000 were turned over by Governor Floyd Olson to E. A. Benson, state banking commissioner, representing the federal grant to be used for relief in Minnesota during April. Commissioner Benson will allocate the money to various banks in the state, and the funds will be drawn upon by the various relief district committees.

85 Per Cent Road Projects Underway

Washington—The bureau of public roads advised Secretary Ickes that 85 per cent of the federal aid highway program for which $400,000,000 of public works money was allotted, was under way or finished. Regular direct employment was being given to 130,374 men. Among 16 states which reported road awards below the average were North Dakota, 55.6 per cent, and Minnesota, 69.8 per cent.

National Stabilization Fund Set Up.

Washington—The treasury formally created a $2,000,000,00 stabilization fund, apparently depositng $200,000,000 with the federal reserve system for active use and holding the remaining $1,800,000,000 in reserve. Previously, the $2,810,000, profit on devaluation had been designated in the treasury statement simply as increment resulting from reduction in the weight of the gold dollar.

DAIRY COW PRICES IMPROVE AS DEMAND EXCEEDS SUPPLY

"Too few good to choice quality dairy cows are coming to the South St. Paul market to satisfy the expansion in demand this spring," says Earl Quick, in charge of the dairy cow department of the Central Co-Operative Association, farmer-owned livestock sales agency at that market.

"Demand for good, well-bred and springer cows is showing the usual seasonal increase," says Quick, "and most of these are shipped to Eastern sections tributary to the large consuming centers. Because of the general impression on the part of producers out here that the government is going to pay a bonus on dairy cows in connection with the reduction program, many are witholding shipments of cows from the market which are eligible for sale in the milker and springer department.

"While there is no definite program in view for paying premiums for herd reduction, prices on better bred dairy cows are advancing. Up to $40.00 and $50.00 per head are abtainable for good choice quality springers, and premiums of $5.00 to $10.00 per head over these figures are being paid for exceptional individuals.

"Cows that are suitable only for local trade (close-up springers and milkers) are bringing $25.00 to $40. per head accorning to quality and weight.

"That dairy cow prices are improving is shown by comparing prices with other years. The average price received by farmers in the United States for milk cows recently is $10.00 to $15.00 per head above the 1933 low spot, but about $40.00 per head below 1929 levels. Present prices are about $10.00 to $15.00 per head below the 1910-1914 average."

NEVER GET "TIRED OUT:" IT'S OLD FASHIONED, DR. SAYS

Fatigue is one of the most serious of the common menaces to health and one of the least regarded says a bulletin issued by the Public Health Education Committee of the Minnesota State Medical Association today.

It is of very little use to look out for your diet, get the correct amount of vegetables, fruits and milk and the correct amount of excercise if, at the same time, you habitually allow yourself to get over-tired.

"There are still too many of us" the doctors say, "who have the old-fashioned idea that it is highly praise worthy to be completely tired out; that it is an indication of having devoted yourself whole heartedly to you work.

"It is time we realized that the rested parent, teacher, worker or child is the efficient one. We accomplish far more work of better quality in short periods when we are rested than in long periods when we are tired."

Adults should remember that it is almost impossible to suffer from fatigue by ourselves according to the bulletin.

If you are a tired teacher or parent your children are suffering for it. Children are especially affected by the fatigue of others. Adult associates are disturbed and antagonized and your ability to get on with others, an important part of your equipment for life is impaired.

The end result is too likely to be malnutrition no matter what your diet may be, emotional instability, failure, with all the associated possibilities of disability and disease.

Among ways to get rested quickly in an emergency the following are recommended: a luke warm bath or possibility a hot or cold shower if you respond favorably to either of them; some simple easily digested food such as a cup of appetizing hot soup; a change that is different and relaxing period of lying flat on your back in a cool, dark room but any type of change tat ihs different and relaying.

MOTHER'S DAY TO BE MAY 12TH AT UNIVERSITY OF M.

The annual occasion on which mothers of all University of Minnesota student are invited to the campus for Mother's Day has been set for Saturday, May 12. Approximately 10,000 invitations have been sent to mothers of students, all the way from California to Maine, although the vast majority are in Minnesota or states immediately adjoining.

Mother's Day has been an important campus event for ten years past, with an average attendance of at least 1,000 mothers. The purpose of the day is to show mothers the university "as it is" for they are permitted every liberty, and may attend classes, visit with professors, peep in at laboratories, rooming houses, dormatory, or anything else they wish to see.

Following registration in the morning the mothers will be guests of their sons and daughters at lunch and will attend a student entertainment in Northrop Auditorium in the afternoon, after which they will meet members of the administration and faculty at a reception in the auditorium foyer.

The annual Mothers Day dinner will wind up the activities of the day. It will be served in the ballroom of the Minnesota Union. President Coffman, Dean E. E. Nicholson, Dean Anne Dudley Blitz, and a representative of the visiting groups will speak.

CHARLES MUNN

Osseo "dirt" farmer and Speaker of the House, who is the indorsed candidate of the Farmer-Labor Association for Railroad & Warehouse Commissioner.

Charles Munn served in the lower House of the Minnesota Legislature for four terms, and was elected Speaker by a coalition of the Farmer-Labor and independent Republican and Democratic members of the 1933 House. He was re-elected by almost a unanimous vote to serve as Speaker at the special session.

Speaker Munn, a consistent Liberal, was recognized as one of the ablest men who ever presided over the Minnesota House.

LOANS FOR OVER 2 MILLION CLOSED WITH NEW BONDS

Closing of Federal Land Bank loans is climbing again since the temporary check given to the closing of loans with the change from cash to bonds of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation. Bankers and other creditors of farmers have signified in a constantly increasing number that they will be glad to take these bonds, and for the past 10 days loans have been closed at the rate of more than $200,000 a day.

In Minnesota there had been 257 loans closed for a total of $726,000 up to April 17 inclusive, and for the entire district there had been 915 loans for an aggregate of $2,104,500 since the begining of this month. The biggest day up to that time was Tuesday when the day's business totaled 238 loans and $493,000. The daily closings have been running over $100,000 since April 6 and steadily increasing.

This is apparently due to the attitude of bankers as expressed by many letters that have come within the last week or two. Many of these bankers have written that they are accepting the bonds themselves and advising other creditors to do the same and some have gone so far as to declare that they are in the market to buy these bonds as investments aside from any interest they may have in farm mortgages refinanced with the bonds.

"We think this is going to be a mighty sweet proposition and are glad to accept these bonds at par for settlement of any of our mortgages,"

"Right at this time we would prefer the bonds to cash," wrote one banker.

SALT MAY PROVE BOON TO DIABETICS, U. PROF. FINDS

Common table salt may prove to be a boon to diabetes sufferes.

By eating more salt, diabetics may be able definately to reduce the sugar losses that are one of the most serious manifestations of the disease, a paper read recently before the Society for Experimental Biology and Medicine at the University of Minnesota revealed.

Drs. Willis H. Thompson and Irvine McQuarrie of the department of pediatrics described a number of cases of diabetic children who were given from 200 per cent to 300 per-cent increase over the normal average salt ration. In every case, records showed, the sugar losses declined rapidly, although all other factors in the treatment, including diet and amounts of insulin taken, were kept constant.

Blood pressure increased, however, when the salt was given. Whether or not this is serious will be studied by the investigators.

Both researchers pointed out that a new avenue of thought with respect to diabetes is opened by the discovery that common salt has an effect on sugar losses. Mineral metabolism is linked with carbe-hydrate metabolism through salt and sugar.

Dr. Thompson pointed out that the average child takes about 6 grams of salt a day. The diabetic children were given from 20 to 60 grams.

When a potassium salt was used instead of the sodium chloride, or common table salt, the effects were reversed. The small patients then lost more sugar and their blood pressure droped. It is believed that some combination of the two may possibly be worked out that will decrease the sugar losses without unduly increasing blood pressure.

DECREASE IS SHOWN IN UNITED STATES MEAT SUPPLY

Reports on cold storage holdings of meat products continue to reflect more encouragement, states the weekly market bulletin issued by the Central Cooperative Association, farmer-owned livestock marketing organization of South St. Paul. While meat stocks held in cold storage houses and warehouses of the United States are generally larger than a year ago, vast quantities of meats have disappeared within the past month, and holdings are below the five year average .This should be encouraging to procedure since all available figures indicate smaller numbers of meat animals are to be marketed this summer.

The latest reports from cold storage centers of the United States indicate that only 557,466,000 lbs. of pork are held, that total being 78,437,000 lbs. less than a month ago. Compared with a year ago, that total is 8 per cent larger, but is it 16 per cent smaller that the five-year average.

Lard stocks are still heavy, 173,414,000 lbs. being nearly three times as great as a year ago, and 63 per cent larger than the five-year aver-

Frozen and cured beef stocks at 55,905,000 lbs. are 66 per cent larger than a year ago, but 10 per cent larger than a year ago, but 10 per cent below the five-year average.

Frozen lamb and mutton stocks at 2,023,000 lbs. are slightly above a year ago, but 30 per cent below the five-year average.

HIGHWAY PATROL FIND THIRD OF MOTORS CAN'T PASS INSP.

In the past three weeks, 2,739 passenger cars and trucks have been stopped by the State Highway Patrol for testing of brakes and lights and the checking of weights, says a highway department bulletin. Of these, 988 or nearly one-third could not pass the tests. Among the places where checks were made were Litchfield, Benson, Willmar, Forest Lake, Cambridge, Glencoe and Wayzata. Each driver stopped was also required to show his drivers license card. Those without licenses are taken before the nearest justice of the peace. Those with defective equipment are required to make whatever repairs or adjustments are necessary, and in some cases taken into court.

WILD WEST RODEO FEATURE CONVENTION OF SHRINERS

Days of the old wild and wooly west will be revived here in grand style during the coming Shrine Convention when the All-American Rodeo with roughest riders and wildest horses obtainable in this country, is held at Fort Snelling.

Such was the plan adopted today for the event which is being arranged for entertainment of convention delegates as well as the public by the St. Paul and Minneapolis Junior Associations of Commerce, officers at Fort Snelling and Zuhrah temple of the Shrine.

Dates for the Rodeo are June 15 to 24, while convention dates are June 18 to 21. With plenty of thrills and spills promised, the program will bristle with typical rodeo contests between man and beasts, as well as many innovations which will provide additional novelty, excitement and laughter, according to announcements.

After an impressive grand entry with stars of the rodeo arena riding on cavorting steeds, the old time "bronco busting" will begin. With everything keyed to high speed, the fancy roping, steer wrestling, trick and fancy riding, calf roping, steer riding, wild horse racing, steer wrestling from an automobile, and other features will follow immediately.

Fred Bebe, managing director, who is responsible for rodeos in all parts of this country, also plans parasol races on wild horses, Brahma bull riding, relay races, and a contest in which the crack riders of the west will try to stay aboard the unridden "Black Hawk," South Dakota equine outlaw.

"This rodeo is going to be a real contest," Beebe said. "Everybody will ride for prize money and that means there won't be any polite riding. Our buckaroos will stick like glue and when they start 'mowing grass they'll land heavy."

MUSIC CONTEST FINALS AT UNIVERSITY TODAY, FRIDAY

High school musicians from all parts of Minnesota will journey to the University of Minnesota on Thursday and Friday of this week (May 3 and 4) to take part in the finals of the Minnesota State High School Music Contest, for which preliminaries have been held in eighteen districts during April. The contest is under the general direction of the General Extension Division, represented by Professor I. W. Jones and the Minnesota Public School Music league of which Superintendent A. M. Wisness of Willmar is president. Contests will be held in almost every type of instrumental and vocal music, including bands, instrumental and vocal solos, orchestras, choruses and the like. This is the tenth year of the contest.

GO TO WORK OR CONTINUE EDUCATION GRADS. PROBLEM

High school seniors who will graduate soon are being confronted with the problem of what they should do to earn a living. The answer to the question will be one of three possible paths: Go to work, continue college education, or take up some type of vocational education.

If a decision is made along the last mentioned path, the student must decide whether he wishes to go into agriculture, commercial, professional, or trade and industrial lines.

Dunwoody Industrial Institute (Minneapolis) is a trade school for the training of boys and young men in mechanical and industrial courses. It is an endowed institution—a gift to the residents of the state of Minnesota. It is not conducted for profit but its purpose is to be of value to the largest number of people that can be given training with the funds at the disposal of the school.

The institution carries on training in the following trades: Automobile, baking, building, electrical, machine shop practice, highway construction and surveying, printing, sheet metal and drafting.

School is in operation from June 16 to August 16 each year and students may enter any date.

The Word "Militate"

This verb has been in literary usage for three centuries. It is defined, "To have weight or influence, as in determining a question." In that sense, the first literary use, noted so far, was found in the History of Episcopie, written by Peter Heylyn in 1642, in the sentence, "The discourse of Clemens . . . doth militate as well against the one, as against the other." The older sense in which it was limited from its derivation, "to take part in warfare," was used 17 years earlier. —Literary Digest.

SURVEY SHOWS TRAIN WRECKS DECREASED IN NUMBER BUT INCREASE IN RAIL FATALITIES

Train accidens were fewer in number last year than in 1930, but there was an increase in fatalities to passengers due to the seriausness of two of the accidents, C. L. LaFountaine, chairman of the safety section of the American Railway Association told a regional meeting of safety supervisors in San Francisco, April 27.

The number of fatalities to passengers in 1933 was one fourth less than in 1930.

Passenger trains are twenty times safer than automobiles and a hundred times safer than airplanes, according to Mr. LaFountaine, who has charge of the safety work on the Great Northern railway:

The railroad grade crossing is not as bad as it is painted, according to figures cited by Mr. LaFountaine. Only slightly more than one-half of one per cent of all automobile accidents involved railroad trains.

"The number of persons killed and injured in grade crossing accidents last year was only about one-half the number in 1928," Mr. LaFountaine said. "On the basis of last year's figures, a train could make 112½ round trips between Seattle and New York with only one grade crossing death.

"The decrease in accidents is the result of eliminating many of the more dangerous crossings and the better protection of others with more conspicuous warning signals, rather than an evidence of more care being excercised by automobile drivers."

The elimination of dangerous grade crossings is one of the most meritorious types of projects undertaken by the Public Works administration, Mr LaFountaine said. Such expenditures go mainly to labor. The employment afforded is widely diffused with much of it in rural communities. Each crossing elimination begins at once to return large dividends in the conservation of life and limb and property. The speaker urged that this type of work he given greater consideration in the allocation of funds for public works.

"Stop, Look and Listen" should be taken more literally by automobile drivers, Mr. LaFountaine said.

"Fatalities and injuries to railroad employees were reduced about one-quarter last year as compared with 1930.

"Training employees in the safe way of performing their duties plus strict supervision and discipline, have reduced employed accidents 77 per cent during the last years on the major railroads.

"Industry formerly assumed that deaths and injuries were an unavoidable toll, but the fact that a constantly increasing number of establishments were able to far excel the safety record of others has pointed the way to the development of the science of accident prevention.

"Accident prevention, aside from its humanitarian aspect, reduces production costs. It justifies on a dollars and cents basis the expense of accident prevention work."

Isle—Two boys, Burton Russell, 17 and Roger Weltnauer, 15, were stuck on a reef two miles out in Mille Lacs lake, and spent 30 hours in their boat before help came.

Kenyon—Seventy-five per cent of Kenyon high school students now are members of the Kenyon High School Sobriety League, a student temperance organization.

International Falls—Fifty persons applied to the city council of International Falls for the position of manager of the municipal liquor store which opened here.

St. Paul—Dr. N. G. Mortenson, city health doctor, was suspended upon revelation that John Dillinger and John Hamilton appeared at his home March 14 and been examined for bullet wounds.

Cass Lake—The senate passed and sent to the White House a bill providing payment of $25 to each enrolled Chippewa Indian of Minnesota from funds standing to their credit in the United States treasury.

St. Cloud—A city policeman, Fred W. Nolan, was shot and killed apparently without warning, on a downtown corner. An unknown man walked up to the patrolman and fired one shot into his heart.

Carleton—A warehouse and 75,000 feet of lumber, as well as a boarding house here were destroyed by fire, causing a loss of $35,000. High winds swept the flames and it required 100 men to save the rest of the community.

Faribault—Major William Milligan, 93, only survivor of the sixty-second New York regiment and one of the few remaining members of the Loyal Legion in Minnesota, composed of Civil war officers, died at the home of his son, William.

Staples—Thirty-two schools in the rural sections of Todd, Morrison, Cass and Wadena counties will send more than 60 representatives to the second annual rural school field day here, May 5. More than $250 in prizes have been donated by business men.

Minneapolis — County organization meetings of the Minnesota Law and Order league will be held in the next two weeks to work out specific plans for putting in effect a system of state police to combat crime in Minnesota, which recently was indorsed by the executive committee of the league.

Stillwater—Stillwater's Minnesota lodge No. 1, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, observed the eighty-fifth anniversary of its founding with a specially arranged program. The lodge charter was issued in 1849, just after Minnesota territory was established and nine years before its statehood.

Detroit Lakes—Fire destroyed the J. B. Strafka sawmill here with a loss estimated at $12,000. Origin of the fire is undetermined. The blaze spread rapidly and threatened nearby buildings. Fifty thousand feet of lumber was destroyed in addition to the building. The loss was partly covered by insurance.

Minneapolis—W. C. Robertson, postmaster, opened a letter in the dead letter office which contained four $50 bills. Mailed in Los Angeles April 13 it was addressed to the Mutual Fire Insurance company and could apply to any number of local firms. A note in the letter merely stated "conscience money" and no return address was given.

Minneapolis—Boy Scouts of Troop 187 are performing their daily good deed this spring by guarding nesting Chinese pheasants from the disastrous effects of fires that annually sweep across the Diamond and Pearl lake bottoms. A year ago the Scouts discovered that many mother birds had burned to death upon their nests rather than desert their young.

St. Paul—Next week will see the actual changing of the numbers on Minnesota's trunk highways in accordance with the renumbering system recently adopted by the state highway department. The renumbering of routes to eliminate duplication of numbers on state and U. S. highways and to tie in the 4,300 miles of new trunks with the 6,700 miles of old trunks was worked out by highway engineers during the winter.

Tax Delinquency Placed At 19.80 pr. cnt. in State

Collections Show Improvme't Due to Refinancing and Bsuiness Gains

Latest available figures on tax delinquency in Minnesota indicate that there has been some improvement in collections in the past four months. In 1931, tax delinquency averaged 7.74 per cent. Preliminary reports from auditors late last year indicate that the average at that time was about 26 per cent. For January of 1934, however, the figure is placed at 19.80 per cent. Taxes uncollected in te state during 1933 amounted to over 22 million dollars, according to a report just issued.

The southern part of the state has made the best showing, and especially the southeastern counties where the average is under 10 per cent. In the past year, an improvement has been shown in 32 counties, and this is indicative of an improvement in times. Some northwest counties are 40 per cent and over delinquent, and in the counties of Aitkin, Roseau, Beltrami, Cass, Koochiching, Mahnomen, Hubbard and Clearwater counties more than one-half of the taxes are delinquent. Lake of the Woods is 78.46 per cent delinquent.

"A grat part of the cessation of tax delinquency growth can be attributed to improved business conditions, but part of the change comes from tax collections that resulted from refinancing of farm mortgages," J. P. McDonnell, president of the association states.

"If any tangible tax relief is to come, however, if it is going to be possible for the taxpayers to meet their next payments in a normal way, there must be some drastic reductions in real estate and personal taxes. The burden certainly should be reduced, it must also be controlled, and it should be more justly distributed. People who cannot afford personal extravagance certainly cannot dondone public waste," McDonell stated.

WHEAT REDUCTION SUPERS. TO CHK. CONTRACTED ACRES

2 supervisors, or one for each 100 farms under contract for wheat reduction in Pennington county, will soon be selected to determine whether or not farmers have compiled with their contracts so far as 1934 wheat acreage planted and use of the contracted acres is concerned.

These men will visit every farm assigned to them by the county wheat control association beginning as soon as wheat can be distinguished from other grains in growing mixtures. They will measure the land seeded to and the contracted acreage; help the cooperator to fill out his proof of compliance form; check the cooperator's farm map to determine accuracy of location of the contracted acres; and serve as a go-between for the producer and county allotment committee in all matters requiring explanation and settlement.

This procedure is necessary before the final 1933 payment of eight cents per bushel of allotted production, less local administrative costs, and also the 1934 allotment payments may be made to the producer.

Selection of 3 candidates for this work, or one for each 75 farms, will be made by the AAA wheat section from a list of 5 nominated by the county wheat control association from its own membership. These candidates will be instructed in their duties by C. L. McNelly, corn-hog extension specialist of this disdistrict, in a one-day school, then will take an examination. The 2 having the highest grades and best all-around qualifications will be chosen for active service and the others will be kept in reserve. These supervisors will be paid at a rate per farm to be fixed by the county wheat control association in cooperation with the wheat section, and their pay and expenses will be charged against the budget of the association. None will work in his home neighborhood.

LABOR UNDER HITLER

In Germany, the latest step af the Hitler government is the formulation of the Regulation af Labor Act to operate May 1. The workers in the factories will be known as "followers" and will be compelled to subordinate themselves to their "leader" who is the employer. Regulations, fixing hours, wages and fines will be drawn up by the "leader' and will be legally binding.

A GOOD TIME TO STAY HITCHED

It has baen rumored the past week that Attorney General Harry H. Peterson contemplates filing as candidate for Judge of the Supreme Court rather than for reelection to the office of attorney general, the post which the state Farmer-Labor convention endorsed him for.

No doubt the rumor has given the Republicans much renewed hope. While Mr. Peterson would no doubt make a good judge, to file for that office now, after the convention, and after the Farmer-Labor slate has been settled would be a decidedly bad move. We can not think of anything that would give the opposition more satisfaction. Such an action would actually give them a fighting chance of electing the next attorney general, a possibility which they certainly would not otherwise even consider.

Mr. Peterson has been an exceptionally able attornay general, and has gained national prominence and the confidence of the people for his work with the moratarium law and the state income tax law. We feel that we need him in his present position for at least another term.

While the party has more good men qualified to fill the office of attorney general with honor to themselves and to the party, none would be as assured of election as Mr. Peterson. At this stage of the game, if Mr. Peterson was to file for some other office, it would be throwing a monkeywrench into the machinery that might well prove fatal to the party's chances of making a clean sweep of the state offices in the fall elections. The remaining time for filing is so short that it would be physically impossible for the state association to pick another man for endorsement. Furthermore, the time to refuse the association's endorsement is at, or prior to, the convention and not afterwards. If our candidates are not going to stay in place after the ticket is picked there is small hope of the party ever being powerful enough, and united enough, to carry through its program. We should at all times remember that the consumation of the program, establishing the cooperative commonwealth is the ultimate goal towards which we strive, the offices are only a means to an end and each man should be willing to serve where he is most needed.

THE OLD PATRI-IDIOTIC SMOKE SCREEN

The opposition press is having a glorious time these days telling the people that, we have done so wonderfully well with our government;— our government is just about the real candy and no other comes up to it;— Fi! fi! on the Farmer-Labor party that wants to overthrow the government and set up a cooperative commonwealth, et cetera ed nauseatum.

Well, what about it? We're pretty well sold on our American institutions and our American form of government ourselves, and we have lived uder two other governments during our lifetime and are therefore better able to pass judgment than are the majority of the editorial sandpounders. We have heard some fairly learned and academic discussions on the relative merits of the Scandinavian, Russian, British and Canadian forms of government as compared with the American form, and just which is "best" may be a moot question. Nevertheless, we are quite well satisfied that our particular form is about as good an instrument for self-rule by the people as any. But it is like any other form of self-government in one respect— we must know how to use it if it is to serve us to the best advantage. We must know something about what our needs are, and what is good for us. In other words, it isn't enough that we be an intelligent people, we must also be an enlightened people. An enlightened people will make a success of self-government with any form of democracy. Any and all forms of democracy will be a failure if the people are uninformed or careless.

The Farmer-Laborites have no quarrel with anyone about our form of government and entertain no desire to change it.

We wish to maintain our American form of government, we want to protect our American institutions and we want our government and institutions to serve the people to the best and fullest advantage. Because we realize that American institutions can not survive if the wealth of the country and the power of government is to pass into the hands of a small group of people, we demand a change in our economic system that will make it possible for the people to enjoy the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness that the founders of the Republic intended.

It required no change in our form of government to organize and operate a cooperative cheese factory or a cooperative creamery. And it will not require a change in our form of government to operate the railroads, the mines or any other industry on a cooperative basis. And that is all the words cooperative commonwealth means; the cooperative control and ownership of the things that are collectively used. In that respect our govarnment is tha greatest cooperative enterprise of all. It is cooperatively owned and cooperatively used. The sole source of the present depression and all its attending evils is the fact that in the past as at the present, some of the stockholders are getting more than their just share of the benefits of our collectively owned government. They get that unfair share of the benefits of our cooperative government by controlling immense private organizations. Our cooperatives, including our cooperative government, will never function to the best advantage for all the people until we have removed the threat of the centralizers, whether those be centralizers in cream, wheat or money.

So we have no quarrel with the people who laud our particular form of government, we quite egree with them. But we do have a quarrel with the bootlicking editorial waterboys who first stroke us along the ego by telling us what a fine government we have and then suddenly hold up a bewhiskered carricature of a Russian Nihilist and pointing at it hiss thru their teeth "Farmer-Labor." Its the same old patri-idiotic drivel that was used to cover up the graft and corruption during the war and we resent anyone trying to stampede us so many times with the same old gag.

One of our "refreshment parlors" had its license rescinded by the council last week, and we assume that the police department knew what it was talking about when it made the charges which resulted in the revocation. However, it is somewhat of a surprise to us that the police department should see these violations, especially since they were committed in a basement. We have seen, on the ground floor, under bright lights, two of our doughty coppers stand at the cigar countar with their eyes wide open while a bootlegger walked from booth to booth spiking and mixing drinks, and somehow they saw nary a thing.

Evidently the mayor knows of these other violations however, for he advised the council to revoke this license "as a warning to the others." We hold no briefs for the man who lost his license. If he violated the ordinances he should lose it. But neither is it just to hang one man for the murders committed by ten men.

REPUBLICAN PARTY DOES NOT BELIEVE IN PRIVATE PROPERTY. IT BELIEVES IN VERY PRIVATE PROPERTY

(Minneapolis Labor Review)

Private property seems to be something in which the convention of the Hoover Starvetion party held recently at the Municipal auditorium is greatly enamoured of.

It only seems to be. It is not private property that the Republican party is interested in. It is very, very private property that it is interested in.

Of course the Republican party states that it is interested in the maintaining of private property. But the record proves how incorrect it is.

Private property, it would appear, is the right of everyone to own some of it. In the face of happenings under the Republican administration who can maintain that the Republican party stands for any such thing?

There are millions who today own only the chance to get something to eat and the price of a place to sleep from the public relief agencies.

For them the right of private property has been abolished.

It was during the regime of the Republican party that this propertyless condition for millions developed most rapidly. President Hoover did not incline to do anything about it. That is he didn't seem impressed even with the idea that those who had no property ever got hungry.

He seemed to believe that when a man or a woman lost their property they lost their appetite.

But that doesn't begin to be the story of the extreme privateness of private property the Republican perty believes in. There was one year during the Republican administration when the combined incomes of five men in the United States was more than the total selling price of all the wheat and all the cotton raised in the United States.

When the platform of the Republican party of Minnesota talks about upholding the right of private property it means the right of very private property as exemplified in the income of five men being greater than the total selling price of all the wheat and cotton raised by the millions of farmera of the United States.

There has also been a lot of talk about the work of private charities. Now it turns out that private welfare agencies have cared for about two per cent of those who needed aid during the depression. Through public ownership, government ownership if you prefer, of the welfare machinery, the relief has been afforded.

Of course those who enjoy the big incomes that go with private property believe in the continuance of this scheme. They are the owners and controllers of the Republican party, the party of Hoover and Starvation.

"REGULATION" VS. OWNERSHIP

Farmer-Labor Leader

We demand strict regulation of all public utilities." declares the recently adoptad platform of the Republican party of Minnesota. The Farmer-Labor platform declares for public ownership of utilities. Republican defenders of Big Business know perfectly well the power trusts have always regulated the regulators and right now are indulging in brain storms because of the rapidly growing movement for public ownership by the people instead of "regulation" by the trusts.

Regulation! May Minnesota save itself from the kind of regulation the Republican party has been fostering. Under that G. O. P. "regulation" the 200 largest trusts in America have absorbed one-half of all the business interests in the United States. And the people are footing the bill. That's "regulation."

On the other hand, the Electric Home and Farm Authority, part and parcel of the Tennessee Valley, so-called, is destined to put private piracy in its proper place. Doesn't everyone know that the day the Muscle Schoals dam was turned over to the Tennessee Valley Authority private companies thruout the south lowered their rates?

And what will they do when the Authority's $10,000,000 credit fund is used, as planned, to buy electrical refrigerators at the lowest possible prices for competitive purposes? They'll howl, naturally, but think of what will happen when the low-cost appliances are offered in other parts of the country! The private-owned power trusts, offspring of the G. O. P., will have to meet competitive rates, or the democratic administration will have to put its foot down and say "take the conseouences."

That means lower rates or public ownership and the movement is spreading like wild-fire all over the country. Look at the Boulder dam project! Look at Massachusetts! Fourty-one towns all underselling the so-called super-power companies which for years stole the public blind.

Of course the Minnesota G. O. P. wants "regulation.' But the people want public ownership. And public ownership the people will have.

RELITIVELY UNIMPORTANT DIFFERENCES.

St. Louis County Independent

The St. Paul Dispatch in a recent editorial urging a consolidated ticket of repulicans and democrats in order to defeat the Farmer-Labor forces in the election this fall, admits that the Republicans have, through their recent state convention, done well to drop their relatively unimportant partisan differences. It is obvious from those remarks that the republican convention was just one big love-fest, where no one showed any fight and where the theme song was "when good fellows get together"—for the sole purpose of cooking up something with which to defeat the only political party in Minnesota that has advanced a platform that provides the means for remedying the present deplorable conditions under which the people are struggling.

However, the Dispatch might just as well have said that both the republican and democratic parties in Minnesota might do well to drop their relatively unimportant partisan differences as the fundamentals of both major parties are identical. They are advocating the continuance of a system that has placed this country in the predicament that it finds itself at this time.

THEY WERE RADICALS

(Labor World)

When Charles A. Lindberg, Sr. tried to lecture in Duluth the halls were closed to him. He was a radical He and W. E. Mc Ewen tried every hall in town, but they were closed to them. Today the Duluth News-Tribune is publishing his message. Yesterday it would not heve dared.

NOW ITS COMMUNISM

(The Bovey Press)

The Farmer-Labor party is charged with advocating communism. In Lindbergh's day "Radical" was the most effective charge that could be attributed to anyone who opposed the old "yellow" order. However, tha masses have discovered that a "Radical" is not the menace they had been lead to believe, the "yellows" know this, and realize that "radical" will no longer scare the voter, so they must "manufacture" something else, and now it is "communism." They don't seem to realize that the communists, the number of same in this state is now about on a par with the republicans, is opposing the Farmer-Labor party and platform just as much as the republicans. And they don't seem to realize that most of the voters in the state know this to be a fact.

FARM AND MARKET

By
R. A. Trovatten
Minnesota Commissioner of Agricultura Dairy and Food.

The effects of the Governor's effort to reduce taxes to farmers and home owners is now in operation. 126,570 farmers are now being notified of a twenty per cent reduction in taxes. This has been accomplished through the passage of the Homestead Tax law, sponsored by the Governor and enacted at the last regular session of the Legislature.

* * * *

Those who point a finger at the Governor with the cry of "incressed taxes" will have a hard time convincing these 126,570 farmers and several thousand home owners that taxes are going up. Throughout the state's history, Governor Floyd B. Olson is the only governor on record of actually reducing taxes on farms and homes. Other executives have been more concerned with reducing taxes for big business.

* * * *

The Homestad Tax law burns up some of the big fellows. They dragged it into the Supreme Court with hopes of having it declared void. However, the high court fooled them just as it did with several others of the Governor's liberal laws. The mining companies are using the Homestead law as a basis of their appeal for reduced taxes. It is pretty good indication that we are getting some where in government when the big boys become envious of favors bestowed upon the little fellow.

Thief River Falls, Minn.

Dear Mr. Aalbu:

I heve just read with great interest your first editarial in the April 26 issue of the Forum in reference to the formation of a Penningtan County Historical Society.

While I have been in the county, in the capacity of instructor in the Adult School, only a few months, I have greatly enjoyed my residence here, have appreciated my association with many of the splendid people and am already in spirit calling this place my home.

Not only do I fully agree with you as to the desirability of a Historical Society; I think it should be formed immediately in order that we may not lose some of that valuable information which a delay would no doubt mean.

You mey feel et liberty to call on me if there is anything you think I might be able to do in assisting and compiling important information concerning the history of this country.

W. C. Stephens.

Witches Were Weighed

As there were no state laws for such cases, women accused of witchcraftery in early Ohio were tried by weighing them against the Bible, regardless of how plump she might be. If she was guilty, the Good Book would outweigh her, and if not, the Scriptures would descend.

The Liberal Digest

SWEEDEN IS LAND OF GOOD FOOD; GOOD CO-OPERATIVES AND GOOD GOVERNMENT

America has only recently begun to discover Scandinavia, homeland of the discoverers of America.

The more recent examiners of the northern countries have been surprised to find that many features of the new deal are cards long held in the hands of Danes, Norwegians and Swedes.

Take the Swedes, for instance. A lady who often sails away some place and returns to write a book about it, recently did take the Swedes and their Sweden for her subject and quite plainly had a good time making their acquaintance. She is Agnes Rothery and her book is, Sweden, the Land and the People.

In it there is evidence to show that such phases of the new deal as managed currency, a square deal for the consumer, decentralization of industry, disarmament and government subsidy of the handicrafts and arts are all more or less successfully accomplished facts in Sweden.

She writes: "The great industries have been established at such intervals thruout the countryside that it is possible for every worker to own or rent a seperate cottage in which he may live, not only decently but comfortably.

"Typical Town"

"Domarfvet is a typical town of 10,000 people, all of whom are employed at the iron works. In it one sees the men riding to and from work on bicycles, the women scrubbing their already polished floors or the tiled walls of their electrified kitchens, the trimly dressed children they are taught their three R's, and a trade as well, and are given a hot lunch free for good measure. Here, and this is true of the industrial towns thruout the entire country, conditions prevail that seem as nearly ideal as human beings can make them."

High up north in Lapland, in the land of the mighnightsun, she came upon the modern town of Kiruna, home of the "1,800 best paid workmen in Europe." It is a mining town. The miners are well educated and self-reliant. They ride to work in automobiles or on bicyles, but they can ride free on the tram if they wish. The miner dresses for work only when he reaches the shower rooms at the mine. He takes a bath daily before he goes home and appears neat and clean on the street. Copper kettles and embroidered towels hang on the walls of their kitchens Their homes are as spotless and tastefully decorated as those of city families.

"Miner's Paradise"

A miner from a typical Illinois or Pennsylvania mining town would think that he had died and reached the perfect miner's paradise. In the middle of the morning and again in the afternoon he would see his Swedish brothers knock off work to down a bottle of beer or sip a cup of tea while munching a herring sandwich or a bit of goat's milk cheese.

In Sweden and Denmark there are laws forbidding chain stores, that is, privately owned ones. But there are in Sweden no less than 37,000 shops and restaurants controlled by a single organization. Its methods and outward characteristics are almost indentical with those of American chain store systems. Like them it controls many of the factories that supplies its stores with goods. Like them it is a profitable and growing industry.

But unlike the America chains which are owned and controlled by a handful of individuals to whom goes most of the profits, the Swedish Ko-operativa is owned by the consumers of Sweden and its profits are distributed not among the operators but among the customers of the stores. The Ko-operativa is still in vigorous growth. It is now wholesaler and producer for 786 affiliate societies with a membership of 512,986 families, including some of the royal families.

Boycotting Fails.

Only five kronen, or about $1.50 is needed to join the Ko-operativa, though 10 shares at 10 kronen each are needed for full profit sharing membership. The stores have a standard practice of selling all articles exactly 8 per cent cheaper than they can be brought elsewhere. That does not sound impressive to American ears, but in Sweden where there are sales only once a year and retail prices are uniform in all stores an 8 per cent discount is significant.

Unlike American chain stores the consumer owned Swedish chains delivers goods and maintains charge accounts. It pays its employes not less, but more than other concerns. Non-members are also accorded the 8 per cent discount, but do not share in the profits.

In 1908 the associated margarine manufacturers tried to break the Ko-operativa by boycotting. The Ko-operativa at once built its own margarine factory and turned out 2,000,000 pounds the first year. By 1933 its factories were producing 28,000,000 pounds and it had long ago forced the trust to reduce its price to a reasonable figure. When the flour manufactures refused to take the Ko-operativa's warning that flour was priced too high, the consumers' chain went into the flour business. In the same manner it broke the monopoly of the Electric Light Bulb Manufacturers' association which sits at Geneva and dietates world prices on bulbs. The Ko-operativa said that 1 kronen 35 ora was too much for an electric bulb; built its own plant for making them and brought the price down to 85 ora. It went into the rubber boot industry and reduced the price of boots, an important item in moist Sweden, exactly 50 percent, much to the chaprin of American rubber companies.

Strict Code.

The Ko-operativa adheres to a strict code of ethics. If any trust is charging excessively for its products warning is given that they must come dows. If the warning is not heeded, up goes a new Ko-operativa factory. And today this consumer owned organization controls 10 per cent of all Swedish industry and has enjoyed a steady growth throughout the depression. But industries which maintain reasonable prices are not molested.

Naturally it has its enemies. Tha private owners fight it as a menace to unchecked profits. Politicians fear it as a potential political power. But the organization has the approval and confidence of the Swedish people and has gone a long way toward gaining a fair deal for the consumer.

Minute Sermons

By Dr. Crawford Grays

With progressive light, understanding and rational changing in ideas ad ideals it is but reasonable that there should be a change of emphasis in religious teaching. The national isms, traditions, old theologies and creeds back of our present tragic church situation should be displaced with a new emphasis relative to internationalism, modern revelation of science and industry end a Christian ettaitude of living.

Any change from our present religious system, which is a relic rather than a utitity in the teaching and practice of Christianity would be at least basically sound for so called Christian churches to adopt.

WEEKLY WASHINGTON LETTER

BY
Congressman Ernest Lundeen

Paying Off Bank Losses

A fierce battle for federal funds to pay off the losses of bank depositors has been raging for several weeks with varying success. At this writing, it seems as though the Administration has the upperhand, refusing to pay these bank losses. Several petitions have been filed on the Speaker's desk, and there has been much strategy of floor management to prevent a direct vote.

Uncle Sam Finances Big Business

Recently, $100,000,000 was turned over to the Pennsylvania Railway to electrify the road. This will serve as a sample of large appropriations made to stimulate great business organizations in the hope that industry will revive and take up unemployment. This particular Pennsylvania Railroad appropriation is being used for electrification of lines from New York to Washington.

Air Service

Plans are being formulated and large appropriations being made to place America first in the race for air supremacy. The three leading nations in the air race are the Soviet Union, France and Germany, followed by Britain and Italy, with the United States in the lead before another year has passed.

In 1919, Ernest Lundeen introduced a Department of the Air Service Bill, providing for a Cabinet Secretary of that service with an entire staff. General William Mitchell, famous war commander, heartily endorsed this bill in a letter to Congressman Lundeen way back in 1919. The army flier was strong for some such method of harmonizing peace and war service in the air.

Con. Lindberg Comes to His Own

It is well known that Congressman Charles A. Lindberg was viciously and cruelly persecuted because of his position against America entering the World War; and it is well known that the 1918 campaign was conducted in an unfair, red-baiting, hysterical manner. The highest officials in the state encouraged and instructed sheriffs, constables and others to engage in the most outrageous lawlessness.

Congressman Lindberg wrote a book at that time, "Why Your Country is at War and What Happens to Your Country After the War." This book is now being republished in the Washington newspapers, a full page being devoted to each chapter

When I Have Time

When I have time, so many things I'll do
Too make life happier and more fair
For those whose lives are crowded now with care:
I'll help to lift them from low despair.
When I have time.

When I have time, the friend I love so well
Shall know no more these weary, toiling days:
I'll lead her feet in pleasant paths always,
And cheer her heart with words of praise,
When I have time.

Now is the time! Ah, friend! no longer wait
To scatter loving smiles and words of cheer
To those around whose lives are now so dear,
They may not meet you in the coming year---
Now is the time.

"Pick flowers as the engine puffs," may be the advertisement of the only railway running over the steep Rimutakas mountains in North Island, New Zealand. Three engines are necessary to pull a train up the hill, their cogs fitting into a ratched rail. The greatest speed they can make is three miles an hour. When the climb begins the passengers get out and walk, only too glad to stretch their legs among the flowers growing along the slope. At the top of the hill all three engines whistle vigorously to call the passengers back to their cars. When the train reaches Wellington the travelers present foxgloves to friends and relatives to prove they have climbed Rimutakas beside the train.

First Double Shotguns

The first successful double shotguns were built with the barrels over and under, and not side by side, and were invented about 1616 by one Guilliano Bossi of Rome. In 1784 double shotguns were described as a novelty.

CONDEMNATION PROCEEDINGS

STATE OF MINNESOTA
COUNTY OF PENNINGTON,
IN DISTRICT COURT
Fourteenth Judicial District

State of Minnesota, by Harry H. Peterson, its Attorney General, Petitioner, vs.

F. H. Gambell, Jacob N. Olson, The County of Pennington, Gertrude Holstein, Mel Johnson, Ronald J McDonald, James Meehan, Jr. City of Thief River Falls a municipal Corporation; Thief River Falls Lumber Company a corporation; Wiley Tindolph, Thomas Milson, Tilda Swanson, Elmer Hultin, Joel Hultin, Olga Thompson, Oscar Hultin, Alma Goodwin, Ellen Hultin, Harry Hultin, Leroy Hultin, Hazel Hultin, and Unknown heirs of Carl Hultin, Deceased; also all other persons unknown claiming any right, title estate, interest or lien in the real estate described in the petition herein,

Respondents.

IN THE MATTER OF THE CONDEMNATION OF CERTAIN LANDS FOR TRUNK HIGHWAY PURPOSES.

NOTICE

To the Respondents above named:

You and each of you are hereby notified that the above named petitioner will, on the 24th day of May, 1934, at 1:30 o'clock P. M. of said day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, present to the court above named, at chambers in the court house, at Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota, a petition in the above entitled proceeding for the condemnation of certain lands for trunk highway purposes, which said petition is now on file in the office of the clerk of the said court.

The objects of said petition are to have the lands hereinafter described, including all buildings thereon, condemned and taken by the petitioner for right of way for the laying out, constructing, improving and maintaining thereon of a trunk highway, the same being a part of Trunk Highway Number 73, formerly known as Trunk Highway Number 174; and to have the court determine and adjudge that the use for which such lands are sought to be acquired is a public use, and that said taking is authorized by law, and that said petitioner obtain the right to construct and maintain temporary snow fences upon the tracts and parcels of land herein described and the lands adjacent thereto as provided by law, and to have the court appoint commissioners to ascertain and report the amount of damages that will be sustained by the several owners and the persons interested on account of such taking, and to have an order of the court herein pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided; and you and each of you are entitled to and may appear before said court at said time and place and offer evidence relating thereto and shew cause if any, why said petition should not be granted.

The lands described and proposed to be so taken are situate in Pennington County, Minnesota, and are described as follows and the names of all persons appearing of record or known to your petitioner to be the owners of said lands or interested therein, including all whom your petitioner has been able by investigation and inquiry to discover, together with the nature of the ownership of each as nearly as can be ascertained, are as follows:

POWER EQUIPMENT PROBLEM PROBE BY CITY COUNCIL TUES

the added fact that many users of power who are still operating on DC current are unable at this time to purchase new motors, that the buying of alternators for the engines be dispensed with and also buying of new motors be postponed for two or three years since it will be necessary to produce the old DC current for some time to come to supply the demand for this type of "juice." He recommended that the rate be raised on . C c. rent to take care of the loss sustained in its production and that the motor-generator set now in the old power house at the dam be moved up to the Bush-Sulzer station to avoid transmitting the DC from this station to the power house at the city. This will elliminate a large share of the loss he said. Mr. Viebahn also sugested that the purchase of additional white way posts be deferred until later and that the department use its available funds for constructing permanent AC lines where they are necessary. It will require about two miles of this type of construction this summer at an estimated cost of $1,000 per mile, he stated.

Alderman Mc[illegible] the council for having paid for the auditorium out of the light plant earnings and thus leaving the department short of funds for modernizing purposes. He suggested that the council should set up a definite program of construction and improvement of the light and power facilities. "We have promised the people that we would. Now let's do it," he said, "We'll raise the money somehow." No action was taken on his suggestion. The city attorney was instrunted to prepare a resolution for presentation at the next meeting covering PWA application to provide funds for the purchase of a new pump for the pumping station and for construction purposes.

The scheduled hearing on the suspension of the beer license of the Sandeen Night Club was not held due to the failure of the proprietor to appear.

County Engineers Will Meet at Baudette Apr. 17

H. I. Frisbie, District Supervising Engineer, ERA., announced this week that the next meeting of the county engineers of this district will be held at Baudette on May 17. These meetings are very beneficial to the engineers, Mr. Frisbie says as it gives them a opportunity to discuss the common problems. The coming meeting will be held at Baudette in order to give the engineers an opportunity to inspect and discuss the feasibility of the proposed international bridge at that place Mr. Frisbie stated.

A nationwide home building and modernization program is to be the next move of the government and may get under was within the next few months, Mr. Frisbie stated.

Mr. Frisbie wishes to emphasize the fact that all project applications must be made thru the county engineeers of each county. Government al subdivisions desirous of promoting worthy projects in their locality should consult their county engineers as to its advisibility, feasibility and necessity.

McALLISTER HELD ON CHARGE OF MANSLAUGHTER

Rush McAllister, proprietor and until a short time ago manager of the Evelyn hotel was placed under arrest at Breckenridge yesterday by sheriff O. H. Ilhe and brought to this city to face charges of assault and second degree manslaughter as a result of the death of his wife here on March 18.

A preliminary hearing was held this afternoon at the municipal court and he was bound over to the District court. Later in the afternoon he was taken to Warren and Judge Brattland set the bail at $5,000 which was furnished by a brother and the father of the accused, whereupon he was released.

A corner's jury investigating the death of Mrs. McAllister decided that she came to her death as a result of a blood clot at the base of the brain which in turn had been caused by a blow over the temple.

A Grand Jury will be called to investigate the charges just prior to the October term of the District court. County Attorney Lundgren stated this evening.

Pitch Darkness at 5 O'clock Here Tues.

RAIN

Black rain clouds and a dust storm turned the afternoon into midnight here at 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. A severe dust storm raged all afternoon and towards the evening managed to blow up a rain which drizzled off and on all night.

Only about half an inch fell in this city but Crookston reports a precipitation of 1.04; Detroit Lakes, .77 of an inch; Moorhead, .52 of an inch and Argyle .32 of an inch. Bemidji reported one inch. The rainfall was quite general over Northern Minnesota and part of North Dakota and Montana.

In Memoriam

Members of the Forum staff, past and present, are mourning the passing of a former editor Arnie Solem, from the ranks of single and intelligent men. A special communication from Dreng Bjornaraa, state director of the National Reemployment Service at St. Paul states that the cause of the passing was Isabelle Gillilland, daughter of Mrs. B. Gillilland of Minneapolis and Washington, D. C. Last Rites were conducted at the Hennepin Methodist church, Minneapolis, the Reverend Richard C. Raines officiating. Temporary interment will be made in northern Wisconsin following which, Mrs. Solem will bring the body to 478 Marshall Ave., St. Paul.

Mr. Solem leaves a host of friends who sadly recall the free and happy manner of his former existence. As Forum editor he lifted a good stein of beer, and talked and wrote intelligently. His view of life was sane and well-balanced; there was no hint of coming tragedy until just before the end. Friends who visited with him lately in the Cities state that there was a far gone, expectant look in his eyes and that his policies were not as sound as those of former days. But they all pray that he may enjoy the heavenly bliss.

COUNCIL AGREES TO VACATE BLOCK ON MARKLEY AVE.

Block Between Schumeman and Hughes Streets to be Playground

A resolution vacating the block on Markley avenue south between Schuneman street and Hughes street for school playground purposes was passed by the council following a short hearing Tuesday evening. Only two property owners appeared in regard to the proposed resolution. E. E. Kelly appeared and spoke against vacating the avenue on the ground that it would cause a decrease in the value of the properties in the adjoining block. Haakon Grondahl spoke in favor of the proposition insisting that there would be no depreciation in property values. After a short discussion the resolution was passed. The same request was made by the school board two years ago from the council then in office, following the acquisition of the lots on the west side of Markley, across from the Knox school for playground purposes. The other council however turned the request down.

Upon recommendation of the Park Board the council decided that the city shall acquire the few lots still held in private hands that lie between the property owned by Mrs. Della Zeh and the highway where it enters the city at the end of Riverside avenue. The lots will be added to the park system of the city. The city attorney was instructed to prepare condemnation proceedings.

A report of the expenditures of the NRS office was submitted by Don Snyder, district manager of the NRS and a resolution was passed to be sent to the state planning board requesting that Thief River Falls shall be classified as urban and handled under the urban plan of emergency relief rather than under the rural rehabilitation plan. Under rulings of the board cities of less than 5,000 inhabitants are to be classed as rural and handled under the rural set-up. The resolution calls attention to the fact that the inhabitants which actually derive their livelihood in the city is in fact over 5,000 inasmuch as the city limits cuts a large share of the population, into the Township of North.

The park board recommended the appointment of Olof Ryan as caretaker of the city's parks at a salary of $70 per month and the appointment was made.

Permit was issued to O. M. Bishop to make certain remodeling at an estimated cost of $150 and permit was also approved permiting the Torreson Oil company to erect two 12,000 gallon tanks on its property at Sixth street and the G. N. right-of-way.

Resolution was passed authorizing payment of $648 to the National School Equipment company for seats for the auditorium and the accumulated bills of the month were approved and ordered paid.

Recommendations made by the tax committee reducing taxes on several instances were approved. A resolution was also passed requesting the PWA administration approve a part of an application formerly made for grant for purposes of modernizing the light and power plant. The new request embodies only the purchase of a 1,000 GPH pump, for the water works and a recording KWH meter for the power plant.

The city engineer was instructed to proceed with the moving of the motor-generator set from the power house at the dam to the Second street power house and also to proceed with the building of permanent AC lines where such are most needed.

Garden Produce Will Be Traded For Other Goods in Fed. Relief

Community and individual gardening and wood cutting will be stressed this season by the Federal Relief department according to Mr. Olson, local relief officer. Lots of potatoes will be planted Mr. Olson states. A system of exchange will be arranged whereby this community can exchange surplus products for other goods and the surplus then shipped to other counties where a shortage may occur by reason of drought. Individuals in need of relief who have raised a surplus of some garden products will be enabled to make an exchange also, Mr. Olson stated and uniform prices will be set up by the Federal Relief Administration to facilitate such exchange.

An effort will also be made to get as much wood cut this summer as possible to help keep the home fire burning next winter.

Mr. Olson announces that a new investigator has been added to his office this week in the person of Miss Bena Johnson, who will work in this county assisting Miss Ironsides. New office hours as follows are announced:

The local office will be open from 8 to 12 A. M. and from 1 to 3 P. M., except Saturday when the hours will be from 9 to 12 A. M. Relief orders will be given out Monday, Wednesday and Friday only.

St. Hilaire office hours will be from 1 to 2 on Tuesdays; Highlauding, 10 to 12 A. M., Thursdays and Goodridge from 1 to 3 P. M., on Thursdays.

Aalbu will speak on "What is a Cooperative Commonwealth?"

There will be accordian solos, and other musical selections presented. Other features are being arranged to make it a full and interesting evening. The public is cordially invited to attend.

State Bd. of Health Recommends City to Build Sewage Plant

A communication from the State Board of Health was received by the city authorities this week and presented to the council Tuesday evening citing the unsanitary conditions of the city's sewer system and the contamination of the river. The board recommended that the city should immediately take steps to remedy the situation. The communication was accompanied by photographs showing scenes along the river below the dam and pointed out that the sewage by far exceeds the water volume of the river at that point.

It was recommended that sewage disposal plant should be installed along the river below the city parks. Surface drainage and storm water should not be carried away in the sewage sytsem the recommendations stated.

Forum Want Ad Brings Response From Penasse

Art Hamilton of the Hamilton News Stand received a letter from Geo. Arnold of Penasse this week in response to his ad carried in the Forum wants column. "I replied that I would be up to see him." Art says. When we took him to the map and showed him that Penasse is the farthest north postoffice in the United States located on the northernmost corner of the Northwest Angle and that to get there he would have to cross a goodly part of Canada or else cross Lake of the Woods by airplane or steamer, Art decided he would wait until the fishing is good and then combine business with pleasure.

PTA Holds Last Meet Of School Year Mon.

The last meeting of the school year was held by the local Parent-Teachers Association Monday evening in the Lincoln high school assembly.

Mr. Arnold Gloor, Superintendent of schools, Crookston, Minn., gave an interesting discussion of the topic, "The Child's Community." He emphasized the duties of the parents and communities toward the children.

The assembly singing was led by V. C. Noper, assisted by Mrs. Noper at the piano. Miss Erma Springen, Music Supervisor, presented the Junior High School Mixed Chorus singing "Night Sinks on the Waye" by Smart. Omer Sundrud, a local high school student, played accordion solos which were very much enjoyed.

Miss Eunice Lindgren, School Nurse, discussed the Summer Round-Up work and suggested that this project be worked out again this year. The Association voted unanimously to sponsor this project.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. B. O. Norby; First Vice President, Mr. C. W. Pope; Second vice president, Mrs. Chas. Hellquist; Secretary, Miss Ragna Steenerson; Treasurer, Mrs. Fred Protz.

Lunch was served at the close of the meeting by the teachers of the Central and Knox schools.

Farm Bureau Will Hold Meeting in the City May 18, to Discuss Taxation and Legislation

A discussion of several new legislative proposals will be made at the spring conference of local farm leaders to be held under the auspices of the Minesota Farm Bureau in this city on Friday, May 18.

Study will be made of the gross turnover tax, that is receiving some public attention, particularly in the southern part of the state. Sentiment will be sounded as to the farmers' attitude on a state police system, in response to a growing demand in farm circles that the highway patrol be given full police powers, with authority over farm depradators. A third proposal will deal with the subject of a state-wide trespass law, as a check against the growing inroads of trespassing hunters.

Eleven other subjects of interest to farmers, included in the Farm Bureau's biennial legislative questionnaire, also will come up for discussion, as will a number of points not related to lawmaking.

County and township Farm Bureau officers, county agents and home demonstration agents will attend, as will representatives of the national and state Farm Bureaus. Mrs. Chas. Sewell, home and community chairman of the American Farm Bureau, will discuss recent activities of the A. F. B. F., and receive requests for action by the national organization on maters desired by the membership. J. S. Jones, secretary of the state organization, will direct a discussion on legislative and general matters; A. G. Mereness, director of organization, will help with local membership problems and Mrs. E. V. Ripley, state home and community chairman, will talk on women's activities.

NINTH DISTRICT VETERANS HEADS TO MEET MAY 16

Veterans' Bureau Official Will Explain New Veteran Legislation

A meeting of commanders, unit presidents, service and child welfare officers and other interested members of veterans' organizations thruout the ninth district will meet at the Veterans' Memorial room in the city Auditorium on Wednesday, May 16, to attend a discussion of veterans' problems.

Wm. T. Kroll of the Soldiers Welfare and an officer of the Veterans Bureau will conduct the meeting which is called for the purpose of acquainting the post officials with the new veterans' law and bureau rulings. Special compensation and disability cases will be discussed in the afternoon starting at 2:00 P. M., and explanation of the new legislation will be handled in the evening.

It is important that all post officials of this district avail themselves of this opportunity to become acquainted with the new legislation, the announcement states, in order that they may serve their posts to the best possible advantage.

One or more representatives from each unit in the entire district is expected to attend according to Commander Roy Ericson, of the Elmer J. Ecklund Post of this city.

The discussion and explanation will cover the following subjects:

1. Discussion of new law, its provisions, regulations and procedure.
2. Discussion of soldier welfare relief.
3. Discussion of soldiers home administration.
4. Discussion of necessity of continuing the securing of evidence.
5. Questions and answers.

The St. Olaf Choir was entertained for dinner last Sunday by Miss Agnes Tanberg, T. Reep, Robert Lund, Dr. O. F. Mellby and Dr. H. J. Rice at the home of Dr. Rice.

36 CANDIDATES SEEK OFFICE IN COUNTY PRIMARY

Primary Battle Assured as More File For Legislative Offices

36 candidates seek county offices in Pennington county in the forthcoming elections.

The office of Superintendent of schools leads the list with ten candidates seeking the position and the office of sheriff comes second with seven aspirants. There will be no fight for Register of Deeds, Fred D. Lorentson, incumbent having only one opponent, Mrs. Albert Brink of St. Hilaire. County Attorney Paul A. Lundgren has only one opponent, that being H. O. Berve, thus entailing no primary battle. Bert Umland for surveyor, Thora Nelson for court commissioner and Dr. A. M. Smith for coroner are unopposed. There will be no primary on Commissioner from second district comprising the first and second wards of the city. Harry W. Kinghorn, commissioner for the past two years and present chairman of the board is not seeking reelection and he and his friends are backing Edward Odelien. Alfred Bredegou is the other candidate for the office.

In the fourth district where the present commissioner seeks the office of sheriff there are three candidates entered in the race; W. K. Hoefer, O. C. Paulson and W. H. Mulry.

The candidates for Superintendent of schools are: A. C. Matheson, incumbent. Judith Lockrem, Emma T. Satre, Woodrow Wilson, Elroy Johnson, Albert Poppenhagen, Hattie Torgerson, Henry Fjeld, Edna Hovie and T. T. Tollefson.

Candidates for sheriff are: Ole Ihle incumbent, Bj. Bjornaraa, Arthur Rambeck, Gilbert Reiersgaard, John Gonnering, F. C. Dablow and Andrew Ness.

Three seek the position of treasurer, John Gullingsrud, incumbent, A R. Johnsrud and Bert W. Umland Three also seek the auditorship: Harry L. Fowler, incumbent, T. P. Anderson, a former auditor and Geo Gunderson.

For the legislature there are candidates for the Senate; Paul A. Harris of Thief River Falls, endorsed by the FarmerLabor district convention; L. A. Nelson of Smiley township and E. L. Tungseth, of Thief River Falls. Five seek seats in the lower house where there is two to be elected. They are W. E. Day of Bagley and J. O. Melby of Oklee endorsed by the Farmer-Labor convention and Marius Waldal of Plummer, Ed. Badmann of Bagley, and G. P. Jones also of Bagley.

$10,619.78 IN ROAD WORK LET BY BOARD WED.

Local Firm Awarded Gravelling Job. More Bids Will Be Called

Construction and gravelling of county roads to the tune of $10,619.78 was let by the county board in session this week.

Gravelling of four miles on the east end of S. A. number 1; one mile on C. A. number 21 in Hickory; and three miles S. A. number 9 in Black River township at a total cost of $2,396 was let to H. P. Lund and Sons of this city. This was some over $250 higher than the lowest bid but given to the local firm on condition that they are to use local labor.

The construction jobs were let to Hagenson and Traumley of McIntosh at a total cost of $8,223.78. The jobs include three projects as follows eight miles east from Highlauding on C. A. number 24; three miles east of Erie on C. A. number 2; one and one-half miles in North township extending north from the city on C. A. 13.

An appropriation of $500 was voted to the library and $60 was appropriated to the American Legion for decoration of the graves of veterans in the county.

Bids will be called on Graveling C. A. number 10 in Black River township and grading C. A. 23 in Kratka.

The board voted to deed six lots of the old foundry block to the city for purposes of constructing tool and equipment sheds.

A. C. Townley Files For Congress in Spite of Pledge to Convention

Carrying out his threats to file for Congress in spite of the fact that he pledged himself to support Buckler at the Erskine convention, A. C. Townley filed yesterday with Secretary of State Mike Holm. In filing, Mr. Townley stated that the majority of the counties represented at the Erskine convention have repudiated the convention and requested that he file, the daily papers report.

Townley supporters have been active thruout the entire district requesting that the county committees repudiate the Erskine convention. While individual Farmer-Laborites have in several instances made such repudiation none of the county organizations except those in Becker and Otter Tail counties which were pledged to him at the convention have taken official action on the request.

Pennington, Marshall, Roseau, Clearwater, Beltrami, Polk, Clay and Red Lake counties have stood pat on the convention and refused to release him from his pledge, and Norman county which once repudiated the convention rescinded later. Leading Farmer-Lagorites thruout the Ninth District declare themselves disgusted with Mr. Townley's tactics and the strenous efforts being put forth by his supporters to put him over in spite of the convention's action and many declare that they will not support him if he should succeed in getting the nomination in the primary

E. M. Evans of Middle River visited in the city Wednesday evening.

Harold Hagen and Mr. Grisvold of Crookston were in the city on business Wednesday.

Farmers May Plant Contracted Acreage to Forage Crops to Guard Against Drouth Danger

A letter received today from Congressman Harold Knutson states that he has secured permission from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration for the farmers in drought areas to plant the acreage under the curtailment of production plan to forage crops with the understanding that if a normal crop results the contracted acreage will be plowed under, and that otherwise they may be used for feed.

Mr. Knutson's letter follows:

Dear Editor:

This office has been working for the past several weeks to secure permission from the Agricultural Ajustment Administration to plant the acreage contracted by the Government in the drouth area to forage crops with the understanding that if we have a normal year and normal crops this fall the contracted acreage will be ploughed under, otherwise they may be used for feed.

I am very happy to inform you that the following crops may be planted for ploughing under.

Soybeans, cow peas, field peas, vetch and sweet clover.

The following crops may be planted for pasturage and ploughing under:

red top, Timothy, red clover, alsika clover, alfalfa, broom grass and orchard grass.

I hope within the next day or two to secure permission for the planting of sudan grass and millet.

In view of the urgency of the feed situation in the drougth area may I ask that you be so good as to give this information the fullest possible publicity in your paper so that your farmer readers may take immediate steps to avail themselves of this privilege.

Yours very truly,
Harold Knutson.
Member of Congress.

INSULL BROUGHT BACK TO CHICAGO

Will Face Trial Over Collapse of Utilities—Bail Set at $200,000.

Chicago—Samuel Insull arrived here under guard to face trial for the collapse of his vast utilities empire. Bail was set at $200,000. Bench warrants for Insull's arrest were issued by U. S. District Judge Phillip L. Sullivan. They summon him to trial on the two charges which the federal government has lodged against him—that he was party to defrauding investors by mail in selling paper of Corporation Securites, Inc., and that he mishandled something like $100,000,000 of that company's funds, after it was hopelessly bankrupt with the intention of concealing the company's ragged financial condition.

The federal prosecutors were wary about revealing their plans, and Floyd Thompson, representing Samuel Insull, Jr., called at the federal building without much success in learning what the government's intentions were.

The first charge Insull must face is one of mail fraud, in it, he is charged with 17 other defendants—all of them in the city's financial blue book. The charge contains 25 counts, with a prison term of five years possible under each, along with a fine of $10,000 on each count.

The criminal charges against Insull are only part of the worries awaiting the fallen utilities idol. They charge him with mishandling a total of about $150,000,000, giving or taking a few million either way, and with bilking a half million investors. He owes a half million dollars on a note held by the federal government, has a $199,000 income tax case pending, and hundreds of creditors and investors are waiting a chance to seek restitution in civil suits.

While he has been gone, the lid has been taken off of his financial life, and charges that he juggled millions are on public records.

U. S. Drops One Gov. Langer Charge

Fargo—Federal Judge Andrew Miller overruled demurrers filed by attorneys for Governor William Langer and eight others indicted on charges of soliciting funds from federal employes for political purposes. At the same time he sustained a demurrer to a second indictment which charged the nine with conspiring to obstruct operation of an act of congress defrauding the government by soliciting funds sent to the state for relief purposes. The indictments grew out of allegations that federal relief workers had been forced to contribute to the support of The Leader, administration newspaper.

United States Will Solicit World Trade

Washington—The Roosevelt administration is reaching out to recapture the nation's foreign trade. In the 13 months of the New Deal the possibilities of achieving a true recovery from the depression through revival of foreign trade have been sadly neglected, it is now conceded. Not a single trade barrier has been broken down, Conservative democratic leaders are pressing insistently to the fore now, demanding immediate action on a foreign trade program.

Heat in Grain Belt Boosts Prices.

Chicago—Grain prices skyrocketed in the Minneapolis and Chicago grain pits as one of the most serious drouths in years spread havoc among crops throughout the nation's great farming regions. After traders learned that weather forecasts held scant hope for a break in the dry, withering weather, prices started upward on all grains.

Rabbit Fields Bass Hit, Gets Stewed

Roanoke Rapids, N. C.—Wham! went the ball from Jim Poyner's bat in a sandlot game. Up popped a rabbit in left field just in time to catch the ball on the chin. Poyner later reported the rabbit stew he had for dinner was very good.

Lake Erie at Lowest Level Since 1860

Cleveland—Lake Erie is at the lowest water level since the government began keeping records in 1860. The level recorded by the naval hydrograph office of 569.6 feet above sea level ties the all-time record established in 1902.

U. OF MINN. BOTANIST WINS HIGHEST HONORS

Elvin C. Stakman, who has an international reputation in the field of plant diseases, has been elected to membership in the National Academy of Sciences, the highest honor open to an American. Dr. Stakman is professor of plant pathology at University Farm. In the announcement of his election he was informed that "the academy wishes to express its high appreciation of your services to science." Dr. Stakmen received his advanced training at the University of Minnesota under Dean E. M. Freeman, who is head of the division of botany and plant pathology at University Farm. He was elected to the academy as a botanist. Relatively few members of agricultural faculties have been elected to membership.

SPREAD BETWEEN HOGS AND OTHER MEAT ANIMALS WIDEST IN U. S. HISTORY

"What's the matter with the hog market?" is a common question asked by hudreds of stockmen and truckers at South St. Paul yesterday, says the weekly market bulletin issued by the Central Cooperative Association at S. St. Paul. At no time in the history of the market has the price spead between top hogs and top grades of cattle and lambs been as wide as recently. Quotations on top weighty steers and the best fat lambs are from two and on-half times to three times as high as top hogs, lamb prices showing the greatest spread.
